Islanders I Have Met

By "Islander Abroad"

On Thursday evening of last week, I bade farewell to Winnipeg for the month of May, for a visit to Toronto, where I am the guest of folk from Inverness, Scotland.

When I got on the train at the C.P.R. Station, I found the porter busily engaged in making up the beds, so I stood in the entry of the carriage, looking out the window, until I could see daylight no longer. As I gazed over the vast stretch of flat prairie land I saw flooded acres, and little or no signs of spring apart from some har-bingers of the season flying about. Upon retiring, I did not see who would be my companions for the journey, as they had retired before I came back into the carriage. However the following morning I learned, and behold, there was a stoutish body in middle life, and a young son, which proved a care indeed. The mother had a cable set up—what for, I haven't yet learned—and it was there for the day. The laddie, who was train sick most of the journey, kept kicking me under the table, and the mother placed all her cigarette ashes on my seat and crowned it all, by spilling a bottle of gingerale over everything.

I tried to enter into conversation with the lady and all I could get in reply was, "I think Canada should join the States," or "Communism is terrible."

Across the aisle from us, sat two well travelled ladies, one from Scotland formerly, the other, a newcomer from England. The Scottish lady travelled much in the States and throughout Canada, and many stories of interest she related. The other lady, the newcomer, came out from England last year, to carry on her profession of nursing in America, but being unsatisfied with the American way of life with her fore-flushing of propaganda, is due to return to England in July.

Down the aisle from us, sat a little girl, with her mother, who had for her enjoyment a box of trinkets of various kinds. The girl, about every five minutes, had the misfortune of upsetting this box, sending marbles, etc., over the floor. Every time the box fell, the passengers would say, "There it goes again."

All day Friday it snowed, and through White River and Chaudiere, the trees were covered with branches hanging with the Christmas appearances. The trip by Lake Superior, though the weather was unpleasant, was quite the thing, scenic and beautiful. The different camps along the shores of the Lake were busy—much wood—logs—was in evidence for the Pulp and Paper Mills. One new camp was opened a couple of years ago and it is now well built up—on the shores of the Lake—with beautiful and well built homes constructed in a well planned town like appearance. This place is called Marathon.

On Saturday morning, I arrived in Toronto, greeted by a rain storm. This seems to be Toronto's way of greeting me, for every time I arrive in this beautiful city of Upper Canada, the clouds drop down their tears. In the afternoon, I wrote a letter to the folk in Winnipeg, mailed it and went for a short walk, visiting the usual most frequented places—"Woolworth's and Kresges."

On Monday, I went for a walk on Yonge St. to the city limits, two and a half miles distant, retraced my steps and went south on the same street, to Eaton's store on College, Bay and Yonge Sts. The whole journey covered, on foot was over eight miles.

Enroute south, I saw on Montgomery and Yonge Sts., corners, on the grounds of a sub-postal station, a monument. On it, I read, "Site of Montgomery's Tavern." Original headquarters of William Lyon Mackenzie, leader in the Upper Canada rebellion. Scene of brief skirmish on 7th Dec. 1837 resulting in defeat of insurgents by Loyal Militia commanded by Lieut. Col. James FitzGibbon.

This uprising an outcome of serious grievances against the Dominant Family Compact was an im-

A large number of people from York attended the semi-finals of the Drama Festival in Freetown Hall on Friday evening, the competition being between York Alpha Women's Institute and Graham's Road Women's Institute. The York play "From Five to Five Thirty", took the honours, and Mrs. William Crockett received a prize for the best acting.

Important factor in bringing about the legislative Union of Upper and Lower Canada in 1841, and the permanent establishment in Canada of responsible government, a principle then first extended to a British colony. Erected in 1925."

Further along on Yonge St., I saw the Alexander Muir Memorial gardens, and the Mt. Pleasant cemetery. This cemetery is one and a half miles long, intersected by Mt. Pleasant public highway, joined by a tunnel driveway underneath the highway. The cemetery is easily one quarter mile wide, and has in it something of the nature of a ravine. The driveways are paved and the cemetery is most beautifully cared for, containing trees, flowering shrubs and beds of flowers. Many men find full time employment there; and when I walked through part of the grounds, I saw men working, mowing grass, cleaning monuments, seeing to flowers, etc. Alongside the cemetery is a funeral parlour, a florist shop, and a tombstone dealer.

In the evening I was entertained to dinner at the home of another Highland family, in which there are three sons, one a teacher of Mathematics in a College near by, one a banker, and one in the R.C.M.P., Regina, Sask.

The teacher laddie, after dinner, had me out to see some of the interesting points about the city. He first took me to see the new Veterans' hospital, which is considered as the largest in Canada, containing many buildings—main hospital, convalescent homes, etc. This hospital is erected on a piece of property—originally a farm, donated or willed by a lady in memory of her husband to the City of Toronto, to be used as a natural park. Somehow, they got over the Clause of the will, and are using the whole park in connection with the hospital. The site is ideal for a hospital, and certainly is the choice for the purpose. It is at the edge of the city. My host, a contractor, worked on this hospital for over two years.

MOORE & McLEOD Limited

This hospital is not yet completed.

After seeing about and over the grounds of the new hospital, I found at the main entrance gate, a Red Cross Lodge, where visitors from a distance to see relatives, may find lodging and meals, on a stay-over.

Later, after taking a drive about the different sections of the city, I was taken to see what is considered, especially by the Torontonians, the largest University in the British Empire, the University of Toronto and affiliated colleges. (To be continued)
