Legends of P. E. Island

By Uncle Joe

THE BURIAL OF MARK SIMS

When Mark Sims shuffled off this mortal coil some four generations ago he left a wife and three small children in dire poverty. The coffin (home-made) was given a generous coat of lampblack to make it more pleasing to the eye of the mourners. A sled was used as a conveyance, the mourners and neighbors walking behind.

There was a small cemetery several miles to the west, but for some reason they decided to bury the remains twelve miles to the east, at a place called Big Woods, Prince Edward Island.

The route of travel took the party to where a primitive tavern welcomed all passers. Here the procession halted, and as the day was extremely cold all except the corpse decided that a good bracer was just what they needed.

Not long after the party had entered the inn, a storm of great violence broke out so that all decided to remain for the night. The horse was led to the shelter of a barn, and the casket was taken into the inn and laid on a couple of barrels that rested near the door.

The place was dark and dreary, and to put a little cheer into the scene the flowing bowl was passed around time and again.

What! would a little cheerfulness do any harm?

Well, they didn't think it could give offense to their dead neighbor. And if he were alive he certainly would be a man among them.

After some time conversation gave way to songs, every man of them giving a stanza without might or measure. The mourners cared not a whit for wind or weather. Even the remains of Mark Sims were for the time forgotten.

Suddenly one of the company piped up: "Let's have a dance!"

At these words everyone sprang to his feet except one fellow who did the giggling.

Outside the wind gambled and moaned among the pines, and great masses of drifting snow were hurled against the windows; but inside there was joy unspeakable. Indeed, the dance seemed to increase in violence with the gathering fury of the storm. To all appearances the boys had forgotten completely the funeral, their only desire at the moment being to seize time and mirth by the forelock.

But in their reckless hilarity somebody pushed against the barrels, and the shell containing the dead crashed onto the floor, parted and deposited the sleeping cadaver at their feet.

Instantly the pleasure ceased. They were all struck dumb with the exception of Patrick Ryan, who yelled:

"Boys, O boys, take a look at Sims! Badad, he's out for a dance."

This burst of barbarous witicism set them all to laughing. So they returned the remains to the coffin and bound it together with ropes.

Not till the following day had the storm abated enough to permit them to venture outside the inn, and now the road was next to impassable. Still, they had come to bury their neighbor, Mark Sims, and bury him they would, come what might.

Again the procession started down the road, but, finding the travelling too tough, they entered the woods, dug through the deep snow and planted the box with Sims' mortal remains where the beasts of the forest would not be likely to find it.

The following day the party reached their homes after a really notable funeral, the description of which gives the reader a glimpse into the pioneer days in the wilds of Prince Edward Island.

Asks Tolerance For Attitudes Of DP Arrivals

WINNIPEG, March 1.—(GP)—People who come to Canada from Europe have, by Canadian standards, strange customs and ideas; but Canadians impress the new arrivals the same way, says Mrs. Alexander Esson of Saskatoon.

Mrs. Esson, a member of the federal labor department's selection team which visited displaced persons' camps in Germany and Austria helping to choose girls for domestic service in Canada, spent 13 months in Europe, returning last autumn.

In an address to the Winnipeg Committee on Displaced Persons, she said the newcomers should be judged tolerantly. Ideals were different in European countries; moral and living standards were not like those of Canada.

"One often hears the criticism of DP girls smoking too much. One should have tolerance for that. If you are in Germany or Austria, you are struck with the way people keep chewing on morsels of black bread or when they can get the tobacco—with the way they smoke."

Hunger Pangs Last

"It relieves the pangs of hunger, which DPs do not get rid of for days after they get aboard ship."

Of the system of screening DPs, Mrs. Esson said it created one hard job—that of refusing some person who may have spent years in forced labor camps or have served the enemy against what to him was a worse enemy—Russia—and yet who now is branded with his war record with the Nazis.

Many Latvian and Estonian nationals, who had to flee from Soviet forces in their own country, have wounded or burned themselves as serious attempts to remove Nazi tattoo marks from their arms, Mrs. Esson said. To the Allies, they are enemy soldiers.

Many newcomers, asked for their impressions of Canada, have expressed surprise over the complaining attitude of Canadians in a land where they are free and have so much. Others can't understand why, with shops laden with meat and other foods, breakfast in many Canadian homes consists of porridge, toast and coffee.

Still others, Mrs. Esson said, have difficulty understanding Canadian shopping methods.

VALLEYFIELD Y. P. U.

The weekly meeting of the Valleyfield Y. P. U. was held in the schoolroom on Tuesday evening with Donald Nicholson leading the worship period. The meeting opened by singing "Breathe on me breath of God." The Scripture taken from John 6, was read by Edna MacKenzie, followed with prayer by Rev. A. C. Fraser, after which the hymn "What a friend we have in Jesus" was sung. The leader chose a topic from the Headlight in the "Churchman" — Are we equal to the task? Readings on the topic were given by Irene Bruce, Mrs. Gordon Buchanan, and Gordon MacPherson, showing that all ought not to become discouraged, even in the face of frustration. A helpful talk on the topic was given by Rev. Mr. Fraser, stating all should continue to do whatever good they can, and not be discouraged, keeping in mind our faith in the forces of righteousness and that God's word always abides. The worship period closed by singing, "Tell me the stories of Jesus." The President took charge of the business period. The minutes of the last meeting were read by the secretary and were approved. The roll call was responded to by twenty-two members each giving a verse of Scripture.

Acadia Debaters Win Last Tilt From U. N. B. Team

(Telegraph Journal)

WOLFVILLE, March 2.—Acadia debaters won up their year gaining a unanimous decision over a visiting team from the University of New Brunswick law school. Topic under discussion was "resolved, that labor unions should remain non-political if they are to serve the best interests of the labor and the community as a whole," with Acadia upholding the affirmative.

Acadia was represented by Noel MacNevin, Charlottetown, and Fred Fisher, Middleton, and U.N.B. by Gordon Garrigan, Sydney, and Vernon Copp, Saint John.

The Acadia debaters contended that labor's legitimate aims could be achieved without partisan political action, and that the nature of an unprejudiced government to safeguard the interests of the community. They also claimed that union political activity would hamper efforts to increase union membership so that unions would represent a majority of the labor force, instead of the present labor minority.

The U.N.B. representatives argued that labor had advanced beyond the point where all its objectives could be attained through collective bargaining, and that the nature of big business made it necessary for the unions to carry their activities into the political fields. Union objectives are no longer merely economic, they said.

Judges at the event were the Rev. J. MacLean, minister of the Wolfville United Church, and two lawyers, Victor Thorpe of Kentville and Harry How of Wolfville. Chairman was Dr. G. E. Levey.

"OYSTER-LEGGING" RESULTS IN FINES

LADYSMITH, B.C. March 1.—(CP)—Two Indians were convicted of "oyster bootlegging" and fined here in what is believed to be the first such conviction in the province.

Ray and Levi Gouldsmith were each fined $25 and court costs, or a month in jail. They were charged with stealing oysters from oyster beds operated by Walter Jones, near this Vancouver Island town.

The case was of special interest to oyster men because they report they have been losing oysters for a long time.

Mr. Jones, widely known culturist, has been in the business for 37 years.
