He Won Handily Saturday Afternoon By Six Lengths

Zev, Harry F. Sinclair's Three-year-old and International champion—He Proved Himself the Master of Papyrus Saturday Afternoon Out-Running the British Champion By Six Lengths. ## ZEV SCORES SMASHING AND DECISIVE VICTORY OVER PYPYRUS, ENGLISH INVADER

American Champion Got Away to Bad Start, But Overtook Rival Before Quarter Pole was Reached; and Thereafter Was Never Headed—Derby Winner Was Game To the Core—Thrilling Race Over Mile and Quarter—Donoghue Said His Mount Was Not "At Home in the Going"

(Canadian Press.)

BELMONT PARK, New York, Oct. 21.—Coming down the home stretch with a blinding, irresistible burst of speed, Zev the Ranoc was tables great son of the Finn-Miss Kearney, scored a smashing thoroughbred victory for United States Saturday by conquering Papyrus, the English Derby winner by a decisive margin of six lengths, over the mile and a half Belmont course.

With Zev's victory went eighty thousand dollars of a one hundred thousand dollar purse, and crown of the three-year-old champion of the world at stake for the first time in one of the most colorful spectacles turf history has ever known. Over a track which was soggy from several days' rain, Zev answered pre-race fears that he was not in the best of condition, by galloping to a convincing impressive victory over Papyrus.

After rather a bad start Zev overtook his rival before the first quarter pole had been reached and thereafter was never headed, despite the game and gallant efforts of the English horse.

Over the first mile and a quarter it was a thrilling race; Zev leading by practically a length, standing off challenges of Papyrus and apparently running well within himself. Then came the real test on the final quarter, and Zev met it brilliantly, while Papyrus was found wanting.

Straightening out his mount for a finishing drive, Earl Sande gave Zev his head and the colt responded with a terrific burst of speed; Papyrus fell behind rapidly and finally tumbled and "all out" under his withering race, for Zev galloped under the wire fully six lengths in the lead.

Zev, always noted as a "mud-horse," demonstrated he was at home in heavy ground, and tonight it was said that the story of Papyrus' defeat lay in part at least to the fact that the Derby winner seemed unable to run his best on a sloppy track.

"Papyrus was not at home in the going," declared Steve Donoghue, the great English jockey, who rode the "invader," and this opinion was confirmed by Basil Jarvis, the colt's trainer, but neither put this forward as an alibi for defeat.

The time of the race, 2:35 2/5 was not remarkable, but it was good in the face of existing track conditions.

British flags flapped in the breeze alongside of the American colors on the top of the club house and grandstand, the paddock and the infield, where thousands and thousands had gathered to stand and watch the race, was a mixture of British and American fans, and a part of the music in the stands was furnished by the English band from the S. S. Aquitania, on which Papyrus and his staff made the journey from England.

Including all the prominent sportsmen of New York, business and commercial leaders, professional men and ordinary fans, the race was almost as picturesque and as classy as the throngs that attend the "Big Three" football games.

Harry F. Sinclair, multi-millionaire, and owner of Zev, entertained a large party in his box; Harry Payne Whitney, whose stable rivals Sinclair in numbers and importance, was also the host for a party of the celebrities and other names prominent in "Who's Who" had choice seats in the stands.

August Belmont, who bred Tracery, the sire of Papyrus, and who suggested and arranged the race, sent was one of the most prominent officials in the stands. He also had a large party as his guests.

It is a matter of deepest regret to all connected with the international race that there was one important personage missing. It was Benjamin Irish, owner of the Derby winner, and a splendid type of English sportsman. Mr. Irish had hoped to come, but his health has not been of the best. His doctor had the last word and absolutely forbade the journey.

Much Younger than English Rival.

While he had not the world-wide fame of his rival in the saddle Saturday, Earl Sande, who rode Zev, is recognized as the premier rider in the United States. He is 13 years the junior of Donoghue, as he will not be 25 years of age until November 13. He was born at Groton, S.D., and learned the rudiments of horsemanship in the same school as Johnson, the Factors and other successful jockeys, his first mounts being on cow ponies on the ranges in the vicinity of his home.

Like other western lands, he took part in many impromptu races at home and at the local fairs—South Dakota has a circuit of fairs where horse racing is a great attraction—but it wasn't until the autumn of 1917 that he got a chance to become a real jockey. He joined the stable of the well-known western owner, Joe Goodman, and went to the fair grounds track at New Orleans. He finished second the first professional race he took part in and on January 22, 1918, won his first race on the horse Prince S.

Sande attracted the attention of horsemen from the first and wasn't long until he was getting a lot of engagements. Goodman transferred the lad's contract to Johnson and Kane and he was riding for them when H. G. Bedwell noticed him. Bedwell was at that time handling the big stable of Commander J. K. L. Ross of Canada.

It was the first time that Sande had had a chance in a stable which comprised such well known animals as Cudgel, Sir Barton, Billy Kelly, Constancy and others of that type and he soon earned the reputation of being the leading jockey in this country.

English Jockey an Idol.

Steven Donoghue, who had the mount on Papyrus in Saturday's race, is a popular idol in England, where everybody calls him "Our Steven." Unquestionably he is the best known rider in the world today. He is a great "mixer" and is certain to make a host of friends during his stay in the United States.

University Football Captains

Bob Fisher has a pretty tough task cut out for him at Harvard this fall. While the line of last year, with the exception of one position—Clark at centre—is intact, Fisher's back field is of unknown quality.

This is all very well, but a team as strong as its substitutes—and if a couple of the crimson's forward stars crack a leg, Fisher has a mighty poor bunch of second string men to jam into the breach.

With his first string men in the game the Harvard line is one of the strongest in the East.

Having lost Charley Buell and George Owen, the two outstanding backfield stars of his 1922 team, the Harvard coach faces a Herculean task in finding material to take their places.

Charley Hubbard will captain the eleven this season. He's a 200

FARRELL NAMES RECENT WORLD SERIES HEROES

Brilliant Fielding and Spectacular Hitting Were Scattered Throughout the Entire Series and Were Not Confined to Either Team.

By Henry L. Farrell.

(United Press Sports Editor.)

NEW YORK, Oct. 22.—Mechanical play in the world's series of 1923 between the Yankees and the Giants was the most perfect ever staged over a stretch of six games in the opinion of veteran managers and baseball men.

Brilliant fielding and spectacular hitting were scattered throughout the entire series and were not confined to either team, although because it brought them victory, the work of the Yankees might have been considered more important and more spectacular.

With the fine fielding on all sides consistent hitting and good pitching shared by several stars, it was impossible to pick out the big outstanding hero of the series.

The following nominations as heroes, certainly could be made, however:

Joe Dugan, Frank Frisch; Erin Ward, Babe Ruth, Joe Bush, Heinie Groh, Bob Meusel, Casey Stengel.

Joe Dugan leads the list. No third baseman, including the brilliant Groh, ever gave the exhibition of mechanical perfection in a world's series that was put forth by the former Holy Cross star.

Dugan's playing was spectacular. His recoveries were consistently sensational and his throws were astounding. His hitting was hard and most timely.

For several years Dugan was on the threshold of stardom, but he stepped over this year with room to spare.

Dugan is beyond doubt the greatest third baseman of his day.

Frank Frisch gave perhaps as great an exhibition of second base play as any that has ever been seen in a world's series. Eddie Collins, in his prime, might have been just as good, but he was never better.

Frisch would have been the big hero of the world's series if the Giants had won the sixth game, but they didn't, and the brilliance of the former Fordham star was overshadowed by the work of the Yankees in that never-to-be-forgotten eighth inning of the last game.

Frisch had cut off two runs with the most sensational bits of fielding. He had singled twice and tripled once in three trips to the plate and scored two runs. The garments of the hero premier were laid out ready for him when the Yankees burst forth, and Frisch was forgotten.

Just a trifle behind Frisch was Erin Ward, the great little second baseman of the Yankees, who seems surely destined to win the place of one of the "greatest of them all." Ward did not shine as spectacularly as did Frisch, simply because he did not get the spectacular chances to shine that came the way of the Giant second baseman.

Ward was the leading batter of the regular players who worked all through the series. His fielding was perfect and his spirit is always admirable. He tried hard all the time and is a great "comer from behind," like Frisch and Young of the Giants.

Dugan is much more graceful

Jimmy Johnson, Dundee's manager announced that the featherweight champion had been matched for a brawl with Harry Mason, English lightweight boss, in London some time in January. It also is not unlikely that Dundee will hop over to France after this contest to give Eugene Criqui, gallant polli, a shot at the featherweight title which Dundee took from him at the Polo Grounds last summer. While across the pond Dundee also will visit Italy, the land of his birth. He plans to sail

American Horse Won Handsome Gold Trophy

NEW YORK, Oct. 21.—The international challenge cup, which will be at stake in the $100,000 international race at Belmont Park, is one of the handsomest trophies ever offered for thoroughbred competition. The cup is of solid gold, stands about 12 inches high and weighs about 100 ounces. It is a hand-made copy of a cup fashioned in 1707, during the reign of Queen Anne, a period when racing was most popular and had royal support.

An eagle with outstretched wings, every feather clearly etched, ornaments the top of the trophy which also bears on one side the arms of the United States. The other side is reserved for a list of winners.

Donated by the Jockey Club, the cup is designed for perpetual competition. The Jockey Club will represent the United States in this as well as future competitions, either as defender or challenger.
