Fine Trophies For Fox Show

One of the finest attractions of the Silver Fox Show held in Charlottetown has been the magnificent array of Trophies donated by various organizations and business firms for Championships, and other features included in the Prize List of this wonderful Exhibition.

These Trophies beautifully designed, and highly valuable, have developed a commendable interest and stimulation among exhibitors, breeders and spectators, and indicate final competitive supremacy at each show in the classes to which they have been particularly assigned.

A very great measure of thanks is due the donors. This type of co-operation and support has gone a long way in making this Great Fox Classic still more impressive and intensely interesting, and deep appreciation has been generally expressed in connection with the generous encouragement given the Show in this way.

This year's array of Trophies will be even larger and more beautiful than that on display on previous occasions, and it is proposed to make a suitable window display in the store of Holman's Ltd., Charlottetown previous to and after the Fox Show to be held on November 7th, 8th and 9th.

Comparative Prices Show Higher Standard in Canada

In dealing with comparative prices of farm products in Canada and the United States, Dr. J. F. Booth, Commissioner, Agricultural Economics, Dominion Department of Agriculture, says with reference to hogs:

In all but three of the past twelve years, 1920 to 1931 inclusive, the average price of hogs at Winnipeg has been higher than the price at Chicago. It should be noted in this comparison that Canadian production is predominately of the bacon breed of hogs while the United States' output is mainly of the fat or lard type breeds.

Until recent years, Canada has been a substantial exporter of hogs and hog products. Certain grades of live hogs have moved in considerable volume to United States markets. In 1914 a total of 214,709 head went south across the border, but from that time until 1924 the volume ranged from 329 to 28,887 head, with the exception of one year. Then began an increased movement which reached a peak 194,667 head in 1927, only to be followed by reductions which all but eliminated the business by 1931.

Exports of bacon and pork reached high levels during the war years. Amounts in excess of 200,000,000 pounds were exported to Great Britain during each of several years. From 1919 to 1923 the volume fell off to less than half the peak output. Increases followed in 1924 and 1925, but subsequent declines had by 1931 very nearly eliminated Canada from the export market. There has, since then, been considerable improvement in volume.

The United States has also been a very heavy contributor to international trade in pork products, the volume of exports ranging from one to two billion pounds annually during the period of 1914 to 1930.

In searching for an explanation of the higher prices prevailing in Canada, one is confronted with several factors: first, that Canada has had a standardized government grading policy since 1922 which has resulted in the production of bacon type hogs; second, a premium has been paid for hogs grading "select"; third, improvement in quality, coupled with the educational work and advertising accompanying the acceptance of government grading, has resulted in a marked increase in Canadian consumption; and, fourth, Canadian bacon has found favour with the Canadian people and in the United Kingdom and other world markets.

Scotland is the nearest country to Iceland, 500 miles distant. Norway is 600 miles from Iceland and Denmark 900. The logical route for Canadian goods to Iceland would, therefore, seem to be via Scotland.

As a source of supply to Greece, Canada improved her position in the first six months of this year from 15th to 10th place. In wheat, Canada moved from 3rd to 2nd place, the Argentine being the chief supplier of wheat.
