—CITY SURVEYOR TO HUNT WATER POWER IN BRITISH COLUMBIA.—E. W. Bowness, consulting engineer leaves the city on Monday for Northern California where he will spend the next month in investigating the water power available for possible use by a large industrial corporation. From Edmonton Mr. Bowness goes west to Prince George and from there to Fort St. George and the foot of the Stuart Lake Water Falls will be used to cross the lake to the northern extremity after which canoes and trucking lines will be in vogue to ascend the Stuart River after which Talka Lake will be crossed. Then the party will make camp in the Hudson Bay outpost at Benky House and the sight of old Fort Connolly. In this locality the divide occurs between the Pacific and the Arctic flowing streams, and here the Skeena, Skeena, Babine, Nass and Findlay Rivers have their sources. —Western Exchange. The above excerpt is from a western paper and the engineer referred to is Mr. Ernest Bowness, son of Mr. Andrew Bowness of Kensington. It has been noted on various occasions how Mr. Bowness went west some years ago fully qualified to discharge duties of importance and responsibility in his chosen profession and this shows that he possesses the tact and ambition to use this ability to good effect. While we do not encourage our young men to go broad we must admit that the possibilities in the west seem to be greater than here.—Y.

FEEDING BROILERS

Broiler raising as a specialized business can be carried on successfully by comparatively few people. Those in close proximity to the better markets of the cities sometimes make good profits, but the average farmer is not in a position to take advantage of the market situation in the early season.

In order to make the largest profits in raising broilers an early maturing strain of fowls must be used. The Leghorns and other light breeds mature faster than do the heavier breeds, and are thus better suited for the production of soups and medium broilers. All white feathered birds look better when dressed than do those with dark feathers.

Fattening—Chickens intended for broilers are reared with the rest of the chickens until a short time before they are marketed. Under proper management the chickens will grow rapidly. When they weigh about one pound each they should put into small yards or pens, though care should be taken to avoid overcrowding. Where a large number of broilers are being fattened, they may be put in fattening crates. At this age they will tend to grow more as they fatten, but a little fattening food while in confinement will produce more meat and the quality will be improved. The first feed given after they are confined should be their growing ration while on range. This should be gradually changed to a more fattening ration. A good ration consists of equal parts oatmeal, feed, cornmeal and ground buckwheat, to which has been added ten per cent of beer scraps. These ground grains should be thoroughly mixed, and then moistened with sour milk. The wet mash is fed in troughs three times daily, giving the broilers all they will eat at each feeding. If sour skim-milk is not available, water may be used. Low grade flour or middlings may be substituted for the ground buckwheat. At the end of the fattening period, which should last for two or three weeks, the broilers should be fat and plump. They may be sold alive or dressed, depending upon market prices and facilities for killing and shipping. Experiments have shown that they are worth about half as much as skim milk for feeding. It should not be permitted to become putrid before feeding. They should be combined feeds rich in protein. PADEREWSKI BUYS TICKETS FOR HIS OWN PERFORMANCE

PARIS, July 26.—Ignace Jan Paderewski, the famous Polish pianist and composer, received one of the heartiest welcomes accorded him since his return to the concert stage when he appeared before a Paris audience recently. Thousands of people thronged to see him pass on his way to the theatre and he was again besieged when the concert, a benefit affair, was concluded.

The French press re-told at great length the story of how the noted artist was expelled from Russia years ago by Emperor Alexander III, after Paderewski had played before the court. "You are a great artist, and an honor to Russia," the emperor is reported to have said. "Pardon Your Majesty," replied Paderewski, "to Poland." The next day the pianist received an order to leave Russia, and he had never returned since.

The newspapers here also mentioned the fact that on the day of his first concert, Paderewski drove to the theatre box office and purchased nearly a hundred seats at regular prices, which he distributed among his friends.

His only request to the management was that he be given a dressing room, so that he could let his hands soak in very hot water for half an hour before the concert. He explained that he had found this the best way to make them supple.

If this enterprise is carried out the mountain climbers of Japan and many visitors to the country will be deprived of one of their great thrills and adventures. To come to Japan without at least attempting to climb Fuji is to make the visit only partly complete, while to at least once reach the top of the mountain and look down into the wonderful crater.
