SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

WORLD'S TEMPERANCE SUNDAY
Rom. 14: 13 to 15: 3.
Sunday School Lesson, November 12, 1916.

Golden Text—"It is good neither to eat flesh, onr to drink wine, nor any thing whereby thy brother stumbleth."—Rom. 14: 21.

It is easy to condemn others. If one points out our faults, instantly there springs to our lips a retort, "You do so and so!" When the noble life of another is a reproach to us because of some of our practices, with critical eye we watch that person and make much of any weaknesses we discover. This is not the Christian spirit. Our task is not to judge others to seek acts and traits to be condemned; our task is to watch our own conduct so that no one who follows our example will ever go astray. We shall be too busy to hunt for faults of others if we give the necessary time and attention to taking care we put no stumbling block in our brother's way.

Those who are interested in the liquor business and those who, for personal reasons, wish to defend the use of alcoholic liquors, have made great efforts to show that alcohol is a food. All this effort is beside the mark. Even if alcohol were clean in itself, if it could be proved to be a food the Christian must determine his attitude toward strong drink buy its effects upon others. The Christian must consider even the opinions of those weak mortals who think using strong drink is wrong. And there is left little room for argument when we know that strong drink does ruin the character and the life of many who use it.

The Christian must learn to put a man's soul on one side of the scale and material desire on the other, and always let a man's soul outweigh material things. We condemn the Gadarenes who complained about the loss of a herd of swine when it was the price of one man's soul. How many to-day carp about the value of the liquor traffic, when it is the price of countless souls. "Destroy not with thy meat him for whom Christ died."

Some have argued that since the Church is a spiritual institution it should have little to do with matters such as food and drink. The literature of the liquor interests has exhorted the Church to let the saloon alone and get back to its own business of preaching the gospel. This was not Paul's view. He believed that spiritual things were supreme, but for this very reason he taught that the Church must not let material things interfere with spiritual work and progress. Eating and drinking must not be allowed to interfere with the Kingdom of God.

Paul declares that the Kingdom of God brings righteousness, peace and joy. Anything which brings unrighteousness, strife, and sorrow, must be opposed to the Kingdom of God. Where will strong drink stand in the light of this test? Before our courts appeal is made that criminals be dealt with lightly because drink l d them to break the law. Drink causes strife and quarreling. Drink is responsible for many sorrows. What then should be the Christian's attitude towards drink and the places where it is dispensed?

We are to follow after things whereby we may edify one another. Christians are builders—builders of character, builders of helpful institutions, builders of national life. The Christian is not doing his best work when he is tearing down evil institutions, though that may be his duty. He is to be constructive, not destructive; though there is what may be called "destruction in order to construction." There will be comparatively little good accomplished by destroying the saloon if something as bad springs up to take its place. While destroying the liquor traffic, with its evils, the Church must establish Christian institutions with their influence for good. One reason conversion is the best remedy for drunkenness is that the evil is cast out by good, and good remains a power in the life. We must edify, or build up good while we seek to tear down evil.

Of course it is a good thing to have strong faith, but strong faith is not to become an excuse for making light of the Christian who does not possess this same strong faith. "The faith which thou hast, have thou to thyself before God," says Paul. Even as good a thing as faith is not to be permitted to injure in any way a weaker brother. Absolute confidence that God will never let strong drink overcome us, must not make us careless concerning a weaker brother who has no such conviction or who we might know could not resist the temptation which we can so easily resist.

The world says that strength means privilege. "Might makes right," says the philosopher. The strong man is served by the weak. This, however, is an unchristian philosophy. According to Christ he is greatest who serves most; he truly leads who considers the interests of hs followers: the shepherd must be ready to lay down his life for the sheep. Strength is not an invitation to privilege but a call to duty. Paul puts this truth in these words," Now we that are strong ought to bear the infirmities of the weak. In a Christian land the laws should be constructed to protect the weak, even from themselves; laws should not be constructed primarily to guard the person liberally of the strong.

Paul does not say that it is our duty to please our neighbors. Some neighbors are beyond pleasing. What Paul says is that each one should "please his neighbor for that which is good unto edifying." The Christian's duty is to do all he can to help his neighbor and to make him a better man. Community improvement is real Christian work when it is done in Jesus' name. Perhaps we cannot please everyone, but we can do something to help everyone.

The one who seeks to please his neighbor for that which is good may not find his path easy. Doing the best thing for neighbor's approval. Jesus Christ came into the world to save sinners, but sinners crucified him. Of him it is written, "The reproaches of them that reproached thee fell upon me." The path of service is often the path of eproach. But we sho ld have the courarge to walk in that path, following Jesus.—The Westminister Adult Bible Class.

ISLANDER WOUNDED. —On the 25th. ult., Mr. Michael McKenna received a telegram from military headquarters informing him that his brother, Pte. James was in a hospital in England suffering from a slight wound in the foot. Pte. McKenna was formerly chief officer of the S. S. Bowena, running between Vancouver and Howe Sound, but soon after the outbreak of the European war he enlisted in the 54th Canadian Battalion for overseas duty. Pte. McKenna made an immense sacrifice to serve his inherent love of honor and justice. He threw up a remunerative position and a brilliant career was shattered, but his big-hearted action will not be forgotten. His wound, although slight, is causing his friends grave concern, but no doubt he is now on the right road to recovery. The McKenna family have done exceptionally well in answering the call of duty. Philip and John are now in the 5th Siege Battery in England

WEDDING BELLS.—At 6 o'clock on Wednesday evening, Nov. 8th, the marriage of Miss Irene Munn, daughter of Mr. Donald and Mrs. Munn, took place in the presence of a few immediate friends of the contracting parties. The young man who was so fortunate as to secure the hand of the fair one was Mr. David Roy Smallwood of Saint Andrews, a prosperous young farmer of that thriving locality. The bride had been a successful teacher for some time in her own district, and the future career of the happy couple will certainly have the very best wishes of the entire community. The bride was given away by her father, and attended by her sister, Miss Margaret B. Munn, and the groom was supported by Mr. Clarence Coffin. The marriage ceremony was performed by the Rev. D. MacLean. The congratulations of the Guardian are hereby tendered to Mr and Mrs. Smallwood, wishing them a long and happy wedded life.

Soldiers' Christian Association

The following are extracts from letters received from Gunner Chester Craswell, 5th Siege Battery:

Soldiers' Central Club,
College St., Dublin.
Oct. 19 1916.

To Mr. Geo. H. Tanton:

Sir:—I am well and in the best of health We are here in Dublin on our furlough. We are leaving here tomorrow on our return to Witley Camp. Dublin is a great city, and the boys are having a great time.

CHESTER.

Witley Camp,
Oct. 24 and 26, 1916.

Well, here we are back in camp again after a beautiful trip to the capital of old Erin. Watson, my brother, met some of the boys of the 105th. They are all well and ready for the fray. Our battery is quarantined in with measles for twenty-one days. We are to be transferred to another camp in a few days. Some of our boys saw the Rev. Mr. Taylor. He is well. The weather here is fine, but cold. Here is one of the cards which the boys sign:

Soldiers' Christian Association,

London, S. W.
Decision Card.

Trusting in the Lord Jesus Christ for strength, I take Him as my Saviour and my King. I will endeavour to read my Bible and pray at least once every day, to do only those things that please Him, and to confess Him before my comrades.

And the following is the pledge:

Soldiers' Christian Association,

I promise, by God's assistance, and relying only on His Almighty help, to abstain from the use of intoxicating liquor as a beverage so long as I retain this Pledge.

Mrs. Henry Caswell, King St., received from Chester the following beautiful lines:—

Remembrance to Mother.

Mother o' mine, have no fear
Now that the time is drawing near,
For us to go to the firing line
To help the Boys to cross the Rhine.

Mother o' mine, keep up your heart,
God will not keep us long apart.
Mem'ries of home locked in my breast,
Thoughts that will make me fight my best.

Mother o' mine, I shall soon return,
And ever for thee my heart shall yearn,
Safe in your prayers I'll always be,
God give us quickly, Peace and Victory.

Mother o' mine, I can say no more,
But to bid you a tender au revoir.
God keep you free from this parting's pain,
And hope that we soon shall meet again.

The New Fairy Tales.
(From the New York Life.)

Just think of the stories that will be invented
We'll hear them when war-days are over,
The number of men who will say they prevented
The Germans from landing at Dover.

The sappers will tell you they let off a mine
Just under the German headquarters
And then there's the man who bombarded the Rhine
With his own special line of trench mortars.

Then the flying men say they dropped bombs upon Lillie.
Where the whole German army was hiding,
Jones will tell how a shell neatly pierced the back wheel
Of the new motor-bike he was riding.

And then all the stories of fights on the Aisne
Long stories of carnage and slaughter;
"I fell in the river," the heroes explain,
"And found it was blood and not water."

The prisoners, too, will have stories to tell,
It was all the staff's fault they were taken;
How they nearly escaped, how internment was "hell,"
How they longed for poached eggs and good bacon.

And what will my yarn be, you're anxious to know,
Of course, I've no need to tell lies, sir,
I took a small part at the end of the show—
I'm the fellow who captured the Kaiser

Humor of the Country.
(Farm and Home.)

The following note, containing only one word, was recently handed to a village schoolmaster: "Cepatomtegoataturing." It was brought by one of the boys on behalf of a neighbor's child who was absent. The schoolmaster eventually arrived at a solution,—"Kept at home to go a-taturing!"

CURIOSITY.

Curiosity is an effort to secure information which belongs to somebody else.

There is a great deal of information lying around loose which would not look well printed on the front page, and if it were not for curiosity it would kick around on the four corners for weeks at a time without being picked up and woven into a lawsuit. There is considerable complaint about the activity of curiosity, but it probably keeps more people from helping build good roads for the state than the prickings of conscience.

Curiosity is caused by the nose becoming elongated and prying into other people's business. Many a man has begun life with a nose of normal dimensions, and after becoming addicted to the curiosity habit has sprouted a proboscis longer than the ant-eater. There have been instances where this roving tendency has been resented by its victim, who pushes the nose back to its proper location with an irate fist.

Curiosity should be guarded against, especially in the case of husbands who were formerly in the prize-ring. It is a dangerous matter to pry into the personal transactions of a citizen who carries a left upper-cut and enough ready money to pay his fine. Scores of happy homes have been broken up by the gossip whose curiosity has run over the dam and convinces a credulous wife that she has maried a gay Lortharlo instead of a master bricklayer.

Curiosity which is not fenced in can be secured by reading the parable about the mote and the beam and training the nose to keep on the sidewalk. There would be less baleful curiosity at work in this country if people would look inside a little oftener and not worry so much about how their neighbors can afford pork tenderloins twice a week. If nobody would go off his own premises when he feels like doing a little promiscuous prying there would be better feeling in the church and fewer blackballs cast in the lodge.

TEST COWS FOR PROFIT

To-day the prudent farmer hardly dreams of planting seed grain without testing it. He realizes there is on deposit in the bank or nature a huge sum of money, much of which may be his if elementary rules are followed in seeding and cultivating. The average dairyman with twenty cows may reasonably expect as his share of nature's hoard a yearly income of two thousand dollars, if the resultant crops are marketed through suitable cows.

But can the unselec untested cow be expected to take a prominent part in that annual distribution of nature's wealth? She may be fed and cared for to the best of her owners ability, but there seems to be a loose end if he does not turn round and test her, determine her ability to turn the vast deposits in nature's bank into a round nine thousand pounds of milk fetches one-twenty per hundred.

Just guessing at seed vitality and power to grow is queer work ;guessing at a crow's production and profit is risk and unnecessary. It is very risky because many a dairyman is deceived without the use of scales and test, quite unnecessary because the dairy division at Ottawa supplies, free of charge, milk record forms. Write for them, either the three day per month or the daily kind, with a herd record book. Their use gives certainty. Test your cows, there is money in it.

Better see about having your water pipes fixed up now --before the cold weather comes to freeze them up.
