

City Asphalt Plant Guttled By Fire

Fire that broke out in the Charlottetown asphalt plant yesterday morning destroyed the greater part of the wooden structure, before being brought under control by city firemen.

No estimate of damage was made last night, but it was reported by civic officials that the machinery was not badly damaged and that it was expected work at the plant would be continued in a day or two.

Between 15 and 20 men were employed in and around the building at the time the fire broke out, and by authorities to have been caused by oil torches. The inside of the two-storey structure was hot, being kept at a high temperature because of the nature of the work being carried on.

An alarm was rung in from the shop of Fire Chief Angus MacEachern, and the fire had gained considerable headway before the fire department arrived. Clouds of dense smoke billowed from the walls and roof as the heat of the fire melted the snow that was falling continually at the time.

Firemen turned two powerful hoses on the flames and brought the blaze under control without difficulty.

En route to the site of the fire, the department's apparatus skidded on the icy streets at the foot of Quebec Street while attempting to turn the corner and the end of a hook and ladder truck smashed through a window of J. C. Montgomery's wholesale confectionery office.

Scotsmen Honour St. Andrew's Day

Peter to Jesus Christ, Andrew is a familiar name to us. Later references to him are few in number, but they give us valuable insight into the character of this saint's soul. The two chief ones are the occasion of the feeding of the 5,000, and when the Greeks came desiring to see Jesus. These incidents reveal Andrew to us as a man of resource, loyalty and common sense.

MANY TRADITIONS

There are many traditions concerning his travels and fate. One of the more grotesque ones is that in which he is carried while asleep by angels to the kingdom of the cannibals. The king had so many cannibals killed for his table every day. By the help of St. Andrew the prisons were opened and the captives ran away. Immediately the king ordered the 7 keepers to be killed and cooked for his victuals. "and straightaway collect us all the old men of the city, and let them cast lots among themselves, and those whom the lot falls we will go on killing every day, 7 by 7, for our food."

(Mr. MacKenzie here reviewed the inspiring story of St. Andrew's martyrdom, quoting from "The Lives of the Saints" by S. Baring-Gould.)

THOSE WHO HONOUR IT

But tonight, we come (not alone) to pay our respects thro' sacred memory to him who is our Patron Saint, but also to a small but mighty island, whose sons and daughters have carried her name beyond the seas to all climes. While for all of us gathered here the glorious story of Scotland's fame is a dear one, there are some here for whom I have no doubt the very mention of certain words opens the flood gates of memory as fond recollections of youth and home come streaming back from the years gone by. Tonight, in the words of Wilfred Campbell, tonight Scotland "cal's her children home again," and there beside some particularly fond spot, whether it be hill or glen or loch or brae or heath, or in the quietude of a home amidst scenes which never forget will be to those of you whose childhood days were spent among such scenes the rest of us can only say, "God bless you; may your memory never grow dim."

Mr. Peter Sinclair, M.P.

"Prince Edward Island as the Cradle of Confederation has achieved much and we look for still greater achievements," Mr. Peter Sinclair, M.P. said, replying to the toast to "Our Province."

Mayor Turner

Charlottetown is keeping abreast of the times in its institutions of learning, healing the sick, and for propagation of the gospel, Mayor Turner said replying to the toast "Our City." Here the descendants of four races, English, Irish, French and Scots live and work in harmony.

Mr. Ivan Roberts

In an address on the place of youth in agriculture Ivan Roberts, youthful orator who represented the Province at the oratorical contest in connection with the Royal Winter Fair in Toronto recently, told the gathering that Canada is an exemplar among the nations of peaceful development, and unlimited possibilities. Divine Providence had given it great natural resources in minerals, forests, and best of all practically unlimited acres of farm lands, requisite for a mighty and influential nation.

REV. MR. MCKENZIE

Following was the address by Rev. Mr. McKenzie in reply to the toast "The day and the Land of the Heather." Mr. Chairman, honored guests, fellow Scots: I should like at once to express my deep appreciation for the honour you have given me this evening of replying to this time-honoured and greatly revered toast—"The Day an' a' wha honour it."

STIRRING STORY

There are a great variety of things we think of tonight as we recall the stirring story of our ancestors. We think of their unswerving honour; their unquestioned honesty; their hardiness; their respect for their fellowman; their peculiar clanishness; their courage in battle and their love of home.

For these are the characteristics that have made a unique people—for wherever he may live the Scot is a Scot. This was brought very forcibly home to me last summer when going the rounds of my visiting on one of the fields. I came to the home of a MacDonald family, the man and wife as Scotch as a bit of the pie itself, and the welcome they gave me because my name was "Mac!" A soldier in the Boer War, this man had travelled the length and breadth of the Empire, but his heart was still in Scotland, and the burr was still heavy on his tongue. And there in barren, dried-out Saskatchewan his son was raising sheep, and I presume, his daughter could make the haggis. For here surely was a little bit of Scotland, though miles across the sea.

THE SCOTTISH INFLUENCE

But enough of wandering. I should like now for a few moments to have you think with me of Scotland as it is in Canada — by which I do not mean Nova Scotia, but the spirit of Scotland. How has it lived on? How marked is its influence? What of the future? In Canada today, approximately 1-6 of the population is Scottish—only exceeded by the English and French. About 1-2 of Prince Edward Island's pioneers were Scotch and everyone seems to agree that Nova Scotia, my home province, richly deserves its name. And not only here, but throughout our land, we find the names of Scotland's sons and daughters. Looking, then, at this situation in an impartial way, we notice that in the fields of religion, education, finance, transportation and statesmanship, Scotch names occur frequently, and deserve a high place of honour. Surely one of the greatest traits of character of the Scot has is the ability to adapt himself, and we find that in our history as a nation, the contribution of the Scotch has been of a high order. As Sir Edward Beatty said: "The Scotch have fought in nearly every country—they still are able to place ideals before comfort, and duty before life itself." It

BURNS THE IMMORTAL

But I want to draw your attention, if only very briefly, to one or two other things about those who honour this day that makes us glad to be here tonight. It is perhaps worth it to say that Scotland has produced as great a percentage of good men as any other race. But we would all likely agree that four of her sons stand out prominently. viz: Walter Scott, Thomas Carlyle, John Knox and Robert Burns—and in our day Ramsay MacDonald—all of them noble men, but of these, the place of affection which Burns holds in all our hearts is surely unique. This man who learned the heart of Scotland and he was writing "The Little Minstrel" "I did not know how to be his evening's work," he said, "For I knew with beads of perspiration standing on my forehead that before I slept that night, I had to make my hero say "Darling."

HONOR THE DAY

"And so, in conclusion Scots, let us honor the day and all that it stands for. Let us continue to boast at least once a year that the blood of one of the earth's strongest races runs in our veins, and I am sure we will be all the more loyal citizens of this fair Dominion if we continue to love the land from which we or our sires sprang. He is a poor settler who is without love of country.

"Let us honor the land of mountains and loch, of moor and heather, the land of tender memories and leal hearts, of honest men and bonnie lassies, the land of poetry and romance, of stirring story and legendary lore, the land of struggle and hardship, of achievement, success, the land of plain living, high thinking, of ever widening influence and imperishable glory, the land that holds the dust of our forefathers."

REICH TRADING

I don't need to remind you that this is a day when oftentimes we fear that such sanities as we have just been mentioning will quickly pass away. In the face of such fears and opposition surely the least challenge that comes to us is to maintain these high standards of life and conduct to which we tonight pay fond tribute.

Pulse for a moment and consider how strong is the chain of which we tonight are but a link. For tonight, gentlemen, there is a living chain of fellowship made up of those who prove that the Scottish blood is strong, that the old faith for which our forefathers bled and died still survives. In each link of the chain the thoughts will be of mother land, and one and all will echo Burns' beautiful sentiment:

"O Scotland, my dear, my native soil, For whom my warmest wish to heaven is sent, Long may thy hardy sons of rustic soul Be blest with health and peace and sweet content, And chi may heaven their simple lives prevent From luxury's contagion weak and vile, Then how'er crowns and coronets be rent, A virtuous populace may rise the while, And stand a wall of fire around their much lov'd isle."

In conclusion Mr. MacKenzie quoted words from an address by Prof. Cameron of the University of New Brunswick.

Rebel Attacks On

Germany and Italy, and then the foreign influences in the internal war would favor Madrid.

(Officials of Air France, French aviation company, asserted in Paris today that a Spanish Government warplane shot 200 machine gun bullets at a French commercial mail plane near Alicante Sunday, mistaking it for an insurgent bomber. They said Spanish authorities apologized for the attack.)

Bombing Attack

Fascist warplanes today loosed most of their explosive cargo in the University City and Manzanare. River bank areas without attempting to bomb the centre of the city.

This, the Government said, was an indication the insurgent army men feared to repeat their previous bombardments because of the reinforced Madrid airforce.

Encouraged by the stubborn fight against Franco's men in the University City section, the Government was reported considering a major offensive.

The war ministry reported gains in heavy fighting on the northern Asturias fronts.

ALICANTE, Spain, Nov. 30—Two German ships served as a bomb and fuel supply base for an insurgent seaplane squadron which carried out an eight-hour attack on this port and Cartagena Saturday night and early yesterday. Government authorities charged tonight.

Alicante is one of the chief Government ports of entry on the Mediterranean. Cartagena's harbor, 60 miles to the south, recently has sheltered most of the leftist naval fleet. About half way between the two cities lie San'a Pola and Guardamar, where officials assert the German vessels lay hidden to restock the insurgent aircraft.

United States Tourists Favor Can. Travel

"Tourist travel from the United States to Canada during this year totaled nearly 14,000,000 individuals using all forms of transportation and these visitors thus numbered more than the total population of Canada which at the last census was set at 10,737,883 but which is now probably has reached 11,900,000," said C. K. Howard, Manager of the Tourist and Convention Bureau of the Canadian National Railways, Montreal, Que., on a business trip to Ottawa in connection with next year's travel.

Mr. Howard added that hundreds of tourists had been generated by the Department of Immigration and wife report. The travel movement represents an increase of fully 20 per cent over the preceding year and the largest volume since 1927.

It is estimated that this visitor spent $275,000,000 while in Canada for passage, purchase and accommodations.

"Travel by even greater volume is anticipated in 1937," Mr. Howard said, "this prediction being based on early inquiries which indicate heavy travel throughout the North American continent during the holiday season."

According to Mr. Howard, hotels of the Canadian National Railways System accommodated 100 conventions and excursions for the coming year promise to exceed that total.

National Park, mountain, lake and seashore resorts, and particularly Jasper, in the Canadian Rockies, experienced the best season in years, while hunters and fishermen came in larger numbers, Mr. Howard declared.
