

Lantigen "C" Egg And Poultry Market Prices

Average egg prices from September to the end of this month are generally fifteen to twenty percent higher than for the balance of the year, reports Mr. F.M. Nash, Supervising Poultry Products Inspector.

Herein lies a tip to bigger profits for the poultryman who can produce more eggs during this higher price season, Mr. Nash advised.

Those who have lost work and lowered their incomes due to crippling Arthritis and Rheumatic pains, have found Lantigen "C" a real investment.

Inspector Welcome will attend to the long before this time to O'Hara's. "And so that Old Fayne doesn't abscond in a panic, and spill our game, precautions have been taken."

O'Hara crossed to where Yousef was standing with Caryl. But before he could join them, they began to dance together both talking and laughing in the most friendly way.

He had to wait inwardly raging at the sight of the Egyptian holding Caryl so close to him. Despite his advanced years, the Egyptian was gracefully agile, obviously an excellent dancer, and in his right hand, handsome O'Hara was watching them, felt that either Caryl was an amazing little actress, or the fellow was exercising a distinct fascination over her.

Mr. Hussein has just been taking me a real tour round Paradise, Caryl told O'Hara, a little breathlessly, as they moved towards the cooler air of the balcony, with his view of moonlit and gaily illuminated stretch of river.

My estate at El Khabr, in Spanish Morocco, the Egyptian explained in his smooth voice. "A truly beautiful spot. Mr. O'Hara, you with your knowledge of Egypt will appreciate how, despite the desert, one may find beauty in North Africa. El Khabr is in the mountains. At one time, a Berber stronghold and rather desolate. Now, modern science has salvaged him from desolation. A veritable oasis has grown up. The flowering gardens of my house are a beauty to the eye. I am asking Miss Fayne — and her friends — to visit me there."

Longevity Candidates

By Uncle Joe MR. EDWARD CLOHOSSEY Mr. Edward Clohossey was born at Skinner's Pond ninety-two years ago, the son of Irish emigrants Patrick Clohossey and Johanna Foley of Kildare, Ireland.

At the age of 27, or in 1882, Mr. Clohossey married Ellen Doyle, also of Skinner's Pond. They had five children, namely: Ellen, who died at an early age; Joseph, who is superintendent of the Oxford Paper Co., at Rumford, Me., and James a veteran of World War I, now employed with the Vancouver Water Commission. James visited the Island three years ago after an absence of twenty-six years.

His brother Joseph died about eight years ago, aged 76. A sister named Margaret passed away 11 years ago at the age of 83. Surviving are his sisters, Mrs. William Gaudet, 85, and (Hannah) Mrs. Elizabeth Arsenault, 89, and Mrs. Elizabeth Arsenault, 87. The two last mentioned live at Pignish.

This fine old candidate attributes his long and healthy life to the fact that he was a farmer, did the place well, and stayed in the place where he was born.

Still able to read without the aid of glasses, he enjoys excellent health and has yet to have his first doctor.

Speaking of his childhood days Mr. Clohossey says he can remember fishing in Fall Pond when the whole country around his district was little more than a wild wilderness, with neighbors few and far were a happy and contented family.

Mr. Clohossey never turned down a good drink of whiskey, and he says he has used tobacco nearly all his life. "Moderation and temperance in all things" has been the motto of this fine old gentleman—a very good motto indeed.

MRS. MELINA MACDONALD If you would drink of the fountain of youth then go to St. Peter's. A great number of longevity candidates.

FLIES 10,000 MILES. PHONES GRANDAD

Grandfather in Toronto is called by David Cawston, 24, from New York after he arrived by air from Colombo. The Ceylon-born son of Mrs. Alfred Cawston, David already has flown 10,000 miles. He and his mother were coming home to spend the winter with his grandparents, Herbert J. Scott, whose wife died Christmas Eve. David's only comment after the long plane trip was: "It made my tummy sick." His parents are missionaries in Ceylon.

SYDNEY, Australia, Jan. 6. (CP)—Twenty automobiles built specially for use by the Royal Family on their Australian tour are to be sold at Sydney.

The cars will be stripped of all special fittings including blue right-of-way lights, royal standards, and two-way radio sets. Selling price of the cars will range from $4,000 to $6,400.

Cancellation of the tour has left many legal tangles. Window seats along the proposed route that were sold are likely to constitute a headache to both buyers and sellers. Many windows were paid for in full and are being claimed legally. On the other hand it is believed no claims can be enforced for the balance of payments on windows where only a deposit was accepted.

Money spent on brightening up cities and towns is not considered lost. Many city councillors express the view that the improvements are permanent and should have been done years ago.

The federal government will invite the King and Queen to make a trip in 1950 if the King's health will stand it.

NEW GLASGOW W. I. The president, Miss Elsie Laird presided over the December meeting of the New Glasgow Women's Institute which was entertained at the home of Mrs. Melvin MacLeod. Nineteen members answered roll call by paying fees and an exchange of Christmas gifts. After the singing of the Ode and repeating the Creed, one new member was welcomed, Mrs. Elmer MacDonal.

Chateau Sinister

Inspector Welcome will attend to the long before this time to O'Hara's. "And so that Old Fayne doesn't abscond in a panic, and spill our game, precautions have been taken."

O'Hara crossed to where Yousef was standing with Caryl. But before he could join them, they began to dance together both talking and laughing in the most friendly way.

He had to wait inwardly raging at the sight of the Egyptian holding Caryl so close to him. Despite his advanced years, the Egyptian was gracefully agile, obviously an excellent dancer, and in his right hand, handsome O'Hara was watching them, felt that either Caryl was an amazing little actress, or the fellow was exercising a distinct fascination over her.

Mr. Hussein has just been taking me a real tour round Paradise, Caryl told O'Hara, a little breathlessly, as they moved towards the cooler air of the balcony, with his view of moonlit and gaily illuminated stretch of river.

My estate at El Khabr, in Spanish Morocco, the Egyptian explained in his smooth voice. "A truly beautiful spot. Mr. O'Hara, you with your knowledge of Egypt will appreciate how, despite the desert, one may find beauty in North Africa. El Khabr is in the mountains. At one time, a Berber stronghold and rather desolate. Now, modern science has salvaged him from desolation. A veritable oasis has grown up. The flowering gardens of my house are a beauty to the eye. I am asking Miss Fayne — and her friends — to visit me there."

Mr. Hussein is giving up his villa at St. Pierre. Caryl told O'Hara that he looked almost as if he did not really see him, or at least as if he were someone in whom she had no strong interest.

"Really?" he responded, himself very interested. "Will that be soon?" he asked the Egyptian. "Captain Cairo, who has been in Paris arranged for the immediate sale of the villa, so we shall not go back there," the latter said, shrugging. "After all, pleasant as I have found France in my long exile from Egypt, my ears can never be deaf to the voice of Africa calling me back. You too must certainly come to see my place at El Khabr, Mr. O'Hara."

The latter, murmuring polite appreciation of the offer, was inwardly not altogether surprised about his news. It was more than probable, he surmised, that Yousef Hussein suspected of French police activities. Indeed, the attack on Monsieur Carnot seemed proof that this might indeed be so, as had been the murder of Monsieur Semaire, the Biarritz lawyer.

However, since it was very unlikely that Hussein would have the chance to leave London, drawback of which he could certainly not be aware, his suggestion that Caryl should visit his Spanish Moroccan estate mattered nothing.

Canada Reaps Benefit From Hitler Policy

OTTAWA, Jan. 8.—(CP)—There was a belated and beneficial echo of Hitler's terrorism in Canada today.

The National Research Council announced that one of the Germans who fled his homeland because of Nazism has been named director of the important Division of Physics.

He is Dr. Gerhard Herzberg, 44, a Canadian citizen who came here in 1935 from Britain.

One of the world's leading authorities on spectroscopy and molecular structure, author of three standard text books and 100 scientific papers, he has studied and worked and taught in Germany, Britain, Canada and the United States.

From 1936 to 1945, he was research director of physics at the University of Saskatchewan in Saskatoon and led in several discoveries of value to astronomy.

Five months ago he came to N.R.C. from the Yerkes Observatory, Department of Astronomy, University of Chicago, where he had built the world's longest multiple optical path for the study of planetary atmospheres and found a method now used to detect hydrogen in those atmospheres.

He will continue researches in the new job. He succeeds Dr. R. W. Boyle who retired in October.

The Council also announced the appointment of Dr. Leslie E. Howlett, a native of London, England, as associate director of the Physics Division. He came to Canada as a boy and graduated from University of British Columbia in 1927 and studied later at Toronto and McGill Universities.

With the N.R.C. since 1931, he has been assistant director of the Division since last July.

In Memoriam

In loving memory of our dear husband and father, Hugh MacSwain, who departed this life January 10th, 1947.

With tears we watched you sinking And saw you pass away. We tended you with loving care But could not make you stay.

Some may think we have forgotten As a smile may hide the tears, But your memory we shall cherish As it dawns another year.

Lovingly remembered by his wife and family.

In Memoriam

In loving memory of my dear sister, MRS. WARREN SIMMONS who passed away January 10th, 1946. Mrs. Percy Dawson, Crapaud.
