SLOWLY RECOVERING.—Mr. John Griffith, of the Postal Service here, arrived home Saturday morning from North Dakota, where he went to accompany his brother, Edward, home. It will be remembered that the latter was shot and badly injured by train robbers whom he bravely opposed. This happened some months ago, since then the young man has been in the hospital and at last has been able to come home, where he will be taken every care of.

WELL KNOWN HERE.—Miss Laura M. D. Mitchell, of this city, received official notice that she has won a gold medal at the San Diego exposition on her display of work in miniature, says the Albion Daily Advocate. Miss Mitchell is well known in Charlottetown, being a daughter of the late Mr. Frederick Mitchell, Cashier of the Merchants Bank of Prince Edward Island and granddaughter of the late Mr. John Brecken, of this city. S.S. RALLY.—The S.S. Rally service held in Long Creek Baptist Church, Friday night, Oct. 29th, was largely attended, there being only a few vacant seats, which speaks well for the people of Long Creek and vicinity. The choir was supplemented by talent from Kingston and Clyde River. Mr. John Hertz, of the latter place sang very acceptably. "Oh Love that will not let me go." In due time Rev. A. A. Gates called upon Rev. George Orman, of Cornwall, to address the meeting, which he did in an interesting and helpful way, showing the development of and need for the Sunday School. The sum of $4.10 was received, which is in the hands of the District Secretary, Miss C. S. Howard, to go towards the allocation.

PATRIOTISM.—Two brothers from Trenton, (New Glasgow), named Hicken are on the firing line. The elder brother, Stewart, aged nineteen years enlisted in the Thirteenth Battalion, first contingent, and has been on the firing line ever since last February. When Stewart enlisted his brother, Edward, was only sixteen years of age. But he, too, was determined to enlist. His parents objected on account of his youth, being two years under age. However, as soon as Edward learned that his brother was in the trenches, nothing could keep him any longer, and he enlisted in the 40th, leaving Trenton in the month of May for Aldershot. From the 40th this youngster (only 17) was drafted into the 23rd Battalion at Shorncliffe, and is now in France. His only ambition was to get into the fighting line as soon as possible.—Halifax Herald. (The father of the boys, Mr. Albert Hicken, formerly resided in Georgetown. They are nephews of Mr. Geo. Stewart, machinist, of Charlottetown.)

THE BELLS OF BELGIUM

For many centuries bells have been intimately associated with the hour of national triumph and disaster. In Belgium, famous as a land of bells and carillons, the ancient tuncin of Antwerp, cast in 1316, and named the "Horrida" has been long disused, it did not, in the recent time of stress, cry aloud the city's danger and proclaim its fall. Its younger comrade, the Santa Maria, which first rang in 1467, on the entry of Charles the Bold into the city, was also silent, and so was the favourite Carolus, the gift of the Emperor Charles the Fifth, richly cast of copper, silver and gold. Perhaps like Roland, the great bell of Ghent, they only sound for victory.

Many of the Belgium bells are among the finest products of the great bell founders, when their art was in its prime, in the sixteenth and seventeenth century. Few French and English bells are as notable for perfection of tone, but many are renowned through tradition and association.

WONDERFUL WATCHES

The Czar possesses a very remarkable watch. It was made by a Polish mechanic. The Czar had heard some wonderful tales about the inventive genius of this man and wishing to test it sent him a parcel containing some copper nails, wood chippings, a piece of broken glass, a cracked china cup, a length of wire and two orthore cribbage pegs.

Accompanying this mixed lot was a request which amounted to a Royal command to make them into a time-piece.

Very soon the Czar got his material back in the shape of a watch. The case was made of china, and the works of the other odds and ends. So pleased was the Czar that he sent for the but it is one of the Czar's subjects who can show the smallest perfect watch ever made. The lady is a Russian princess. The original gold case was formerly enclosed in enamel covered with Wateau seen s, but it has since been removed, and placed inside a splendid diamond two-fifths of an inch in diameter.

The late Pierpont Morgan made a hobby of collecting watches, and one time gave £60,000 for eighty-six, dating from the sixteenth to the eighteenth centuries. The smallest in his possession might be worn as a tie-pin.

ENGLISH BOY SOLDIER.

The London Times Petrograd correspondent gives some interesting particulars of the doings of an English lad, named John Wilson who at 17 years of age secured, by special permission of the Czar, the right to serve in the ranks of one of the famous regiments of the Petrograd Guards.

Early in October he joined his regiment, at the front and became one of the mounted scouts. For six months he took part in practically every big battle in which the famous corps was engaged and these battles have been practically continuous. It was with a party of scouts which penetrated to the nearest point to Cracow, and was at one time within eight miles of the city.

Young Wilton's record was such after six months of service he was promoted, and he became an ensign strictly on the basis of merit. Of such a nature were his activities that they came repeatedly to the attention of the commanding officer of his regiment.

At the end of five months he was in command of the mounted scouts of the regiment and since becoming an officer he has twice been recommended for decorations for service in the field. His latest feat was withdrawing from under a heavy fire his command of scouts which had been ambushed by a squadron of German cavalry. The young officer conducted this operation so skillfully that he extricated his command with the loss of only one man. He has become well known in his regiment under the example the young Englishman rising from the ranks in six months and twice distinguishing himself as an officer in the next six months has caused much favorable comment among Russian officers.

PERPETUAL MOTION.

Several people had a shot at making something that would go on for ever, like Tennyson's brook. And these have not all been cranks. A mechanic, for instance, made a top, which was balanced on diamond tips and spun on a vacuum, which ran for twelve months.

A Swiss watchmaker has lately invented an electric watch which will go for fifteen years without requiring to be rewound.

A watch and clock maker of Burton has in his possession an electric clock of his own making which has already gone twelve years, and has never failed to record the time during the period, although it has never been rewound. He claims that the mechanism will last fifty years, and that he would not be surprised if the clock ran uninterrupted for a century.

Of course, the possibilities of radio-activity are today only dimly known, but they may yet revolutionize all our notions of motion and energy, and even put electricity out of court.

A FAMOUS IRISHMAN.

Sir Horace Plunkett, the Irish reformer, is coming to America about December 1. His visit will be signalized, it is stated, by the announcement of the organization of an American agricultural has player a large role in the rebuilding of Ireland.

As a young man, Sir Horace Plunkett came to America to build up his health. He lived on ranches in Wyoming and Montana and in the early eighties he returned to his own country. Rural Ireland was then at the depths of its agricultural decline and Plunkett, being well-to-do, decided to devote himself to the needs of the land.

He visited Germany, Belgium and Denmark and there made the observations upon which his scheme of agricultural co-operation was based. Then he went back to preach to his countrymen and remarkable things began to happen. His problem was to teach Irishmen to work together without the preliminary experience of service in the army.

It took him years to prove his method, but in the end he did it. George Russel, the famous Irish poet, and others, went about the country organizing societies of farmers. Co-operative creameries were established, and the markets were organized. Prosperity came to the immemorially poor farmers and in general the country was enriched.

Finally the Irish society spread to England and Scotland. Then similar organizations were started in South Africa and in Finland. Meantime the work had won the approval of Parliament, and Sir Horace Plunkett's organization became practically an official body.

BLOODSHED AND POPPIES

(Manchester Guardian)

There is a brisk discussion in France between the scientific people and the sentimental tradition-loving peasants. It has been noticed that all the battlefields of Northern France where blood was shed last year are aware with red poppies, which grow everywhere and border the roads. The peasants see in it the aftermath of the blood shed in the fights of last autumn. Scientific men point out that it is merely the natural result of the fields being thrown out of cultivation. But at least the peasants have traditions on their side. The dreadful battle of Landen in 1693, when the victorious French and the defeated Allies left on the field between them some twenty thousand dead, produced a similar phenomenon. Lord Perth, writing to his sister in the following summer described the appearance of the field in words which gave Macaulay an opportunity for a characteristic flight. "During many months the ground was strewn with skulls and bones of horses and men. The next summer the soil, fertilized by twenty thousand corpses, broke forth into millions of poppies. The traveler, who on the road from St. Tron to Fillemont, saw that vast sheet of scarlet spreading from Landen in Neerwinden could barely help fancying that the figurative production of the Hebrew prophet was literally accomplished and that the earth was disclosing her blood and refusing to cover the slain."

EDITH CAVELL.

She faced the firing squad alone,
And with unbandaged eyes,
Looked upward to the moon that shone—
The moon of English skies.

The prison faded from her view,
The trampling armed men;
And in the lanes her childhood knew
She roamed a child again.

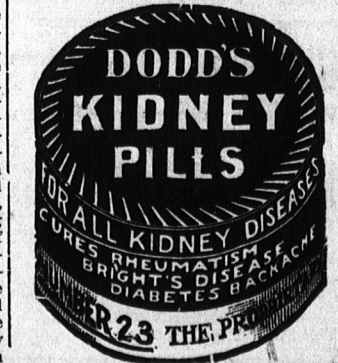

A tin flag upon her breast
Showed where her heart did lie;
"I'm glad"—she smilingly confessed—
"For England's sake to die."

A volley!—and her spirit fled
From earth without a groan—
O foemen! wept ye o'er the dead,
Or had ye hearts of stone?

Knew none of you her gentle hand?
Had smoothed your comrades cot?
Shrank none of you from their command
To fire the fatal shot?

Her blood proclaims with crimson stain
The doom of tyranny;
They die for freedom not in vain
Who die as brave as she.

THE ONLY PLAYER-PIANO WITH AN ALUMINUM ACTION

A DISTINCTIVE INSTRUMENT

The swelling and the shrinkage of wood which take place with climatic changes open up minute passages through which the air escapes, and if leakage of air takes place, then the action immediately deteriorates. The Aluminum Action in the Heintzman & Co. Player-Piano provides against this common weakness of other Player-Pianos.
