Fifteen perfect aeroplanes arrived here last Saturday the 12th. They flew about 500 feet above the surface of the ground and maintained their course in a horizontal direction for about two miles when they made a safe and easy landing. They had come a distance of 1800 miles or so by stages but could if they wished have made the trip in one hop but preferred to explore and investigate the most interesting places and such competent navigators are they that they required neither sextant, quadrant, wireless, radiogram, or compass and besides that they manufactured and applied their own motive power as they went along and this is their constant habit. Their engine is for all that a very old type, still it surpasses any machine ever yet invented. You will now know at once who they are. They are a flock of wild geese.

Golf, tennis, baseball, football, polo, wrestling, boxing, running, jumping, hockey, fencing with the foils, all have their fervent admirers and all continue to attract the crowd and the money of the crowd but who cares to see or pay for a contest in which every move makes for rest utility? Who wants to watch a potato hoeing Marathon or a stumping bee or a tree felling classic? Answer is no one does. Does any one get excited or enthused in the matter of starting a ploughing match? Not one. Where is the ecstasy of the good days of yore in a stooking struggle? Is the man who hauls and spreads from 80 to 100 loads of manure in a day any longer appreciated by a cloud of witnesses? He doesn't get a hand clap. The base ball fan who is ready at the slightest encouragement to leap insanely in the air and put himself in danger of breaking his own neck, never blinks an eyelash when he sees a man filling a pail with blue berries in the space of an hour. I have in mind a man who can go into the field and hoe out an acre of potatoes in one day and do it clean or attack an army of stumps with neither powder nor dynamite and annihilate them in a shorter time than the average two men or can go into the forest and make a clearance there in a day that would take your breath away. But when Babe Ruth makes a home run the event is heralded all around the world as if it were something really important while the hero of the hour and axe is surrounded by a vast volume of dismaying silence. This is regrettable and ought to be amended. I might make many suggestions but having done my duty as I see it in calling attention to the condition as it lies and not wishing to weary the reader further I leave the matter in the hands of a competent public who no doubt will see that proper action is taken.—H.

That was a good little note on Salmagundi. Mr. "H." Here is something more. When the hoboes in the country to the South convene, I have read that they cast all their broken meats into a common stock and make a stew which they call "Slumgullion." Evidently some one, who like Darius good and great had "fallen from his high estate" (as the poet says,) had named the savory mess "salmagundi," and his less educated fellows wrought it into the pleasing word slumgullion.—Agricola.

"At last—I learn the secret of making good Pie Crust"

(From "Letters to Mother," by a Modern Canadian Housewife.) "Yesterday was Bob's birthday, so I decided to surprise him by making his favorite Butterscotch Pie. He often hinted I didn't make very good pie crust, but he didn't say it this time—he asked for more pie."

You will be interested in learning the secret of my success. When I was away I wrote you about meeting a Mrs. Dee. I dropped in to see her one afternoon when she was making pies. I knew she made delicious pie crust so I asked her how she made it. "I always use 'Purity Flour'," she said, and as I had never used it for pastry I asked her reasons. "I have two very good reasons" said Mrs. Dee. "In the first place Purity Flour is milled from hard spring wheat, grown on the prairies of the Canadian West which gives it a really wonderful flavor. In the second place the quality is always the same—the best."

Mrs. Dee says that tough pastry comes from wet dough and short pastry from dry dough, so now I use water sparingly and always cold water, because by doing so the fat remains more solid, does not soak up into the flour and you have what is called "short pastry." Mrs. Dee also said that fat should be worked in by cutting and pinching, not by kneading and pressing, and all the handling throughout should be as light as possible.

You can't imagine Mother, how pleased I am that I have learned the secret of making good pie crust, for now I shall never worry again about serving pie when we have company for dinner.

Your loving Betty
