at an imperial soil-mixing service on the second anniversary of the founding of the French Legion, the only sanctioned political movement in unoccupied France.

He told the Legion members that a "sect mocking the noblest sentiments pursues its labor of treason under cover of patriotism."

While the Marshal insisted the Vichy Government will carry out its program of "revolution" despite all obstacles, he did not elaborate on details of French domestic politics, his international policy, or the Government's present attitude to send workmen to Germany.

He also passed over a subject on which the French press has been expressing concern—the status of Dakar.

The papers published dispatches from Berlin charging that the United States fleet is preparing to take possession of Dakar, the Azores, the Canary and Cape Verde Islands as soon as the rainy season is past.

The impression prevailed that Dakar and other French territories in Africa have assumed tactical importance because of Brazil's entry into the war.

(The comparatively short distance between Natal, port on the "eastward bulge of Brazil," and Dakar last week prompted Col. Lysias A. Rodrigues of the Brazilian air force general staff to call it the "strait of Dakar" and to call Brazil a great promontory favorable for offensive action.)

(Rumors reported in Stockholm dispatches said Laval was to be sent to Berlin to permit the stationing of a German division at Dakar to protect French territory.)

hito, keeping Grew in "entire ignorance" of the attack on Pearl Harbor even as conversations took place.

The atrocities, Grew said, represented "the ugly side" of the Japanese people—the cruelty, brutality and utter bestiality, the ruthlessness and rapaciousness of the Japanese military machine which brought on this war.

Personal friends of long standing, he related, tried to ease his days of imprisonment after Dec. 7 with gifts of food "sometimes a piece of meat, which was the most precious gift they could confer because they themselves could seldom get meat. They were personally loyal to me to the end."

But as patriots he continued, even these Japanese "will fight for their Emperor and Country, and to the last ditch if necessary."

of the territory Japan gained this summer in the two provinces.

(The Japanese, however, tell a different story. A Tokyo report broadcast by Berlin quoted Japanese imperial headquarters as saying the Chinese had not scored successes in their drive; that they had merely occupied districts evacuated by the Japanese in the course of a "regrouping" of their soldiers in the two provinces; and that the Japanese held "all important strategic districts" in the two provinces from which an air offensive might be started against Japan.)

There were no further reports tonight on the progress of the new Chinese drive north of Canton in south China.

(The Japanese said that several units of their forces in south China had established themselves along a new front after "attaining their objectives" against Chungking forces.)

fighting on its western bank." On the Stalingrad front, the communique said, "fierce fighting continued" northwest of the city, where "all German attacks were repulsed. It added:—

"In some sectors our units delivered counterblows, handing the enemy heavy losses."

Southwest of Stalingrad in the Kotelnikovski area, the communique said, one Soviet unit repulsed two German attacks, "destroying three enemy tanks and wiping out a company of infantry."

"One Soviet unit dealt a counter-blow and captured four anti-tank guns, 12 mortars, 12 machine-guns and other war materials," it said. "The Germans lost over 200 officers and men in killed alone."

The intensity of air activity over the various fronts was indicated by an increase in airplane losses listed in the weekly summary of the Soviet high command. During the week ending Aug. 29, the communique said, the Germans lost 498 planes and the Russians 206. These figures are the highest in many weeks. Losses as listed by the Russians recently have been: week ending Aug. 8, "about 400" German planes, 206 Russian; week ending Aug. 15, 359 German planes, 241 Russian; week ending Aug. 22, 341 German planes, 194 Russian.

optimistic Saturday on the basis of reports received up to that time. The new reinforcements may change the balance of power, however, the fighting was under the worst conditions, in deep jungle growth in incessant rain.

General Sir Thomas Blamey, commander of Allied forces in the Pacific, conferred with Army Minister Francis Forde on the situation in New Guinea, the Solomons and Northern Australia.

After the meeting, Mr. Forde said there was a feeling of confidence that Australian troops were well equipped and well trained, ready for any eventuality. Americans in the Milne Bay area are mostly supply troops and the Australians predominate in the Allied battle forces.

announced today, when a small number of Axis planes tried to pierce the defenses of Malta. Two of the bombers were shot down and another was believed to have been destroyed.

Malta, which recently received important reinforcements, got into action at once.

British night fighters swarmed over to Sicily, attacked a s.a. plane base, brought down one German seaplane and shot up a motor vessel in a low level.

On Thursday morning the Axis attempted a high-lying fighter sweep near Malta, but Spitfires engaged the enemy planes at sea and caused the loss of the fighters, the Air Ministry said.

Later in the day Spitfires strafed the Sicilian airbase, sniping up groups of soldiers, hangars, barracks, storerooms and railroad properties. Enemy planes were attacked in the air and on the ground.

Smoke From Airdromes

This was the first time Spitfires had been used for ground strafing in Sicily. The Air Ministry said dense smoke rose from the airbase destroyed 10 planes, headed back for their bases in Malta. The raiders shot up three schooners off the coast on the way back.

Axis Convoy Raided

At twilight an Axis convoy was attacked with torpedoes and bombs and a medium-size merchant ship, escorted by a destroyer, was sunk by a torpedo. Both the ship and the destroyer were attacked from three different levels and the destroyer was seen to be smoking.

Duke of Kent Funeral Held

LONDON, Aug. 30.—(CP Cable)—The Duchess of Kent, heavily veiled, attended a memorial service today for her husband at the little parish church near which the Duke lived. The Duke was killed last week in a plane crash in north Scotland while bound for Iceland on active service with the R.A.F.

The church was crowded with villagers. The service originally was planned for Saturday when the funeral of the Duke was held. It was postponed at the request of the Duchess so that she could attend.

The Duchess sat in the chancel close to the altar and showed deep distress when the Bishop of Buckingham, who conducted the service said: "let us humbly remember before God his Royal Highness George Edward Alexander, Edmund, the Duke of Kent, and all those who died with him."

At the request of the Duchess, this was the only reference to her husband during the short service. The Duchess chose the hymn "On the Resurrection Morning" to be sung and the 23rd Psalm to be read.

While deep in her own sorrow the Duchess did not forget the widow of another airman who died in the crash of the Duke's plane. While the body of the Duke was laid to rest at Windsor, Po. Hon. Mieshe! Strutt, the Duke's aide who trained for the R.A.F. in Canada, was buried at Nottinghamshire.

Strutt's coffin there was a wreath with a message to his widow from the Duchess. It read: "with heartfelt sympathy in our mutual bereavement."

The Duke was buried Saturday in a vault of St. George's Chapel at Windsor.

The King and Queen, King Haakon of Norway, King George of Greece and King Peter of Yugoslavia, and Queen Wilhelmina of Holland were among the mourners.

The Duchess of Kent entered the chapel with Queen Elizabeth and Queen Mary, all wearing heavy veils. The Duchess sobbed throughout the brief service, conducted by the Dean of Windsor.

than Scilla. The bulbs increase rapidly and require diving every few years. The leaves grow in autumn and should not be cut off. Narcissus, Adonis, is the true harbinger of spring with its beautiful yellow flowers nodding in the breeze. The bulbs should be planted early in September and in cold districts the bed should be mulched. There are a great number of varieties and many of them are listed by Canadian bulb dealers. Tulip is perhaps the best known of all spring flowering bulbs as it has been a feature of plantings in city parks for many years. The early-flowering varieties used to be done when the foliage dries up in July. The bulbs, after drying, should be cleaned and then kept in a dry airy place until late September.

Plant Bulbs now for Spring Flowers

The earliest flowers to bloom in spring are the bulbs which should be planted in September or October. Most of them are hardy except in very cold districts where the snow covering is uncertain. In such places, where the snow drifts and remains all winter should be chosen, if possible, or a covering of straw or sawy manure should be applied as soon as the ground freezes, says Miss Isabella Preston, Division of Horticulture, Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa.

Bulbs will grow in any good garden soil that is well drained and they may not be planted in ground on which the water soaks for a lengthy period in spring. The bulbs should be planted deep enough so that the top is two inches below the surface of the soil.

Chionodoxa, Glory of the Snow, is one of the earliest flowers to bloom and its pretty pale blue blossoms which face upwards open as soon as the snow melts. If allowed to do so the flowers set seed and self sow. In a few years they will have increased considerably.

Scilla sibirica, Siberian Squills, blooms a little later and the flowers are more bell shaped and deep blue in colour. These will flower under shrubs and are particularly effective if grown in a sloping bank. These also increase rapidly.

Crocus flowers early if grown in a sheltered position, such as near the house, facing south. There are white, yellow and purple varieties.

Muscari, Grape Hyacinth, has a number of small blue flowers arranged in a long stem of an eight inch stem. They bloom a little later from their hangers, stuffing them into the suitcase. From a bureau drawer, he grabbed some shirts. As Anne watched him, she was panic-stricken. She knew the shirt had come to take back her words—to beg him not to leave. But she seemed tongue-tied.

When she finally did speak, it was to say, "You'd better take the car if it's snowing."

"Mont didn't look up. 'I won't need it.'"

"But you can't walk!"

"Oh, yes, I can!"

He walked over to the bureau, opened a top drawer, and took out his thirty-eight. He dropped the gun into his pocket. Then, picking up his suitcase, he walked out.

Anne felt numb. So this, she thought, was the way a marriage ended. Suddenly and dramatically. She could still call him back, but she didn't.

She sat there picturing him going along the highway in the snow. Then, the tears came.
