Youth Rides West

By Will Irwin

"Troubles came all together. My father died. I went to him at the last—my stepmother could not prevent. I won't I can't now—tell you all about that. But I knew that he loved me; and that if I hadn't made a wrong headed little fool of myself by eloping with Martin Deane—we'd have found a way in was very ill—typhoid fever. Nearly died. Martin stayed by. My father had made a codicil in his will a month before his death. He left me ten thousand dollars. Some of that was needed to pay our debts. . . .

"When I was better Martin and I talked it all over. There was no use of staying in Providence. He wanted to go West and start again—honestly I gave him half my money. He was to get settled and send for me. I was in on condition to travel. I got my strength back very slowly. I had much time to myself—I was very, very lonely. And I suppose when you're in such a state as I was then, and having been so near death—you see things more clearly. I had been greatly to blame. I ran away with him to spite my stepmother as for any other reason. I didn't really love him as I might have loved—a good man. But I loved him enough. He'd never once been harsh or cruel to me. That's a great deal isn't it? And I could show him the right way. I'd prove that. He had never grown up, on one side of him and never would. He didn't see right and wrong clearly—just as a little boy doesn't. I won't pretend to you, Robert, that I didn't have moments when I was tempted to leave him. But I knew that if I did I could never be happy. I should always be thinking of him out in the world, with no one to take care of—of his soul. That's what it comes down to, Robert. Saving his soul. At bottom, you know, I'm religious. . . .

She paused; her eyes, great and tender with shadow of old suffering, clutched mine and seemed to plead for approval. I could not with hold it.

"I see you believe all this, Constance," I said.

"It was my job. My job for life. He went to Wyoming—last summer. He wrote now and then. I wrote constantly. He was doing well, he said. Business. He wasn't very definite about the business. In the winter he moved to Denver. I addressed him through the general delivery. I wrote that I was coming to him in the spring. He advised me to wait awhile. Said he wasn't quite settled. But I knew the longer I waited the harder it would be. In the spring I started. I wrote to say when I would arrive. He wasn't waiting at the station. . . .

"One of Martin's notes to me was on the letterhead of the Canyon house in Denver. It's a hotel down by the railroad station. Not a very pleasant place. He had gone to Cottonwood a month before. I asked the clerk what Maxwell had done for a living in Denver. He evaded that.

"So I started for Cottonwood. You know the rest—"

Constance dropped her eyes to her clasped hands.

"I couldn't have said all this to you if I hadn't been through—what happened today. Even if things had gone—happily—if that had been possible—I would have been a long time bringing myself to say this. But when I looked at you first—I knew. I knew you were everything I had ever loved in Martin Deane and, oh, all I was hungry for! To see you every day—and know you loved me—and to go to bed early—to think of you. But it was wrong. It was where I very nearly failed—"

I burst out here:

"You mustn't say that! I went out to capture your husband last night because I was jealous—"

"Poor Robert! I had given you much provocation!" was all she said to that. "And then—I found him. I was riding up the trail to Forty-Rod. He came out of the pines. He was riding a black horse. Of course he was astonished. And yet he was glad. He—I felt he still loved me, in spite of the way he'd kept me in the East. That I wanted him to love me—with you in the world. But so long as he loved me—there was a chance. He was mining about Forty-Rod. They expected to strike it soon, he said. Three weeks would

SUMMERSIDE

"That's good," she said. "Not the part about me—but about you. It is you as I'd like like you." Then she smiled almost like her old self in her merry moods. Can't we forget this morning—for a moment? And oh, Robert, you are so tired! You've had a dreadful, dreadful night and day! You must sleep now!"

"Sleep!" I said. "When I have a few hours with you and may not see you for years!" But even as I spoke a rush of inner drowsiness made insincere my words.

Constance looked outside. The tentflaps gaped wide, making visible this rude apartment to all the world.

"This camp doubtless thinks about as scandalously of you and me as it can," she said. "Look, Robert—I'm going to make you lie down on my bed."

Had I been myself, I should have protested. As it was, I yielded like a sleepy child. She wet a towel, washed my face. She loosened my collar. Her touch, which normally roused every fibre in me, was now heavenly soothing. She held my shoulders as I stretched out my aching muscles on the white sheet-coupler; she knelt beside me holding and patting my hand. Once she looked swiftly out of doors, then bent and kissed my forehead. I raised my other hand to embrace her, but she put it gently back. . . . I was gone. . . .

A light shone in my face. I sprang up sitting. Twilight without. Mrs. Barnaby shading an oil lamp with her hand.

"Seven o'clock!" said Mrs. Barn-

aby. "Your boss has been looking over the hull camp for you. Says he's wanted at town meeting and you've got to get out the paper, though why it should get out—"

"Where's Constance—Mrs. Deane?" I asked.

"Her? Oh, she took the two o'clock stage to Denver. Didn't she tell she was going to?"

Public Notice As To Applications For Oyster Farming Leases

Applications for leases of Prince Edward Island areas for oyster farming purposes will now be received by the Department of Fisheries, Ottawa.

Leases will be granted in Malpeque Bay and its tributary rivers and in such other areas as are not now public commercial oyster beds and are approved by the Department as suitable for oyster farming. A plan showing the lots available for leasing in the Malpeque Bay area may be consulted, without charge, at the office of the Supervisor of Fisheries, Charlottetown, or at the Biological Station at Ellerslie or the office of any Inspector of Fisheries in the province.

Summary of Major Leasing Conditions

- Before a lease is granted, the area applied for it to be examined by the Department's oyster expert.
 - Each lease will be for a term of 20 years and will be renewable for a further like period.
 - Rentals on the following basis will be payable under each lease: $1.00 per annum during the first three years for each acre or fraction of an acre leased, $3.00 per annum per acre or fraction of an acre during the next two years, and from that time onward a reasonable royalty per barrel will also be charged on production.
 - Information as to the most effective methods of oyster farming, obtained by the Department through the investigation which it has been conducting in the Malpeque Bay area, will be made available to applicants for leases, or intending applicants, upon request.
- WM. A. FOUND, Deputy Minister of Fisheries, Oct. 21-W-S-81.

Rules Governing Guardian "Famous Canadians" Contest

Everyone who is a paid in advance subscriber excepting employees of The Guardian and their families may take part. As many members of one family of a paid in advance subscriber may compete as desire and any subscriber may send in as many sets of answers as he or she wishes, but each set must be complete and will be judged individually.

The successful competitors whose subscriptions are paid farthest into 1932 will have the preference.

Clip the picture and coupon underneath it every day and write the answer on the blank line. Save all your clippings until the end of the contest and then send them to the "Famous Canadians" Contest Editor of The Guardian in one batch. Name and address should be included, clearly written or printed, and securely attached to your solutions. It will facilitate handling if you bind your solutions by sewing along the top, or using paper fasteners.

In sending more than one solution, each solution must be enclosed in a separate envelope.

Please attach sufficient postage as, otherwise, it may be necessary to refuse acceptance of the mail.

In case of a tie The Guardian reserves the right to publish one or more tie-breaking puzzles.

The judges' decision will be final in all matters, and The Guardian will not undertake to enter into correspondence with any individual regarding the decision of the judges.
