Enthusiastic Meeting Of P.E.I. Fox Ranchers

tion of what co-operation and advertising could do. He pointed to the Egg and Poultry Association. Formerly farmers kept hens as a side line. They observed no method in feeding, and anything that was laid on two feet and wings they regarded as a hen. There were no particular places in which to keep the poultry; the eggs were gathered and kept in a basket under the bed, and when there was a basketful the eggs were marketed. The result of this haphazard way of doing this was that Prince Edward Island had a poor reputation for eggs. Co-operation had changed all this and produced success. The egg circles had impressed the farmers with the necessity for proper systematic handling of their eggs and the proper care of their poultry, and today any man who goes about the business in the right way can obtain good returns.

Mr. Arsenault then went on to show the great importance of quality rather than quantity in the production of pelts and pointed out the advantage of having one selling agency disposing of pelts to many buyers. What was needed was the creation of demand. With out demand it was useless to increase production; demand must always be ahead of supply. Fox ranchers must take proper means to see that the necessary markets were created to come with increased supply. The industry has now reached the point where the supply of the rancher and today there are some five or six thousand silver fox skins on the market unsold. Therefore if something is not done to create a demand the market may be glutted next year.

Mr. Arsenault said that there were 80,000 millionaires in the United States, and the silver fox fur of Prince Edward Island was properly trade marked and advertised, it would be a matter of no difficulty to dispose of all the skins that could be produced in this province. He said that those who had made a success of the fruit industry on the Pacific coast had been the greatest advertisers.

The speech in which he outlined the objects of the organization was a lengthy one replete with valuable information and he asked for a subscription of $50 for every pair of silver foxes. The association aimed at $250,000 to take care of the business.

Mr. W. K. Rogers, gave a very practical address in which he showed the necessity for an organization. He had seen all sorts of furs worn by the ladies in the United States and he ventured to say that 90 per cent of those who were able to buy the most expensive furs knew nothing about the silver fox. It was important to create a demand and to tell those people something about this industry. He thought that this meeting was the most important ever held in connection with the fox industry, and said that the question was whether the fox ranchers would form a co-operative association to further the interests of the industry. This was not a child's play; they must stand behind it with their money. He did not think that a subscription of $50 on every pair of foxes was excessive; it would be a good investment. He represented about 900 pairs of foxes and he would back every pair with fifty dollars.

Mr. E. H. Ravnor, in a brief but able speech, expressed approval of the project and spoke on the value of co-operation. He said that the basis of co-operation was confidence. He used the fox breeders of Prince Edward Island to have confidence, first in themselves, and next in their fellow business men. He said they were too distant to one another and to imagine that when any one began to promote some new movement his sole purpose was to line his own pocket at the expense of the public. He assured them that there was no intention on the part of any one to make money out of the other people's pockets. He spoke of the value of trade marks and of the value of the trade and in conclusion expressed his hearty support of the movement, which he commended to every thoughtful and earnest business man.

Rev. Dr. Gauthier spoke of the importance of co-operation and agreed with Mr. Ravnor that this was certainly the most important meeting that had been held in connection with the fox business. Mr. Rogers had said he was prepared to put $10,000 into the new association, and this amply proved his faith in the proposition. The doctor urged all present to lend their support.

JUST A GIRL

BY JANE PHELPS

WORK AGAIN—FOR EIGHT DOLLARS

Chapter 70

"We will have to move, Mary," I declared when we reached the street. "We can't stay in this neighborhood any longer. After tonight they will be angry, and perhaps annoy us more than ever. I am beginning to be afraid of them."

Both Mike and Joe had flashed sullen, angry glances at us when we hurried away from the motion picture show.

"Yes—I guess we got to move. It makes me mad to have them two oughts run us out!"

"I'll get a position first, then we'll find a place as near where we both work as we can, and move 'right away'."

Morley I commenced the round of the department stores again. The one where I hoped to get work had already all the help they wanted, so I moved along, taking them all in—just as they came. After several refusals and some insulting remarks about my not looking like a girl who wanted work, I found a position at last at the notion counter of one of the large department stores, at $8 a week.

"They only paid me $6 when I started," I heard a girl mutter, and wondered if I had been given $6 how I could have lived. Everything cost so much that even the $8 would not allow me to send Morley to school. I would have to give up my meals instead of eating them in addition to my salary, as I had at the restaurant.

However, I didn't dare refuse to place. I was tired, almost discouraged. No one wanted me, an inexperienced girl. I must manage somehow to learn typing and stenography. Yet how was I to do it on $8 a week?

"Be sure you are here on time. We look you for tardiness," the stern looking man who had hired me, remarked as I left the office.

"Yes, sir," I answered as meekly as any little ignorant girl could have answered. I must work. Evidently meekness was expected of a working girl, so I would, cultivate it.

"I won't let them crush me though," I said aloud, when I reached the street. My cheeks burned hotly, and I was trembling. "I'll learn something so that I can do office work! I'll manage it somehow!"

The $8 would keep me going, I argued, not something better. I must not realize in the least that the return I must give for that $8 would leave me neither time nor strength for anything else.

I stopped to see Mary. Fortunately, Mr. Watson was out, so I felt no embarrassment, only regret that I had been obliged to leave when the girls all greeted me pleasantly and said they missed me.

"I'll spend the rest of the day hunting a place to live," I told Mary.

We talked things over for a few moments—it was dull time in the restaurant—and then I started out. I had taken a list of the advertised boarding houses in Sunday's paper, so I would waste no time.

About noon I found a place. Mrs. Leary seemed a good soul and her house was clean. I took the two back hall bedrooms on the top floor.

"Why don't you be a bit kind the big van in front, Miss, if there's two of ye?"

Mrs. Leary. We work hard and need to have more rest than we could get if we roomed together."

"It's right ye are! I was only a thinkin' it would be a bit pleasant for ye. The back ain't much to see."

"We won't have much time to look out of the windows, and so long as it is clean, and comfortable that is all we require."

"Where do you work?" she asked rather sharply, giving me a keen look.

"In Marden's Department store. Mary Murphy works in a restaurant. May I ask why? Does it make any difference where your roomers work?"

"No—dearie, I only asked because you seemed so good spoken. Different folks. But—the other, Mary Murphy, is she like you too?"

To-morrow—A New Home

I fell from a building and received what the doctor called a very bad sprained ankle, and told me I must not walk on it for three weeks. I got MINARD'S LINIMENT and in six days I was out to work again. I think it the best Liniment male.

Cleanings From Baptist Convention

During the morning service at the Baptist Church last Sunday, the pastor, Rev. Mr. Freeman gave a report of the Northern Baptist Convention which met at Buffalo on June 23rd to 29th, which he attended and at which about 4,000 delegates from all parts of the Northern States were present. Mr. Freeman read the following resolutions, which were unanimously adopted at the Convention:

Dr. Carter Helm Jones, of Pennsylvania, for the Resolutions Committee, presented the following presentation on the Peace Treaty.

Since our Nation should be loyal to the obligations, direct and indirect which it incurred when under clear providential leadership it threw its resources of treasure and far more precious blood into the defense of free institutions and since these obligations have not been fully met by our victories in battle, but involve our whole-hearted cooperation with the nations which were our brothers in arms in further sacrifices to promote the ends of a Christianized civilization and a world peace; therefore we, the representatives of a million and a half of Northern Baptists in convention assembled, deeply deplore the failure of the President and the Senate of the United States to come to terms of agreement in ratification of the treaty of peace and covenant of nations, thereby leaving the world in chaos, ignoring the plainly indicated desire and will of the people, and forfeiting our conceded leadership in world reconstruction. We express our conviction that such great moral issues should not be degraded to the plane of partisan politics, and respectfully urge upon our President and the Senate the ratification of the treaty, with suitable reservations, at the earliest possible moment.

The resolution introduced by Dr. Carter Helm Jones, of Pennsylvania, chairman of the resolutions committee, was as follows:

Whereas, we believe that it is in the interest of Protestantism and humanity that friendly relations should be maintained between the United States and Great Britain, the two great English-speaking peoples of the world, and

Whereas, certain agitators are manifestly seeking to disturb, in our country, those friendly relations, and

Whereas, we are unalterably opposed to Great Britain or any other nation meddling with the internal affairs of the United States Government; therefore

Resolved, that we earnestly protest any kind of propaganda, religious or political, which seeks to induce the Government of the United States to meddle with the internal affairs of Great Britain.

This Beautiful $1,300 Gerhard Heintzman Piano to be Given Away by The Guardian Publishing Co.

This magnificent $1,300 Gerhard Heintzman all-metal player piano is a masterpiece of the Canadian piano builders art. It is an instrument that has won immediate fame and response from music lovers, through sheer quality and worth.

This player piano is the most advanced conception of the genius of Gerhard Heintzman himself, and his wonderful organization of artists, designers and engineers.

This player piano was purchased from R.T. Holman Limited, Summerside, who are wholesale distributors for these pianos for the whole of Prince Edward Island, and its fame is spreading and sweeping like a land-slide.

This exceedingly valuable player piano will make a prize to be coveted, and doubtless there will be keen rivalry for it.

At the present time this instrument is on exhibition at the store of R. T. Holman, Ltd., Summerside.

The Gerhard Heintzman piano recital in Holman's store Saturday evening was an immense success in every way. Although the weather was anything but desirable the hall was crowded to capacity, and those present had the best entertainment of its kind ever heard in Summerside.

Mr. P. E. Morris, who is one of the leading pianists in America, simply captivated his audience.

The program was one of a very high order including the following numbers: Movement Perpetual, Weber. Sonata, Kuhlau. Sonata (moonlight) Opus 27 No 2, Beethoven.

AN ODORLESS SKUNK.

NORWALK, O., July 27—Fred Reamer, owner of a large skunk farm outside the city, is frankly a lover of his animals. Wanting others to love, honor, reverence and admire them, Fred proposes to breed an odorless skunk, by using animals from which the scent glands have been removed.

He calls the skunk kindly, friendly, easy to get along with, inoffensive (except odoriferously, perhaps) and, if properly treated, a fine domestic pet. He intends to guarantee prospective purchasers of this odorless skunk that they are taking no chances in caressing their pets.

It Is Iron In The Blood That Makes Iron Muscles Like These

Physician Explains a Secret of the Great Power and Endurance of Athletes—Tells How Organic Iron—Nuxated Iron Helps Build Rich, Red Blood That Gives Physical Strength and Energy

To touch the arm of a strong, sturdy man—to feel the steel-like firmness of those muscular sinews—to think of the tremendous force and power that must lie behind such strength—these are thrills that come to the thin-blooded men and women whose own bodies are weak and physically unfit.

It takes men physical strength and power to hit the sledge-hammer blows that count—and whether you are a pile-driver or a bank president you cannot expect to stand against odds forever unless you are a man of iron—constantly able to strike—and strike hard.

There are countless numbers of men today who at 40 are broken in health and steadily going downward to physical and mental decay," says Dr. John Van Horne, formerly Medical Inspector and Clinical Physician on the Board of Health of New York City.

These men who undergo a most remarkable transformation the moment they get plenty of the rich kind of iron into their blood to give increased energy and endurance. To help build stronger, healthier men and women, better able physically to meet the problems of everyday life, Dr. Van Horne would, at every opportunity prescribe organic iron—Nuxated Iron—for in his experience it is one of the best tonic and red blood builders known to medical science.

IRELAND'S SITUATION VERY GRAVE

LONDON, July 25.—Sir Horace Plunkett, founder of the Irish Dominion League, and leader of the moderate Irish Nationalist opinion, told a Newcast audience yesterday that the situation in Ireland is more gravely alarming than it has been within his knowledge of sixty years. A similar view is reflected by the newspapers of both England and Ireland of all shades of politics. It found expression in all the speeches of Thursday's discussions in the House of Commons, even Sir Edward Carson declaring he had never known anything like the state of anarchy prevailing, and that "in three-quarters of Ireland the British government has been entirely beaten."

Sir Hamar Greenwood, chief secretary for Ireland, warned the country to brace itself against a bitter period in Irish history.

The rioting in Belfast subsided yesterday, but there are plenty of signs that the lull is only temporary.

Both from Mr. Lloyd George's statement to the labor delegation Thursday, and from Sir Hamar's speech, it is considered apparent that the Government regards a part of the ways as having been reached. One road leads toward negotiation with the Sinn Fein on the basis of a Dominion form of government, while the other apparently leads toward the bitter period which Sir Hamar foresees with more soldiers and stricter laws for repression, foremost among them, include ones for the trial of criminals by summary courts and the giving up of attempts to induce jury men to answer a summons.

There are two extreme factions in Ireland now, the Orangemen of the North, who insist upon maintaining the Irish system, as it is, and the Sinn Feiners who demand independence. Between these poles lies the middle course, of Dominion Government with Ulster excluded, which Mr. Lloyd George has declared he is willing to consider.
