The Guardian's subscription department number is 132-2 and that of advertising 132-3. (News department is 132-2 and editorial 132-3. And yet many people continue to ring the advertising department when they desire information about this paper or about news. They ring advertising or news departments. They ring the news department when they really want advertising or subscription information, etc. This continuous mix up, which could be easily avoided by looking up the proper numbers, wastes an enormous amount of time besides giving so much trouble in the various departments.
