Contract Bridge
By Josephine Culbertson

Salvaging a Grand Slam
The bidding in today's deal was a shade ambitious, but the declarer brought home his grand slam contract despite a very bad break in the trump suit.

The bidding:
South West North East
1 Pass 3 Pass
3 Pass 4 N T Pass
5 Pass 5 N T Pass
6 Pass 7 Pass

As will have been noticed, North bid his hand right up to the hilt, and perhaps an inch or two beyond. Nevertheless, with any reasonable trump break, South could have ruffed a club in dummy and in that way collected his 13 tricks without difficulty.
As it was, when West opened the club nine and dummy's king won the trick, the first lead of trumps disclosed that South could not afford to use one of dummy's trump honors for a club ruff, because to do so would surely establish West's ten of spades. Thus, South had to look around for a different possibility.

The fact that East was void of spades, plus the fact that West's nine of clubs opening lead had obviously been the top of nothing, added up to the logical conclusion that East had length in both clubs and hearts. The singleton diamond in South's own hand suggested that not much could be done in the diamond suit, but there was a distinct possibility in hearts and or clubs, and South "cut his cloth" accordingly.
Dummy's two remaining trumps were cashed, then South led to the heart king, drew West's last trump, cashed the heart ace and ruffed a heart. He now cashed his own last trump, discarding a diamond from dummy. When he then led the diamond queen to the ace, East was squeezed. To keep the and South made the last three tricks with his own three clubs.
