In Memoriam

MRS. WILLIAM GRAHAM, BRADALBANE

On Thursday, April 26th, Mrs. William Graham of Bradalbane, aged 33 years passed quietly and hopefully from this world of shadows to the brighter land of spirits, mourned by a wide circle of friends and relatives. For two years she battled bravely against disease, supported by every resource of her husband and kinsfolk, only to succumb at last to the enemy. Winsome, kindly, lovable, she will be greatly missed in the community where she has lived during the eight years of her married life, as well as in Freetown, her early home, where her parents and brothers and sisters still live. For over 20 years she was a member of the North Bedeque and Freetown Church.

The funeral was held from the home in Bradalbane on Saturday and interment took place in the People's Cemetery, Freetown. Rev. Mr. Wallis of Bradalbane and Mr. Nicholson of North Bedeque officiated at the ceremony. Members of the choirs of Freetown and Bradalbane United Churches led the music. In spite of bad roads and threatening weather there was a large gathering to show their sympathy with the sorely bereaved husband in his great loneliness, there being no children, and with the relatives of the deceased.

Pall bearers: Fred and Wilbert Drummond, Preston Wadman, Alex and Owen MacDonald and Albert Stetson.

Flower Gifts: Pillow, from Husband, Father and Family; Crescent, Mr. and Mrs. Lohnes and Marion; Spray, Mr. and Mrs. John Frizzell and family; Spray, Mr. and Mrs. Lee Campbell; Wreath, Mr. and Mrs. Wilbert Reeves; Wreath, Alex and Owen MacDonald and Family.

VANCOUVER, May 8— Miss Faith Wilson, 27 year old pianist, today was recovering in hospital from what was believed to be a nervous breakdown during which she disappeared after booking passage from Victoria to Seattle.

Miss Wilson was discovered yesterday in hospital after she had been sought since Saturday by British Columbia provincial police. She had booked the same stateroom as reserved by Miss Irene Dick, Victoria violinist, who has been missing since February.

Liberals Decry Empire Pacts In British Commons

(By George Hambleton Canadian Press Staff Writer by Guardian's Special Wire)

LONDON, May 8—The House of Commons was stirred yesterday by a vigorous debate over the Government's failure to act on a proposal in which New Zealand offered reduction or removal of its protective tariff against British goods in return for a guarantee that her primary products would continue to enjoy unrestricted entry into the United Kingdom.

The issue was raised by Sir Herbert Samuel, leader of the Liberal opposition, during debate in committee of supply. Background of the question is this:

Last October the New Zealand Government cabled Dominion Secretary J. H. Thomas asking if the United Kingdom would promise continued unrestricted entry for the Dominion's primary products if New Zealand reduced drastically or removed completely protective tariffs against British goods.

Mr. Thomas replied two months later with a message that L. S. Amery, former Dominions Secretary described as evasive. Mr. Amery was backed up by Sir Robert Hamilton, Liberal who resigned his position as parliamentary undersecretary of the Colonial Office because he disapproved of the Ottawa Economic Conference agreements. Sir Robert said Mr. Thomas' answer had been a "perfect dismissal."

Yesterday's debate revealed some change in ideas. Sir Herbert dismissed the old "Little England" concept and avowed himself in favor of Empire free trade as long as such a condition did not mean Empire protection.

Mr. Thomas' Attitude

His assertion drew from Mr. Thomas the reply an Empire free trader could not bring to his support any responsible statesman in any Dominion.

Earl Winterton, Conservative member for Horsham and Worthing, rose from his seat behind Mr. Thomas and remarked curtly that he objected to "foolish remarks that members of the government make from time to time." He added the warning that members of the administration should be careful in attacking what was a cherished ideal of many of their supporters.

Mr. Thomas maintained the United Kingdom could have taken no other action than it did in regard to the New Zealand proposition and added the Dominion made no complaint.

Extention to New Zealand of advantages not given to the other Dominions, he said, would have been the first step of Empire disruption.

Sir Herbert said he saw in the British reply to New Zealand a turning point in Imperial trade and maintained Britain should have made a definite offer. He was supposted by Mr. Amery who maintained Britain should have said to New Zealand:

"We are prepared to go a long way with you in discussing a basis of a new trade agreement."

Further, he said, he could see nothing contrary to the practice of Imperial policy in having different agreements with different Dominions. Any contrary conception arose, he declared, from the old idea that a "mother hen must treat all her chickens alike."

Mr. Thomas stoutly defended the agreements signed at Ottawa and maintained they had been more than justified from the standpoint of results.

Cites Mackenzie King

Sir Herbert, on the other hand, held the pacts were contested as heartily in Canada as in the United Kingdom. He represented Rt. Hon. Mackenzie King, Liberal leader in Canada, as saying that if his group were returned to power he would repeal the "enormous increase" in tariffs against Great Britain imposed by the Government of Prime Minister R. B. Bennett.

These tariffs, Sir Herbert quoted Mr. King as saying, had been reduced to a "trivial" degree by the Ottawa pacts,. He said Mr. King had announced he would be willing to grant a 50-percent British preference.

In turning to the argument over New Zealand's offer Major Gwilym Lloyd George, son of the famous Welsh statesman, David Lloyd George, said New Zealand had merely asked what the British Government went to Ottawa to secure and failed to obtain.

Sir Robert Hamilton returned to the debate by saying he deplored a proposal affecting three vital issues, trade, shipping and migration, had been put aside without consultation.

Discovers Body In Rocky Lake

(C. P. by Guardian's Special Wire)

BEDFORD, N. S., May 7—Men netting minnows in Rocky Lake discovered a body today believed to be that of Joseph A. McDonald, 46-year-old war veteran missing for six months. It was discovered near the railway tracks and it is believed the man must have fallen off a train.

"I would rather ride the rod, than pay my fare," McDonald told J. W. Elliott, Clarance, N. S., apple grower who employed him last fall. He had left Clarence for another job at Truro, but never showed up.

Dr. H. E. Granville, Coroner, ordered an inquest which was adjourned until Wednesday awaiting a post mortem.

McDonald, a pensioner, had received treatment at Camp Hill Hospital, Halifax. He was a native of Glace Bay, N. S.

CITES TRADE BENEFITS TO MARITIMEES

Increase in Maritime Lumber Exports Resulting From Empire Pacts.

(C. P. by Guardian's Special Wire)

OTTAWA, May 8—The Empire agreements have brought good to this country, declared G. B. Nicholson, (Cons. Algoma East) in continuing debate on the budget in the House of Commons last night.

If, he said, the Premiers of New Brunswick and Nova Scotia were consulted, they would tell Hon. J. L. Ralston (Lib. Yarmouth-Shelburne), who had criticized the Ottawa agreements, that these provinces were hardly able to fill the demands for lumber for export to the United Kingdom.

For the whole of Canada, sawn lumber exports had increased from 117,051,000 feet for the year ended March 31, 1932, to 595,647,000 feet for the year ended March 31, 1934, a jump of 500 percent. Sawn lumber exports to the United Kingdom for the year ended March 31, 1934, said Mr. Nicholson, were valued at $10,302,000. There was no industry in Canada which meant so much in the way of giving employment as the forest products industry, said Mr. Nicholson.

Yet, there were people willing to give the wrong impression Canada was not playing fair under the Imperial agreements. As a result of these agreements, a vessel was now on its way to a Georgian Bay canal port to load for Liverpool. It was impossible to exaggerate the stimulus given to the lumber trade by the agreements, stated Mr. Nicholson.

Turning to the mining industry, Mr. Nicholson said the policy of this country in relation to its gold mines should be that there should not be left a single ton of rock in the ground that could be taken out and sold at world prices. It would be an economic waste not to develop the low grade mines. It did not follow those mines producing tremendous wealth should not be taxed. He challenged any member of the House to name a single tariff of this character which had not met with enthusiasm that had not been subject to a substquent revision.

INTERESTING PORTFOLIO — The teacher and pupils of Hopefield School feel justly proud that their Junior Red Cross portfolio has been selected by Miss Jean E. Browne, National Director of Junior Red Cross for Canada, to be used as the portfolio exhibit from Prince Edward Island at the International Red Cross Conference to be held at Tokyo this summer. Miss Brown says, of this portfolio: "The cover is quite striking and the contents are neatly and tastefully arranged. The plan of the portfolio I also consider good and the articles interesting." The teacher, Miss Claire Brehaut, of Murray River, is to be congratulated upon the work of her pupils.

INTERNATIONAL SURVEY — Professor D. C. Harvey, Archivist of Nova Scotia and professor R. A. MacKay of Dalhousie University, Halifax, have been named for the historical committee of the survey of the economic social and political relations of the United States and Canada announced at New York, yesterday by Dr. James T. Shotwell, director of the division of economics and history of the Carnegie Endowment for international peace. The survey, parts of which have been under way for two years, will occupy the next two years with results to be announced this year and next. The survey covering relations of the two countries will begin with the time their people were fur traders and forest rangers and trace down to the present. Such a study Dr. Shotwell stated, constitutes an attack on the problem of international peace from a new angle, in view of the impossibility of war ever happening between the United States and Canada. Dr. Harvey, who has a host of friends in P. E. Island, is a member of the Canadian research committee, there being two, one American and one Canadian each to study the data of their own countries.

LONDON, May 8.—Captain Gerald Lowry, the first British officer to lose his sight in the war, has taken up golf.

He has been playing only a few months, but already is as good as the average golfer. His latest feat is a round in seventy-seven.

Every morning he goes for half an hours practice to the Kensington Country Club. One of the professionals there, Mr. Russell Kelly, has taken him in hand, and goes with him wherever he plays.

Blindfolded

All Mr. Kelly does is to place the club behind the ball. Captain Lowry does the rest, and does it astonishingly well.

He drove a ball recently to within three yards of the hole in one shot.

To learn how to teach a blind man to play, Mr. Kelly blindfolded himself. He found just how each club needed to be placed.

The drive, for instance, is placed about three inches inside the ball.

For a tee shot he puts Captain Lowry in the right position and tells him the distance from the hole.

"I'm playing better golf now than I played before I was blind," said Captain Lowry.

"In some ways I have the advantage of the seeing golfer. I am not frightened by bunkers and obstacles because I don't know they're there.

"It takes me no longer to go round a course than it does any one else.

"I enjoy myself tremendously. In fact, golf has opened up a new life for me.

"I box, and run and swim, but you get too old for those things.

"Golf is a social game. It brings a man into touch with lots of friends, which is so necessary for a blind man."

POWDERED MAPLE SUGAR MADE BY SECRET PROCESS

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont., May 8.—From the maples in Algoma, Indians on the Garden River Reserve near here manufacture their year's supply of sugar. For the Indians manufacture the maple sugar in powder form, usinf a process known only to themselves, and use it very much as others use granulated sugar, in tea, coffee and on their porridge.

Thomas Tribault, well-known citizen of Garden River, states the manufacture of powdered maple sugar goes back for several centuries and has always been carried on by men of the Ojibway tribe. The powdered maple sugar is much like brown sugar in appearance.
