DAILY SELECTIONS FOR GUARDIAN READERS

Furnished by W. S. Louson.
A THOUGHT FOR TODAY.

Turner, the celebrated English landscape painter, whom Ruskin eulogized, was one of the greatest masters of color and one of the profoundest students of nature that ever lived. An incident is told of one of the early exhibitions of his paintings at which the artist himself was present and overheard the comments of a casual visitor. After gazing awhile at the beautiful sea views and the gorgeous sunsets the critic remarked: "These are all fanciful, the product of the artist's imagination. I never could see anything in the sea or the sunset like that." Turner immediately looked at the man keenly, and said: "No, you could not see anything like that but don't you wish you could?"

If these two men were both to look at the same time into a shallow pool by the roadside one would see the mud and refuse lying at the bottom, the other would see the image of the heaven above. The difference is not in the things themselves but in the vision of the men who behold them.

The most wonderful regions unexplored are not in the heart of Africa nor at the pole, but about us on every hand. Our eyes have formed the habit of seeing things casually, familiarly, in their most obvious appearances. A tree is only a tree, a rock is a rock, and we pass by with indifference many marvellous creations, calling them commonplace. The eyes rest upon them, and we are satisfied to know their outward form and color and to accept dictionary definitions as the extent of our knowledge.

Some of us need a new invitation TO SEE. In and beyond all these common, visible things the greater realm of the unseen and unknown lies hidden. Discover its secrets and learn the real and lasting facts of life.

NEW ICE-CREAM PARLORS TO OPEN.

G. H. Foster, corner of Kent and Rochford Streets, Charlottetown, is preparing excellent ice-cream parlors for the summer months. Mr. Foster has fitted up the double parlors of his residence, and it can be truthfully said that they are cool, airy, sanitary and good enough for Royalty. The parlors will comfortably seat over thirty without being crowded, and a piano is at the disposal of customers. Last year Mr. Foster served ice-cream on a small scale, and his delightful refreshments created such a demand that it warranted his opening up on a large scale. Preparations are completed to supply the public with College ices, banana splits, Sundays, and many other different varieties. Mr. Foster is to be congratulated on this venture and no doubt he will be well patronized by all lovers of ice-cream, especially at this season of the year when Victoria Park is so largely visited. There is telephone connection and advance orders will receive careful attention. On Monday the parlors will be open to the public.
