DOROTHY DIX SAYS—

Discouraged Nurse

Change in Vocation Advised For Girl Unhappy After Year Of Training

DEAR MISS DIX: I am a student nurse 19 years old and have been in training for about a year, but I find that I have lost all interest in my profession and I want to leave the school and go back to college and finish the stenographic course which I started at one time. Anyway, I don't like nursing.

Another reason why I want to make the change is that my fiancé has just returned after two years in the army, and he has gone back to college. If I made this change, I could be near him. I don't want to interfere with his education, and we both realize we are too young to marry and that it is best to wait until I finish my education and he has a good start on his.

My parents object to this and think that I should go on with my training as a nurse. Do you think that I am crazy to give up the work that I am not interested in and do something that I like to do?

ANSWER: No, I don't. I think the most important thing in every boy's and girl's life is to try to find out while they are still in school, if possible, what Nature intended them to do. All of us have some aptitude, some one thing that we enjoy doing and are interested in doing, and our success, or failure, depends upon whether we get our appointed place in the scheme of things, or not.

HIGH CALLING

This would be particularly true in your case because nursing isn't just a job. It is a vocation. For sick people are not attractive in themselves. They are cross and unreasonable and demanding, and only one who is capable of having pity for them and an endless patience and forbearance should undertake it as a career. Nursing is a great and noble work, but it is not for everyone.

However, you needn't regret the year you have spent in training because whatever knowledge you have acquired about how to minister to sick people will be of use to you all of your life.

I hope you and your fiancé will have the good sense to stick to your resolution not to get married until you are older and he is in a position to support a wife.

DEAR MISS DIX: I have been married almost a year and have been miserable every day of that time because of a jealous husband who will not let me go any place for fear some man will look at me. I can't even go to the movies because a man might sit in the seat next to me. I never have given my husband cause to be jealous and he is making both of our lives miserable. What can I do?

UNHAPPY

ANSWER: There is no cure for jealousy because it is beyond all reason. There are only two courses open to you. One is to leave your husband before there are any children to complicate the situation. The other is to steel yourself to live a life of utter misery. God help any man or woman who has a jealous husband or wife.

Ellen's Diary
By an Island Farmer's Wife

The binder repaired, and with anticipations hopeful in this new week of days, our farmers went off to the last of the harvest-cutting at the other farm this morning. And then, left in the afternoon to attend a funeral of a daughter of that farm, an elderly woman in recent years a resident of the city. But born and reared there, perhaps in that very house which has known many happy days, and within sight of its gently rolling fields. There amid the rigors and joys of pioneer days she grew to girlhood, when Roy mance walked a country lane to draw her to a neighboring farm on this road of ours. There, children, and in time grand-children came to bless her and her kindly husband, units through the years he was taken from her to his long rest, as was presently her only son, and the home that had been so hospitable and happy knew it's people no more.

I fancy though, queer woman that I am, that oftimes spirits return to revisit beloved spots—come back unseen by the blind eyes of mortals to linger awhile about old scenes. So, perhaps she comes sometimes to her bridal home or maybe to our other farm, back to the candle-lit evenings there with sisters, to the spinning and weaving, the sewing and knitting or to look upon the harvesting or to look upon the harvesting.

For Tuesday, September 28

ACCORDING to the auguries, lunar and mutual, it may be possible to reach difficult or unpromising conditions into a fair degree of progress and encouragement. This may be accomplished only by serious handling of critical situations by which the menace the job, ambitions and the physical status as well. Concentrated efforts, based on logic and clever insight, might win the support of influential persons. Organize details carefully.

Those whose birthday it is are advised to prepare for deep-rooted and long-term programs for success and security by well organized details and long-range vision of underlying principles. While the mentality is sober and perhaps gloomy, with reactions of positivism, work and health, yet a proper show of well-laid plans may gain support in a critical situation. Work for long-term results.

A child born on this day, while serious and reflective, may gain support from superiors by its attention to details, well-regulated systems and shrewd thinking.

That Body Of Yours

SLUGGISH GALL BLADDER NOT UNCOMMON

Some medical practitioners have been criticized for telling a patient that his symptoms of indigestion, pain in the upper right side of the abdomen and slight jaundice are caused by a "sluggish" gall bladder. These physicians have pointed out that where there is sluggishness, there may be stones, and therefore these patients have become unduly alarmed. As a matter of fact, the X-ray has shown that there are many causes of sluggish or slow-emptying gall bladder with no gallstones present, but with various digestive symptoms present.

The normal gall bladder is pear-shaped, but not as large as the pear of average size. It contracts to about half of its regular size within 30 minutes after a fat meal. By contracting, it thus empties its thick bile into the small intestine to give immediate help to digest the fats and other foodstuffs just eaten.

This is the reason that physicians advise patients to eat some fat—cream, butter, ham, bacon, egg yolk—at breakfast, as it helps empty the gall bladder and the bile can start its many jobs first thing in the morning. In the American Journal of Digestive Diseases, Dr. Maurice Feldman, Baltimore, states that the sluggish or slow-emptying gall bladder causes many cases of indigestion due to lack of bile, necessary for normal digestion.

In a normal gall bladder the contraction is almost three times as great crossways and about twice as great lengthways. In a study of 308 cases, 75 or about 20 per cent, revealed a poorly contracting gall bladder but without gallstones or other disturbances in other words, instead of sluggish gall bladder, the rate of contraction was present in one of every five cases where an examination of the gall bladder was considered necessary because of symptoms present.

While eating at food at breakfast or using Epsom salts or another drug to drain the gall bladder is effective in emptying the gallbladder, the ideal method is taking enough exercise daily—especially bending exercises—to cause a natural contraction and emptying of the gall bladder. This free flow of bile from the gall bladder digests food and stimulates bowel action. Bile is Nature's purgative.

How Can I!!!
By Anne Ashley

Q. How can I make the elastic in garters last longer?
A. Instead of sewing the ends of garters together, cut the elastic about two inches shorter than ordinarily, sew a piece of ribbon to each end, and tie the bow when putting on. As the elastic stretches, the ribbon will take up the required space.

Q. How can I make a good furniture polish?
A. A furniture polish that can be used on the finest woods can be made of one part vinegar, with equal parts of linseed oil and turpentine.

Q. How can I clean gold lace or braid that is badly tarnished?
A. Sprinkle with fuller's search and then rub with a stiff brush.

Cleaning Ivory

One-piece ivory objects can be safely cleaned with soap and water. If there are several pieces glued together, however, it's safer to take a piece of raw lemon, dip it into salt, and rub the surface with this. After the juice has dried on the ivory, wipe off with a damp cloth.

DISCARDED GLOVES

Do not discard the old gloves. Wash them, cut off the good fingers and thumbs, and keep them in the medicine chest for finger stalls when some member of the family injures a finger.

DISCARDED SCREENS

Before packing the screens away, paste a small label on each one, on which it belongs. The labels can be removed easily when cleaning the screens and much effort in fitting can be avoided.

Living & Leisure / THE WOMAN'S REALM

David Drake, a seventeen year old boy from Seattle, Washington, with his mother and grandmother, visited friends in Grand Tracadie during the summer. Lately his mother forwarded the following poem which David wrote after visiting the Grand Tracadie lily-pond. David has just won a four year scholarship to Harvard.

GRAND TRACADIE LILY-POND

When the living spruces loom At evening by a limpid pool The meaning of a lily-bloom, Of waterlilies mute and cool Sleeping in twilight water, leads Thru feelings that cross a reflective mood Like restless ripples among the reeds To a deep inquietude.

HOSEIERY HUES

This season brings new darker shades in hoseiery... taupe and toast browns being tops on the list. There will have a tendency to higher reinforcement due to the new back height in shoes. The "Drawing Room Group" of 15-denier stockings are keyed to interior colors popular in the Victorian period. Newer shades are charcoal and bronze tones, such as taupe for wear with black, taupe, wines and blues, gunmetal tones to complement the greys, amber shades for new browns and clay shades.

DRESSY SUITS

Straight in front, bustled, draped and sweeping toward the back... that's the big news in dressy suits for afternoon and on! This exciting silhouette will be found in all fabrics from tweeds and fine wools to glistening satins and velvets, broadens and rayon moires. For the tall and stately figure, there are tiers and tunic manipulated to emphasize back-interest. Newcomers to dress-up fashions are all-rounder pleated and two-piece costumes in glowing iridescent colors. When you think of suits this year, think of suits to be worn round-the-clock for every occasion.

FUR LENGTHS

Furriers pondering the next change of fashion are in a dilemma. They don't know whether skirts are going to be shorter again or whether they'll remain as long as ever. But the fur coats have to be made, and on the accuracy of the furriers' guess hinges a great deal of money.

The longer the woman's skirt, the longer her fur coat. But on the other hand, if skirts become too long, fur coats are likely to become much shorter for the simple reason that the weight of skins will be a difficult problem, while too great length becomes clumsy.

Leading furriers in Britain already are preparing a return to popularity of hip-length and fingertip-length jackets because many women do not like the look of long coats which now are more or less stabilized at 12 inches from the ground. These long models require back fullness of two or three folds.

Accents of bygone days are the tasseled beaded lariats worn high around the throat, long, slender umbrellas, high Louis heels, ankle spats and buttonhooks, bright elbow garter-bands, Victorian blouse-yokes, glove wrist-buttons, antique
