BURGESS BEDTIME STORIES

(By Thornton W. Burgess)

THE ENVIED ONE

Envy often makes mistakes; Much to much for granted takes. —Jimmy Skunk.

Peter Rabbit poked his head out of Johnny Chuck's house. Then he came wholly out on the doorstep. Johnny poked his head out. A little way off Jimmy Skunk made a sudden rush at Reddy Fox and Reddy hurriedly retreated.

Peter sighed. "I wish I could do that," said he enviously. "Do what?" asked Johnny. "Walk right up to Reddy Fox and snake him back up," said Peter.

It was Johnny Chuck's turn to sigh. "It would be nice to be able to do that, wouldn't it?" said he. "I guess he isn't afraid of anybody," said Peter.

"I don't suppose he is," agreed Johnny. "I doubt that he ever ran away from anyone in all his life," said Peter. He sighed again, thinking how almost every day of his life he had to run from someone.

"He doesn't even have to fight when cornered as you and I do," said Johnny.

"I don't ever fight; I run," said Peter. "You can't run when you are cornered," said Johnny.

"I don't get cornered. I run before that can happen. I guess that is what my long heels were given me for. I'm no fighter," admitted Peter.

"I don't fight unless I have to but if I am where I can't run away I'll fight anybody, no matter how big or strong or fierce. Nobody is ever going to catch me from behind," declared Johnny Chuck. He meant just what he said. He wasn't boasting. There isn't a cowardly hair in Johnny Chuck's coat, as some folk have found out to their sorrow.

"Just think, Jimmy can go anywhere he pleases, any time he pleases, and not care whom he meets or who sees him. It must be a wonderful feeling," said Peter.

"I would like to have that feeling if for only one day," said Johnny.

"Who would I," declared Peter. "Let's ask him how it does feel," said Johnny.

Presently Reddy Fox trotted off into the thickening dusk and Jimmy Skunk ambled back to join his friends.

"Hod does it feel never to be afraid of anybody?" asked Peter. "I don't know," replied Jimmy Skunk.

Peter looked at Johnny Chuck and blinked. Johnny Chuck looked at Peter and blinked. Then both stared at Jimmy Skunk. "Say that again," said Peter.

Jimmy looked puzzled. "I said I don't know what it feels like never to be afraid of any one," said he.

"Are you telling us that you are afraid of anybody?" demanded Johnny Chuck.

"Of course I am afraid of someone. I don't believe there is anybody in all the Great World who isn't afraid of somebody. Even great big Buster Bear runs away from those two-legged folks called Men," said Jimmy. Then he chuckled and added, "And they run away from me."

"Everybody runs away from you I mean everybody treats you with respect," Peter persisted.

"Not everybody. That's your mistake, Peter. There is a certain person who has no respect at all for me or mine, and when he is around I keep out of sight," replied Jimmy.

"Who?" demanded Peter and Johnny together.

Just then there was a sound from over near the Green Forest. It was the hunting call of Hooty the Great Horned Owl. Johnny Chuck moved a little nearer to his doorway. So did Peter Rabbit.

Then a surprising thing happened. Jimmy Skunk also moved up on Johnny's doorstep.

"Is there room for three in there? I hope there is," said Jimmy. He sounded a little anxious. "That fellow has no respect for any one," he added.

The next story: "Jimmy Is Unashamed."

THE DISTRIBUTIONAL COUNT

The correct play of today's deal called for "counting out" an opponent's distribution.

North dealer. Match-point duplicate. Both sides vulnerable.

Hand diagram showing cards for North and South. North: ♠KJ743, ♥AKQ7, ♦1086, ♣K. South: ♠Q1063, ♥98, ♦K432, ♣A1042.

The bidding: North 1♠, East 2♣, South 2NT, West 3NT. Declarer: 3NT.

The club five was led by West. Dummy's king holding the diamond ten was led and held the trick. Declarer then led up to the diamond jack.

A low heart put dummy back on lead for a third diamond finesse. This time West discarded the club three and on the next play the diamond ace, he threw the seven of clubs. Declarer cashed the two heart honors still in dummy and was disappointed when the suit did not break. However he had nine tricks in clear sight, so he led a low spade to the ace and finessed the spade jack on the return. East won and returned a club; West cashed the jack and his good heart.

Later, declarer was shocked to find that his score on this board for bidding and making three no-trump was far below average.

South had analyzed the distribution badly. As actually played West had shown two diamonds and four hearts. He had originally led the five of clubs, later had discarded the club deuce and the club seven. It was the next thing to a certainty that he had started with five clubs. These, added to four hearts and two diamonds, made 11 cards. At the most, then, he could hold only two spades. After cashing dummy's heart honors, declarer should have led to the ace of spades and back to the king. When the queen failed to drop from West, it could be assumed that he did not hold that card, and it would be simple for declarer to throw West on lead with the heart and force a return from the club ace. In this way South would not only safeguard the spade king, but the club queen.
