Mrs. Steadman in an interview said her husband was laboring under a delusion, that there had been nothing improper between Mr. McClure and herself and there had been nothing to give her husband cause to suspect such. The evidence of the medical witnesses was to the effect that Steadman was the prey of hallucination.

Tragic Death

Dudley Wright, the coroner made investigations and did not think a formal inquest necessary. The late Mr. A. Edwin Lyon was a native of Toronto, Ontario and was about 70 years of age. He was educated at Trinity Church School at Wellesley College, Toronto and subsequently entered upon a period of training in photography at the Toronto studio of Mr. William Notman and for over twenty years thereafter he served in some of the largest studios in Canada. In addition to being a photographer Mr. Lyon was a water color artist having graduated at Toronto School of Art in both water color and drawing. Twenty four years ago Mr. Lyon came to Charlottetown as assistant to Mr. G. H. Cook, photographer and twelve years ago started business for himself in the most prominent section of the city, the old roadway which is best remembered by visitors by the picturesque flight of stone steps leading down to it from one end of Bosworth street.

The street is now being widened letting in the sunshine where for so many years the shadows have lain heavily under the close, high walls. Landmarks have gone by the board in the work of improvement. A pathetic old sign, "Province Inn," which once stood for mirth and joviality, liquid and other refreshments, which clung to the last, partly dismantled wall to go. Unless some efforts were made to save them prove successful, the old stone steps, surmounted by their ornamental iron arch and lamp are doomed to go also.

The old street for 130 years bore the name Governor's Alley, up to the time of the change to Province Street in 1833. It was then made an "alright street" with its 15-inch sidewalks and cobblestone paving. Originally it was a country lane. After the royal governors who came from England to rule the colony of Massachusetts, had ceded them their carriages at the Washington street, the stables on Governor's Alley." Now, the absence of land being added to the street, is cut from what once the governors' apple orchard.

On this site to be erected in Boston was built in 1788. Nearby was the Second Universalist church in 1817, and it was there that the renowned Rev. Hosea Ballou was ordained and preached. The entrance from Bosworth street was once Montgomery Court, named in honor of the General Montgomery who was a life in when he tried to take the city of Quebec.

It was on Bosworth street that Oliver Wendell Holmes lived when he wrote "The Autocrat of the Breakfast Table." Bosworth street, itself, up to 100 years ago, had been occupied by the gardens of fashionable mansions in Tremont and Bromfield streets.

Increasing congestion and traffic conditions in the growing thoroughfare of old Boston has resulted in the widening operations now in progress.

BOSTON, April 30.—Sunlight has returned to Governor's Alley, which for 91 years has been known to Boston as Province street. The little, narrow thoroughfare, with its 15-inch sidewalks on either side, runs through a part of the city rich in tradition. Crossing from Bromfield street to School street and parallel to Washington street and Tremont street, the old roadway may be best remembered by visitors by the picturesque flight of stone steps leading down to it from one end of Bosworth street.

The street is now being widened letting in the sunshine where for so many years the shadows have lain heavily under the close, high walls. Landmarks have gone by the board in the work of improvement. Libraries Pictured As of Great Benefit To Adult Education

(United States)

MINNEAPOLIS, April 30.—It is in the field of self-education, more or less detached from the classroom and formal teaching, that the public library can render its most important contribution to the education of American citizens, said Carl H. Milan, secretary of the American Library Association, speaking today before the conference on Home Education, meeting in this city with the National Parent-Teacher convention.

Everything the library does is to some extent educational. Mr. Milan said, and the libraries are expanding with a type of adult education service designed to increase their usefulness to men and women who wish to continue their education out of school.

"Education is not synonymous with schools nor teaching," Mr. Milan asserted. "Every child is educated not only by the school but by his contacts, experiences, but by what he sees, hears and does with what he reads. Although we put on the teachers most of the blame for our uneducated or poorly educated, we should agree that the better part of every man's education is that which he gives himself."

"There is a growing recognition that America needs a thoroughly educated citizenship, and we are coming gradually to realize that no man is educated if he stops learning when he leaves school. The world movement for adult education is now felt and it gives to all agencies for adult education an opportunity to increase their usefulness."

"If the libraries see and meet this opportunity we may expect them to add to their staffs not only general educational advisors, but specialists in the several important fields, men and women of the type of high school teachers and college professors who will be available courses and to give advice to the student as he follows out his course of reading. In all probability these specialists will not be teachers; they will be advisors to the independent student."

"The library, by organized contact, by establishing personal contacts outside who can take time to give personal advice, by having enough copies of needed books to meet demands promptly, can help materially to prevent boys and girls from continuing or becoming uneducated citizens."

IN MEMORIAM

MRS. FRANCIS HAMMILL

A cloud of sadness was cast over the quiet little district of Middleton, and especially over the home of Francis Hammill on Sunday, April 20, when the Angel of Death entered therein and claimed for its victim the loving wife and mother of 56 years, comparatively early in life.

The deceased lady who was stricken with pleuro-pneumonia some weeks ago, was considered by those near and dear to her as out of danger, but God willed otherwise and other complications set in the fight for recovery proved too much, and despite skill of physicians and the tenderest nursing she passed to the Great Beyond on the Resurrection morn to rise to a life glorious and immortal there to enjoy the rewards of a life well spent for being a truly christian woman, she exemplified in her life the motto: "Keep your mind the chief aim in life—the salvation of her immortal soul."

Mrs. Hammill had many friends throughout the province as she taught school in different districts before her marriage; all of whom will be deeply grieved to learn of her demise.

During her illness she was frequently visited by her pastor who administered to her the consoling and reconciling graces of God in the Sacraments of the Holy Catholic Church.

It may be truly said that she had never a lonely hour, for she had left can be filled in the hearts and minds of those left to mourn, namely her husband and one son Thomas at home and three daughters—Mrs. R. J. McDonald, Charlottetown, Mrs. C. N. Croken, Freetown, and Mrs. J. H. Sayers, Killam, Alta.

Her funeral which took place on Tuesday morning, April 22, was a touching one. Her many friends and teams in the procession from her home to St. Malachi's Church, Kinkora, where a requiem mass was sung by her pastor, Rev. M. J. Smith who also performed the services at the grave.

The pall bearers were: Thomas Campbell, Charlottetown; Thomas Campbell, Middleton; Patrick Hammill, Middleton; Thomas Hamill, Middleton; James Murray, Freetown; Francis McKenna, Freetown.

Following is a list of tokens of sympathy:

Wreath—her nurse, Miss Jean Curley.

Mass cards—Capt. W. P. and Mrs. Burke and Pearl, Charlottetown; Dr. J. A. and Mrs. McPhee, Summerside.

Spiritual offerings—F. A. and Mrs. Johnson, St. John, N. B.; Sisters of Charlottetown Hospital, Ladies of St. Charles, Auxiliaries, Charlottetown; C. N. and Mrs. McDonald, Freetown; Wilbert Mrs. Croken, Freetown; Patrick and Mrs. Connolly and family, Bedouque; Mrs. J. R. Steele, Charlottetown; Ray Steel, Charlottetown.

Canadian In Mexican Jail

(Canadian Press)

WINNIPEG, April 30.—Lang- ulshing in a Mexican prison in Vera Cruz, under conditions described as horrible, is a young Winnipeg ex-soldier, with a distinguished war record, condemned to serve a term of twenty years.

His name is Arthur Patrick Hellwell.

Mrs. Hellwell, the boy's mother, who resides in this city learned of his condition through the good offices of a kindly woman who saw young Hellwell on board ship, bound for prison.

According to Mrs. Jennie Ackerman, stewards of the steamer "Money" a passenger boat running out of New York harbor, Hellwell was sentenced for having shot and killed a man at Tampico, Mexico. His plea was that of self-defence.

In her letter to the boy's mother, Mrs. Ackerman stated that Hellwell's plea enlisted the sympathies of those on board. Despite his terrible fate he had remained uncommunicative and had first had been too proud to divulge his real identity in order that efforts might be made to secure his release. This is known to his guards as "Jack Burnham."

Mrs. Ackerman warns Hellwell's mother that her son may be permitted to attempt escape after a year or two incarceration in order that some valid excuse be given the guards to shoot him down. This she points out, is the Mexican way of avoiding the expense of keeping prisoners.

Negotiations have been opened with Hon. E. M. McDonald, minist-

Grief Kills Loving Wife

(Canadian Press)

WINNIPEG, April 30.—While mourners gathered at the funeral service of William Dods, one of Winnipeg's oldest pioneers recently, his wife, 69 years old, stricken with grief and unable to attend her husband's funeral collapsed at her home and died a few minutes later.

Mr. and Mrs. Dods were married about forty-seven years ago in London, Ont., where the latter was born. Throughout their married life, the couple had been inseparable and together they braved the hardships of the early pioneer days in Western Canada. They eventually settled down at Fort Garry, the present site of the city of Winnipeg.

Mrs. Dods was buried in the same grave with her husband.

Avenger of Her Father's Death Acquitted

(Canadian Press.)

MEXICO CITY, April 30.—Mar- ia Del Pilar Moreno, 17 years old, who two years ago shot and killed Deputy Francisco Llorea, a short time after he had killed her father, was acquitted yesterday on the charge of murder.

Amid a shower of flowers, thrown by women and children, the girl was carried out of the court room in the arms of student admirers. Senorita Moreno sought out the father of the child who she discovered that morning given members of the chamber of deputies, he would not be brought to trial for killing her father, and shot him as he was coming out of his home.
