SOURIS

The following lines have been forwarded to the Guardian for publication by a tourist who is at present one of a party visiting the island for the second time. Her opinion of the island may be inferred from her lines:—

White mists;
Red roads;
Green fields between—
Souris!
Blue seas;
Red cliffs;
Wet beach around—
Souris!
Smiling fields, daisy-decked,
Blue skies cloud-flecked
Grey rain, sun again—
Souris!

CROPS LOOK PROMISING

WINNIPEG, July 23.—The western grain crops continued to develop rapidly during the weekend, and are now showing generally favorable in regard to color, stand and freedom from disease, according to reports reaching the agricultural departments of the Canadian Pacific Railway here. The weather has been moderately warm with considerable rain. Half has, of course, affected crop prospects in a number of districts in Saskatchewan and to a lesser degree in Alberta. With these exceptions crops everywhere look very promising, provided no setback of a general nature is experienced.

Who's Who in Tryon

ON Saturday, July 16, the community of Tryon suffered the loss of one more of its popular, capable young ladies in the person of Miss Blanche Thomson who has gone to the United States where she intends to locate permanently. In the North Tryon Presbyterian church, where she was organist she will be missed and also by a host of friends who are extended for her success in the U.S.A. and we trust that some day before too long Blanche will get homesick and return once more to "Old" Tryon.

On Tuesday, July 19, the angel of death entered the home of Wilfred and Mrs. Inman and carried away to the throne on high the soul of their eldest son Herman, aged 19 years. Partially paralyzed since early childhood, suffering through many an illness the "All Wise Father" called the sufferer home to that upper and better land there to suffer no more. In the home there are left to mourn the father and mother and two brothers, Lloyd and Major. The funeral service at 2 p. m. was largely attended, Rev. Mr. Banyard officiating. Interment being made at St. John's Anglican cemetery, Cra-paud.

Mrs. Maud Bell and daughter, Miss Jean left Thursday afternoon for Western Canada where it is hoped Miss Jean will regain a full measure of health. They will visit Mrs. Bell's brother Mr. Reuben Robblee, who is located there.

We are informed that Mr. and Mrs. Jack Gillis received information on Monday that their daughter Miss Frankie had been operated upon, in Boston, for appendicitis, and as soon as she is able to be about is expected home for a holiday and rest.

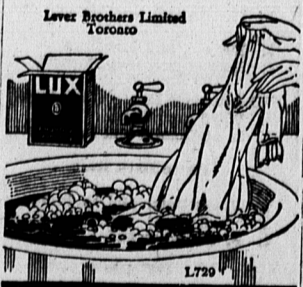

Among Wednesday half-holiday visitors to Tryon were Mrs. J. T. Waite and son Fred, Merritt Dawson and family, and Thos. Johnston and family.

For each big man at the top there are a million little ones at the bottom.

PRINCE EDWARD ISLAND TREASURES ROOM WHERE CONFERENCE OF 1864 TOOK PLACE

(By Frank Veigh)

(In Quebec Chronicle-Telegraph)

New Brunswick's eastern neighbor is Prince Edward Island, Canada's smallest province, Canada's million-acre farm. Separated from New Brunswick by the Strait of Northumberland, "the Island," as it is affectionately called by its people, lies broadside to the sea, stretching out its arm as if to protect the mainland from the fury of the surge. Though wave-washed on every side, Prince Edward Island is a peaceful, placid land, with a rich soil that makes farming a pastime and a climate that besets health and life. The scenery throughout the length and breadth of the island is reminiscent of rural Britain, and is varied by the sea arms and rivers that show their red-silt banks at low tide. In lieu of the century-old hedge of the moorland, the typical Canadian fence marks boundary lines and in place of the stone structures of England are the shingled houses and barns of a new land.

Charlottetown and Summerside are the two chief centers of population. In the former the fine public square is surrounded by a notable group of edifices in legislative building, court-house, post-office, and market. The seaside park of the city is well worthy of the pride of its citizens, with its vista of the wide harbour, the little river, and the rolling land of the farther shore.

Summerside is also a thriving seaport, with an export trade in farm produce and the famous Malpeque oysters. With an agricultural and fishing products of ten million dollars a year, the island province of 2,133 square miles prays its own claim as the garden of the Gulf of St. Lawrence. If and when the occasional difficulties of winter navigation with the mainland are overcome by a tunnel, it is predicted that a new lease of life will be entered upon in this fertile corner of the great Dominion.

Prince Edward Island, discovered by Jacques Cartier in 1534, was first settled by the French in 1662, but its real development began in 1755 by the advent of the Acadians who had escaped deportation from Nova Scotia. Under the French occupancy, which ceased in 1763, it was the British name was conferred in 1799 in honor of Edward, Duke of Kent, father of the late Queen Victoria.

Prince Edward Island is unique among the provinces composing the Dominion. It is the only province distinctly an island and is the smallest, being 2,184 square miles in area with a population of about 85,000 of which over 98 per cent is native-born while over 84 per cent is Abegweit (home on the wave), and Henry Ward Beecher designated it the "Gem of the Northern Sea." The island is situated in the Gulf of St. Lawrence, and is separated from New Brunswick and Nova Scotia by the "Silver streak" of the Northumberland Strait, its greatest distance from the mainland being thirty miles. From its shortest about thirty miles. From its beauty of rural scenery and rich fertility of soil, it is known as the "Garden of the Gulf." Although devoid of extensive forest areas, in the central districts of the island there are still considerable breadths of dusky green, although more or less thinned by the woodman's axe, while liberally scattered throughout its surface are the stately elm, the sturdy oak, the delicate white birch, the slender Lombardy poplar, and the dark conical spruce, imparting to the scenery a park-like effect such as it to be found in so many parts of rural England.

Fanned as it is by cooling ocean breezes, and by the softening influence of the sea, the island is one of the most salubrious summer resorts on the continent. From fogs the coast is almost entirely free. Arms of five years after their settlement, about the sea cut into the land in lines. La Jole of pre-British days was numerous trout streams furnish one of the famous series of fortified sport for the angler, and deep sea fished posts—Louisburg, Port La Jole, Baie Verte, Baie Chaleur, Tadoussac, Quebec—that the French established at strategic points, rocky point, across the harbor, is the site of a fort laid out by the French in 1720. Charlottetown's harbor, which is the receiving basin for three rivers, is safe haven for wherever he roams and one who is not native born can quite understand the lure of the famous island after a succession of visits. The rolling country, in all its rich fertility is reminiscent of an English landscape, stretching in every direction to the mirroring sea. There is one hill top, in the interior of the island from which salt water can be seen in three directions. A background of sea always makes an ideal nature picture and this is the case in Prince Edward Island from the capital city on the Strait of Northumberland to the miles of silver beaches on the Atlantic, and the Tignish point of land itself into the Gulf of St. Lawrence on the North.

A True Homeland

"The Island" is the only terminology an islander requires to locate his Garden Province, whether he be a resident or one who has travelled far afield. To him it is whatever wind may blow and is one who is not native born can quite understand the lure of the famous island after a succession of visits. The rolling country, in all its rich fertility is reminiscent of an English landscape, stretching in every direction to the mirroring

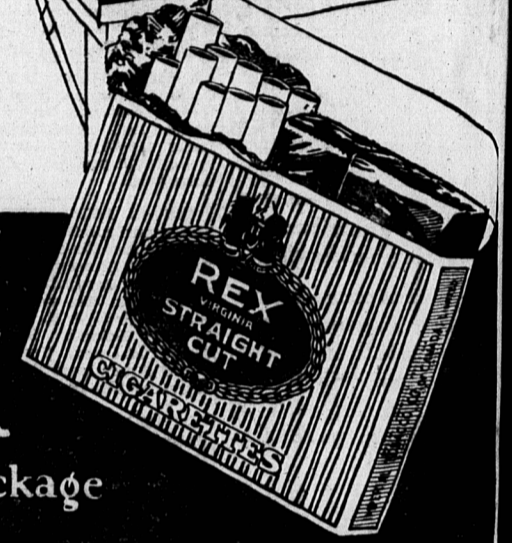

Famous Conference

From the historical point of view the most interesting of its structures is the Provincial Parliament Building. It contains the room in which the Conference was held in 1864 that resulted in the tentative agreement that brought about the creation of the Dominion three years later. The table around which the delegates gathered and the chairs in which they sat are still in position and are used by the Provincial Cabinet when in session. On one of the walls in this apartment—the meeting place of the Executive Council when the province had two legislative chambers, is a large bronze tablet commemorating this important Pre-Confederation Conference. It reads:

UNITY IS STRENGTH
In the hearts and minds of the delegates who assembled in this room on September 1, 1864, was born the Dominion of Canada. Providence being their guide, they builded better than they knew. This tablet is erected on the occasion of the fiftieth anniversary of the event.

In the Legislative Assembly room at the other end of the building are a number of portraits in oil of the island's historical statesmen and several valuable documents. Among the latter the most interesting is an autograph letter of Oliver Cromwell, written when Lord Protector of Great Britain. Among other interesting buildings are the Law Courts, Government House, Prince of Wales College and St. Dunstan's Catholic Cathedral. The city also has a fine public park by the sea and several stately squares noted for their flowers and trees.

THE CORK CURE

A young woman called at the house of a homoeopathic doctor, and after discoursing on all topics of the day, settled down to tell him her ailments. Among other things she said she was greatly alarmed by a "sinking feeling."
The doctor prepared a bottle of medicine and gave it to her, with directions as to how it should be taken. The woman began to talk, but at length, after many vain efforts on the doctor's part to get rid of her, she made for the door. She had just opened it, when she turned and said:—
"Oh, doctor, what shall I do if this medicine does not cure me?"
"They tell me that is good for a sinking feeling."
Walter: Mr. Gray has left his umbrella again. I believe he would forget his head if it were loose. I overheard him say yesterday he was going to Switzerland for his

TWIN GRIEVANCES

"What is Biggins' grievance against the railroad company?"
"He has two grievances. One is that all the trains don't stop at his station and another is that when he gets aboard they lose time stopping at other stations."
Assistant: Have you an account with the house, madam?
Customer: No, but maybe I can arrange matters with the manager.
Assistant (to manager): A lady of no account to see you, sir.

Sweet young thing: I don't expect to prove your friendship with Mrs. Swift, Mummy. Her children have brought her up all wrong.
Wife: I saw the doctor today, dear, about my loss of memory.
Husband: What did he do?
Wife: Made me pay in advance.
Unwittingly, upon their honeymoon, she had said something that rubbed him the wrong way.
"Oh, my darling," she cried, "I have hurt you!"
"No, dearest," he answered gravely: "the hurt I feel is due to the fact that I know it hurts you to think you have hurt me." "do not let that hurt you for an instant! My hurt is because I know it hurts you to feel I have hurt myself by hurting you!"
"No, no, my precious!" he cried. "My hurt is because you are hurt over feeling that I am hurt because you feel that you have hurt me, and therefore hurt yourself."
And here let us leave them. They will get over it in time.
