Dorothy Dix Says—

VIRTUES OF PIONEERS NEEDED Girls Should Prepare For Careers; Practical, Homely Things Will Be In Demand

A mother says: "I have a little 13-year-old daughter. What can I teach her that will be for her in a world that will be so different from that in which I was brought up?"

What the women of the future are going to need are not drawing room tricks, but the virtues of their pioneer grandmothers.

Teach her how to work. After the war practically every able-bodied woman is going to have to support herself and perhaps others, and with the time a girl has to spend in school, with her mother's help and guidance, she should be able to prepare herself for it.

Impress upon her that work isn't a curse. It is a blessing. It is the consolation prize that humanity is given for the privilege of being human.

Give your daughter the higher education, if she will take it, but, any- how, teach her how to do the practical, everyday homely things for which there is a certain demand.

Also, cooking will be rated among the headline attractions that any girl can possess if she is on the look-out for a husband.

Ellen's Diary

I thought perhaps if I took the cream-on to the road this morning I might see the wild-ducks in the stream. I was disappointed.

There were only blue-jays scolding discordantly as they flitted from one alder to another.

There was a shower and the water flowing swiftly beneath the gangway bridge was red and angry.

There was the usual Saturday's work to be completed and extra preparation for my trip.

I knew, of course that Jennie would see to this but it pleased me to arrive at the house with my own cooking for himself.

I left exact directions with James, when he went with Jack to the bank.

Then I was ready and off on the short cut to meet the bus at the corner.
