PETER McINNIS

ST. PAUL'S CHURCH

Speaking to the boys and girls in his congregation yesterday morning, the Rev. Dr. A. L. G. Gardner, carried his hearers back to the days of his own childhood. When his bedtime arrived and he had to go up to bed, he always found that his bedroom door be closed. He would knock and his father, who was older, and his younger brother, who was younger, would hear him if he was at all disturbed or restless. When Christ ascended up to Heaven on that first Ascension Day, He left the door between Heaven and earth open. He said that God might hear the voice of His people, and that people might hear God speaking to them. "And behold, a door was opened in Heaven." (Revelations IV, 1)

The following pastoral letter was read in Roman Catholic churches throughout the Charlottetown diocese yesterday:

Dear Brethren: According to the expressed wishes of His Holiness, Pope Pius XII, the customary May devotions in honor of the Blessed Virgin, are to be offered this year as a special supplication for the speedy restoration of peace to this war-torn world. With paternal solicitude for afflicted humanity, the Holy Father pleads with us to storm heaven with our prayers to save mankind from further and more terrible disasters. Even if we were far removed from the actual calamities which follow the waste of battles, it would be our duty as good Catholics to faithfully obey this summons of the Sovereign Pontiff and take part in this year's campaign to end war. As a matter of fact the Sovereign Pontiff only urges us to fulfill a Christian duty which will certainly redound to the personal happiness and safety. We cannot close our eyes to the seriousness of the conflict in which we are active participants. Since war has been declared our burden has become heavier month by month, and our hopes of an early victory grow steadily more remote and our convictions are strengthened that we are fighting in just, we will make whatever sacrifices our country and our religion demand. Convinced as we are that Christian freedom is at stake, we are in duty bound to pray earnestly to God for guidance in this conflict. If God does not bless our efforts, what will it avail us if our forces by land and air and sea are reputed to be invincible, if we are able to out-agibary superiorly over our enemies, if we are able to out-kill God's wrath against us by our pride and sinfulness. As a Christian people we should humble ourselves before God's altar and earnestly implore His mercy as well as His aid. The Pope's message tells us what kind of peace we must

But now John and Mary realize that "something" must be done about John's retirement... "something" that will ensure rest and relaxation and financial independence 20 years from now. And that "something" is through a Life Insurance Plan.

So Mary continues—"Let's plan now, John. You've worked hard and long but we haven't been able
