Miss Muriel Uprichard

Causes for juvenile delinquency are laid squarely at the door of adults by Miss Muriel Uprichard, newly appointed national director of the Canadian Junior Red Cross.

"By parents, she doesn't blame individual parents of isolated children," she explained, "but all parents—persons whom, for the sake of their own children, should share full responsibility for the younger generation of their community."

few kind words, and he won't say them. Can you beat that for lack of sense?

Unless the wife beats it by her lack of intelligence in making herself miserable over an imaginary trouble, because she does know that her inarticulate husband does love her even if he never feels called upon to mention the fact.

She knows that any man who is as domestic as the house cat and who toils early and late to keep his wife comfortable is giving a proof of devotion that is beyond all question. He is simply saying it with pot roasts and spinach instead of orchids.

In reality, every woman who has a brain that functions even on one cylinder knows that deeds count more than words, and that the husbands who are glib love-makers at home are oftener than not philanderers abroad.

DEAR MISS DIX: Would I be doing the right thing by telling a boy friend of mine about some of his faults? Especially about his clothes. He takes me out quite often, but I am ashamed to have him meet my friends, because he looks so slouchy and unkempt. Apparently he never combs his hair and his suit looks as if he had slept in it. I think his personal appearance is keeping him from getting ahead in the world. Should I tell him, or just discontinue going out with such a boy?

PUZZLED GIRL

ANSWER: If you tell the boy about his shortcomings, he will probably automatically discontinue going out with you because young men do not take kindly to criticism.

But you will be doing grand missionary work that may be the salvation of the youth, for, however much he may resent having you hold the mirror up to him and forcing him to see himself as others see him, the chances are that unless he is hopelessly vain and indolent he will reform.

No boy really wants a girl to be ashamed to be seen out with him. On the contrary, he desires her to be so proud of him that she flaunts him before her friends, and when he finds out that it humiliates her to be seen with a human ragbag he is very likely to make a break for the barber and the tailor.

And you are quite right in thinking that a slovenly appearance is a fatal handicap to a man in business.

DEAR MISS DIX: I have been married fifteen years. About a year ago my husband told me that he did not love me any more and never would and begged me to leave him, which I did. A few days later he came for me and asked me to come back home and said he had changed his mind about loving me. Now he wants me to leave again and I don't know what to do. The trouble is that he is crazy for children and I have none. What shall I do?

WIFE

ANSWER: Evidently your husband loves you and you are necessary to his happiness, but when he is with you all the time he does not realize this. My advice is to go away for a while and when he misses you and comes for you again, tell him that you will come on the condition that he will agree to adopt a baby.

DOROTHY DIX cannot reply personally to readers, but will answer problems of general interest through her column.
