THREE BROTHERS SURELY MUST DIE

To be Electrocuted on Thursday Next.

The Governor at First Committed to Imprisonment for Life the Sentence of the third but after Changed his Mind.

NEWBURGH, N. Y., Sept. 26.—Gov. Odell has refused to grant the application of former Judge J. Rider Cady for commutation of the sentence of the Van Wormer boys, except in the case of Frederick, the youngest, who have been condemned to death for the murder of their uncle, Peter A. Hallenbeck, in Columbia county. This was the final appeal for the three boys, and the executions will take place on October 1.

Farmer Peter Hallenbeck was shot down on his threshold on the night before Christmas Eve, 1901. His brother and sister-in-law had gone with the hired man of the family to a Christmas tree celebration at Greenport church, a quarter of a mile away, leaving the farmer with his wife and sister-in-law in the house. The moon was shining brightly on the snow outside and hearing voices in the road the farmer looked out of the window and saw four men going up the road. They wore masks and their overcoats were turned inside out, showing the check linings.

"Chicken thieves, I guess," said the farmer to his wife; "we'll have to watch out."

Fifteen minutes later a knock at the kitchen door was heard. The farmer opened it a few inches and a hand holding a big nickel revolver was thrust in. The pistol was fired into the farmer's body at so close range that his coat was set on fire.

The door swung open and four men, all masked, rushed in. One of them stepped behind the farmer and shot him in the back. Then, as the women rushed shrieking to the garret, the men stood over him, firing into his body.

When the house was quiet again the women crept down stairs, intercepted the folks on their way from church and told of the crime. Search for the three Van Wormer boys, the farmer's nephews, and their cousin, Harvey Bruce, disclosed that they had got home to Kinderhook, seven miles away, late that night after a long drive in a hired wagon. They had been heard to threaten the farmer, and they had a hard name throughout the countryside.

The four were arrested, and in jail Harvey Bruce, youngest of the four, saved himself by turning State's evidence. He told how the Van Wormers had invited him to go with them, taking his revolver along to give Uncle Peter a "surprise," how they had got him to open the door and had murdered him on the threshold. Bruce swore he only shot into the ceiling.

At the trial he escaped with a sentence of imprisonment for life. The three others were condemned to death. Then began the attempts to save them. The Court of Appeals affirmed the sentence and the Governor was asked to interfere. The sole plea made for the boys was that they had not intended to kill any one; the work was merely intended as a boy's prank. But public opinion was strongly set the other way. The application was strongly opposed by many of the clergy and townspeople of Columbia, because the murder was a particularly cold-blooded one, and also because of the general bad character of the three brothers.

All the jurors who heard the case, and two-thirds of the voters in the county joined in petitions to the Governor to allow the law to take its course for the sake of the common safety.

Against this volume of public opinion unanimously against the three prisoners there stood only their counsel, headed by Mr Cady, who had taken up the case largely out of charity; and the widowed stepmother of the three young men. She had married their father when they were youngsters and had given them such bringing up as they had had. From the moment of their arrest she fought to shield them from the consequences of their crime though her own sister was the wife of Peter Hallenbeck and the shock of his murder sent her within a few months also to the grave.

Governor O'Dell in the course of his decision says: Although young they are men, being at the time of the commission of the crime aged, respectively, 20, 22 and 26 years, and there is not the slightest reason to believe that they did not fully understand and appreciate the enormity of the crime they committed and the terrible consequences that would follow detection. That they are brothers is certainly a circumstance well calculated to excite interest in the case together with the earnest hope that some good ground might possibly be discovered for saving them from the fearful sentence. But that fact itself is clearly no ground. It cannot upon any principle of justice be regarded as giving them a claim to clemency which otherwise they would not have.

I have, however, concluded to commute the sentence of Frederick M. Van Wormer to imprisonment for life. I do this, not because there is anything in the evidence to prove him less guilty than his companions, but because, being the youngest and but 20 years of age, it is not unreasonable to suppose that in the part he took in the affair he acted under the influence of the other brothers.

But in the cases of Willis and Burton no grounds whatever appear for intervention. Willis the eldest of the three brothers was 26 at the time of the homicide, and of course was not under such influence as is supposed in the case of Frederick; and Burton, although but 22, appears from the whole record to have been the active spirit and leader. The duty of denying an appeal to set aside the death penalty no ground existing for granting it, is always a most painful one and in the case of these two brothers is exceedingly so, but there is no way of escape from it; there is absolutely no ground that could justify the commutation asked for them and there remains to me no choice but to refuse to grant it.

The two brothers will be electrocuted in Clinton prison next Thursday.

CHANGED HIS MIND.

Albany, Sept. 27.—Until his luncheon hour at 1 o'clock yesterday afternoon, Gov. Odell intended to commute to imprisonment for life the sentence of the youngest of the three Van Wormer boys. Accordingly the Governor gave out two typewritten statements giving reasons for his action. The first statement showed why, in the Governor's mind, the youngest of the Van Wormers should have his sentence commuted, and this was given out at 1 o'clock at Newburgh to all the newspaper men.

When the Governor returned from luncheon at 2 o'clock he had changed his mind and gave out another statement, in which he declined to interfere with the sentence of any of the Van Wormer boys.

We know what tailors can do. We know "FIT REFORM" Clothes. If you don't believe that "FIT REFORM" clothes are as fine in quality—as well made—as any merchant tailor can produce, here is the test we want you to make.

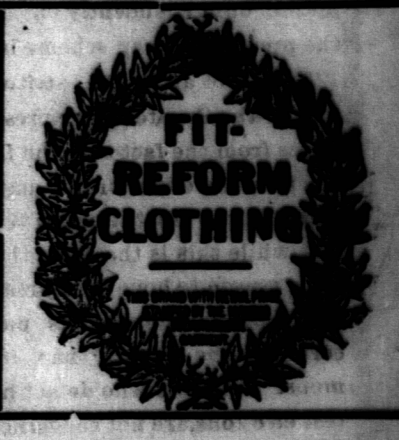

Take a "FIT-REFORM" Suit and a high class made to measure suit. Compare style for style—cloth for cloth—lining for lining. Note the correct collar—new cut of the sleeve—perfectly proportioned shoulders. Rip the two coats apart—compare the hidden work—the hand shaped, hand moulded, hand stitched collar, lapels; shoulders, sleeves of "FIT-REFORM" with the other. Take vest and Trousers the same way. Make any test—any comparison you will. And see for yourself if the "FIT-REFORM" Suit does not equal the tailor's suit in every respect, and surpass it in some.

If not, you know our guarantee—money back for any reason or without reason.

Dry Goods Prices vs Furniture Prices

Said the manager of one of Canada's largest Departmental stores, whose catalogue may be found all over our Province:—"I would say that during the last ten years we have sent to P. E. Island $50.00 worth of General Dry Goods, CARPETS, clothing etc. to every $1.00 worth of Furniture." If this Departmental store, sold $1.00—Worth of Furniture per month in P. E. I. they would in the same period sell $5,000.00 worth of Dry Goods & c. Personally we believe that quality considered both Furniture and Dry Goods have been sold in the past at fair prices. Yet any dealer desiring to do so can easily get the names of dozens of families who for years have imported the bulk of their Dry Goods, Carpets, Clothing & c from Toronto.

We show the LARGEST STOCK of FURNITURE and CARPETS ever gathered together in this Province. And we can sell you goods at about the same price as some dealers (who are ignorant of Furniture values) have paid for their goods. This LARGE STOCK is open for inspection by the Public and we may add:
