Back to the Land Movement On

TORONTO, Nov. 29—(C. P.)—Reach for a scalpel instead of a strap. This in effect was the advice offered by Miss H. E. Robertson, general secretary of the Big Sister Association. "One of our 'problem girls' was very bad until we took out her tonsils. An appendix operation caused a further improvement," she declared in outlining the main causes of juvenile delinquency among girls.

ment. "Every unemployed man is given a plot of land from which he is expected to raise enough vegetables for himself and his family," she explained, "while in the winter the men are set to work repairing furniture and doing other useful work."

Touching briefly upon the "youth movement" in Europe, Miss Robertson stressed the fact that it is essentially a "back to nature movement. Hiking, not car riding, is the pastime of German youth, she declared.

Second Mr. Hoover In White House Is Busy Man

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28—There's a second Mr. Hoover in the White House—one little known to the world—who is relieved that the president's conference with Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt is over. Irwin H. ("Ike") Hoover, head usher for the last 25 years in the executive mansion handled the personal arrangements. He saw to the setting in the Red Room, had servants fix the fire, was sure the White House motor cars were where they were supposed to be, and in general "took care of the situation."

"I'm glad that's over," said "Ike," as he is known to hundreds of friends. "It was no trouble, of course, but I'm glad it's over." It was "Ike" Hoover that met the president-elect as the party drove up to the White House. He ushered Governor Roosevelt and Professor Moley into the mansion and to the elevator that carried them to the main floor of the White House, where the parley was held. In the Red Room the president and Secretary of the Treasury Ogden L. Mills awaited the Democratic conferees. "Ike" assured scores of reporters trying to discover what went on, that the greeting was most cordial.

He told, in all propriety, how the conversation began. "Ike" also described the Red Room to reporters who hadn't seen it. He answered scores of telephone calls at his office during the hours of the conversations, and assured inquirers that "no tea or other refreshments are being served." "No, they haven't broken up yet," said "Ike" a hundred times, probably, between 3.45 p. m. and 6 p. m. "We're not serving tea—or anything else. No, nothing's happened yet. They're still in there talking things over."

He was patient throughout, and with a ready answer to every quip or query from the reporters who flocked around the executive offices. "Ike" came to the White House in 1892 to install some electrical equipment, and has remained ever since. He became head usher about 25 years ago, having added ushering visitors around the White House to his other duties as time went on. He has gradually worked into a position of exceptional confidence among the men who head this country's government.

He has known well every president since Benjamin Harrison. To him they have been "just like other human beings." They have seemed to like his lack of formal approach. "I just stayed on to get a man named Hoover, my name in the White House as president," "Ike" jokes, "and I guess my job's about finished." But he has no intention of resigning because a second Roosevelt is coming to live there. "Why should a second Roosevelt worry me?" he retorted. "We may have a third, for all you know."

The Earl of Cavan is 67 years of age and served throughout the South African and the Great War. At the opening of the Great War, he commanded the 14th Corps and subsequently the brigade of guards and the guards' division, being mentioned in despatches numerous times. In the closing months of the war, he was in command of the 10th Italian army on the Piave front. Lord Cavan was aide-de-camp to the then Governor General of Canada, Lord Stanley of Preston from 1891 to 1893. NEW CONTEST UNDER WAY. The Fourteenth Canadian Egg Laying Contest got away to a good start at the Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa, for the week ending November 7. Most of the birds were received in excellent condition and appeared to be outstanding in quality. During the first week only six pens failed to score while egg weights appear much better than last year. Due to the building for this contest having been divided into separate pens space available has reduced the capacity in the National Contest to a total of 54 pens. The fellow who is stable usually has horse sense.
