had been so well done that at his death the franc, bulwarked in 1923 through an amendment to the French constitution, still was one of the world's soundest moneys and entirely backed by gold.

President Albert Lebrun disclosed today he often visited Poincaré to get his advice on problems confronting finance.

Saturday was set for his funeral. That day and Thursday, when King Alexander will be buried at Belgrade, will be days of national mourning for France. Already flags over the nation are at half mast, or bound with crepe, as ordered immediately after the assassinations.

The little shell-scarred cemetery where Poincaré will be buried is one of the few private cemeteries still existing in France. It is an old tradition in the family that has come down from one generation to another.

Nearly is the house where Poincaré was born. A marble plaque there commemorates that occasion.

Alarming Situation

While officials of the mining company appealed to the government to dispatch additional troops to cope with an increasingly alarming situation, the miners sent out word that "we have sworn that everyone who comes down to us must remain as long as we have to stay."

No Hope

"There is no more hope for them," he declared. Demanding that their employers raise coal miners' wages from less than $2 to $3.50 weekly, the men earlier today sent up a request for 345 coffins, and the laconic message: "We are determined to die. Forget about us. Goodbye to the children."

The member of Parliament brought back vivid descriptions of the scenes of horror below, the result of more than 100 hours of self-entombment without food or water. "I expected a terrible catastrophe in the coal mines any moment," he said.

Tied to Posts

Those most violent of the hunger-crazed miners have been tied to posts to prevent their killing themselves, he related, adding that "the trade union no longer has any control over the men."

"Utterly exhausted, they are huddled down there in the heat," he said, "lying on the dirty-water-soaked bed of the mine with huge chunks of coal for pillows. Some are unconscious. Nearly five days without water to drink has parched their throats, and they could not eat if they had food. Some of them utter sounds like tortured animals."

That the men would accept no compromise was confirmed by the secretary of their union, who brought up this message: "We have decided deliberately to commit suicide if our demands are not met. Suicide by starvation in the heart of the earth is no worse than slow death by starvation if we continue to accept less than $2 a week. We are Hungarians. As such we hope that our countrymen may hear our cry of pity from the depths of the mine and from the depths of our hearts."

Government Baffled

The government, baffled in all its efforts to end the miners' grim resistance, earlier planned to send troops to the bottom of the mine to bring the miners up at the point of bayonets and guns, but desisted when it was pointed out that the mine elevators would hold only 16 men.

In their desperation, it was argued, the miners probably would turn to pieces any such small detachment.

The mining company claims general economic and market conditions do not allow it to employ miners more than two days a week now pay more than $2.

Little things trapped Chalny. Just as they had his two alleged confederates, Ivan Rajtich and Zvonemmer whose arrest at Annesmasse put police on the trail of the Balkan band "Ustashi" that they charge plotted, from its headquarters, Janka Vuzsta, Hungary, the killings.

At the conclusion of Mr. Boulter's address Mr. H. K. S. Hemming added a few words. Mr. Boulter, he said, was probably in a better position than any one on the Island to size up the situation, particularly in the matter of potatoes. The outlook is certainly "encouraging and is just one more proof of the fact that, when our farmers and fishermen sell their products in their lowest form, they become nothing better than "hewers of wood and drawers of water" for our fellow Canadians in the other provinces and our friends south of the border line. "It is indeed true," Mr. Hemming said, "that the situation should be faced squarely," and he urged upon his fellow Rotarians to use their influence in having a committee of investigation appointed without delay as he had suggested to the Board of Trade last week.

He further felt that the question of potato faking should be taken up at once, so that the farmers might be given an opportunity of feeding their potatoes to their animals rather than sacrifice them at present day prices. He stressed the point that faked potatoes do not freeze nor do they sprout and could be kept for years, just as wheat is kept. He felt that some arrangement might be made to finance the whole surplus crop of the Island.

Japanese Fox Men On Visit To Island

(Special to the Guardian) Mr. Koichi Odazima, veterinary surgeon, attached to the Department of Livestock Farming, Central Experimental Station, Saghalien (Korafut Konuma) Northern Japan, has arrived in Charlottetown to join Mr. K. Narabe, chief of the Experimental Station, who is looking over farms on Prince Edward Island with the view of obtaining stock for Japanese ranches.

Mr. Narabe arrived in Charlottetown on October 2nd last. There is an extensive black fox farming industry in Japan built up largely from Canadian stock, a large proportion of which came from fox ranches on Prince Edward Island. The Japanese fox men intend to visit fox ranches in New Brunswick on their return from the Island. Neither Mr. Odazima nor Mr. Narabe can speak English or French. Mr. Narabe was accompanied by an interpreter, T. Horio, importer of Montreal.

The visit of these two representative Japanese, particularly in the case of Mr. Odazima, is an example of the ease with which travellers in Canada who cannot speak English or French are able to travel from place to place. On arrival of the latter at Montreal from Japan he was placed on a Canadian National train there by a Canadian National representative card conductor enroute to Montreal he was again taken in charge by railway officials and placed on the train for Prince Edward Island. In Charlottetown he was met by Mr. Narabe and Mr. Horio.

Some people, he said, contended that the Island farmers had gone crazy on potato growing, which fact, however, he denied for the farmers on the average set aside only four acres for potatoes, which certainly was not a serious matter.

Mr. Boulter closed by saying that the situation was so serious that it called for the best efforts of everybody, to do what they could to better a situation that was the worst that he had experienced at this season of the year.

At the conclusion of Mr. Boulter's address Mr. H. K. S. Hemming added a few words. Mr. Boulter, he said, was probably in a better position than any one on the Island to size up the situation, particularly in the matter of potatoes. Heavy Loss By Typhoon

(A. P. By Guardian's Special Wire) MANILA, Oct. 16.—(Tuesday)—Heavy damage to property and shipping was caused by a typhoon which struck Manila early today. No loss of life was reported immediately.

Four ships were driven ashore by the raging storm. Tramways, telephone and light service were put out of commission and throughout the neighboring countryside there were reports of widespread damage.

Typhoons have caused hundreds of deaths and laid waste extensive areas in the past years in the Philippine Islands.

One of the most severe swept across the Southern Philippine town of Jolo April 29, 1932, and the Red Cross reported 150 persons were killed and about 30,000 made homeless and destitute.

Another typhoon which raged across the Centre Philippines in January, 1931, killed another 150 persons, and did property damage estimated by officials at $1,250,000. In this storm, the steamship Lozano foundered, drowning 27 persons, while 30 others died in the sinking of 50 fishing boats.

Accompanied by torrential rainfall, typhoon winds have been known to reach velocities of 100 miles and more per hour, sweeping before them all buildings not substantially built.

kindly. He referred to Hauptmann as "Richard" in his opening question.

Fawcett set the stage for the alibi: Hauptmann said his wife worked at the bakery from 1929 to June 1932; that he was living with his wife at that time; that he frequently drove her to work and brought her home.

Then, down to the day of the kidnapping.

"Do you recollect whether she worked late on Tuesday nights during March, 1932?"

"A—Yes, I do."
Q—And did you take her home on Tuesday night during March, 1932?"
A—Yes.
Q—And what time, if you did so, did you take your wife down to the store, on the 1st of March, 1932?"
A—Around seven o'clock.
Q—And on that morning, did you work for the Reliance Property Management Company?"
A—Well, that is one thing I cannot exactly remember.
The questioning brought out that Hauptmann, a carpenter, did some work around January to April, 1932 for the Reliance Company, and charged to substantiate the statement were offered into evidence.
Hauptmann also stated he worked for the Majestic Hotel. The defendant further stated he thought, although he was not certain, he worked at the Majestic Hotel on March 1, 1932. On frequent days, he said, he had no job and went to employment agencies to seek work.
Fawcett took up again the chair of events the all-important Tuesday.
Q—Now, after you left your wife at the store, what did you do after that?"
A—I brought the car home to the garage.

Q—And then what did you do at the rest of the day?
The courtroom now was at the peak of attention. Long it had been there. Hauptmann would refute the charges with his alibi.
A—Well, I can't exactly remember if I worked for the Majestic Hotel, but as far as I can remember I took the subway and went down town—I don't know if I went down Sixth Avenue looking for a job (dozens of employment agencies dot Sixth Avenue) or if I went to the Majestic Hotel.
Hauptmann here stated he went frequently, just before and after the first of March, to the Majestic Hotel to seek employment.
