Pease ECONOMY PIPE AND PIPELESS FURNACE

Here is a letter from a satisfied user:—"I am pleased to say we are very well satisfied with our Pease "Economy" Furnace. It answers every purpose for which we got it. Heats every room evenly and is very economical."

The severe cold and sudden changes of the Canadian climate have no terrors for the man whose house is heated by a Pease Furnace. Hundreds of testimonials from satisfied users in all parts of the country tell of severe conditions successfully overcome by Pease Pipe and Pipeless styles.

And another good report as below:—"The Pease Pipeless Furnace has been very satisfactory. We have given it an extreme test and find that it is a real heater and coal saver. I am more than pleased."

Economical Development of Czechoslovakia

The Czechoslovak Republic, established at the close of the Great War upon the ruins of the old Austro-Hungarian Empire has up to now been a "terra incognita" to an average foreigner notwithstanding its geographical position in the very heart of Europe and its importance which this young State is called to play in the successful solution of economic problems which the various Succession States present.

The former Danubian Empire was not essentially an industrial State. The industrial features which it possessed, however, were derived mainly from Bohemia, Moravia and Silesia which composed the historical area of the Czechoslovak Republic representing 80% of the whole of industry of Austro-Hungarian Monarchy.

Some people have been anxious from the economic point of view about the new order of things in Central Europe as instead of a single economic whole there suddenly appears a group of small States each of which seeks to solve every economic problem from its own narrow individualistic point of view of national policy.

The first duty of the Czechoslovak Government on taking over the control of the affairs of the country was to ensure the means of existence of the population which meant the import of food-stuffs, to recover the economical life and currency which was carried out through radical successful methods so that the Czechoslovak crown counts today among the appreciated and most stable exchange in Europe and last but not the least to re-establish the export trade on which the prosperity of the country is mainly dependent.

Comb Sage Tea In Hair To Darken It

The old-time mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur for darkening gray, streaked and faded hair is grandmother's recipe, and folks are again using it to keep their hair a good, even color, which is quite sensible, as we are living in an age when a youthful appearance is of the greatest advantage.

Nowadays, though, we don't have the troublesome task of gathering the sage and the mussy mixing at home. All drug stores sell the ready-to-use product, improved by the addition of other ingredients, called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." It is very popular because nobody can discover it has been applied. Simply moisten your comb or a soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, but what delights the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, is that, besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also produces that soft lustre and appearance of abundance which is so attractive.

of introducing foreign products to Czechoslovak market than by exhibiting at the Prague Fair. The foreign goods submitted for inspection by potential customers arouse enthusiastic interest, and the increasing number of foreign exhibitors furnishes proof of the importance of the Prague Fair for the development of international trade.

of the Fair supplies reliable assistance to act as representatives of exhibiting firms during the progress of the Fair at charges commensurate with their duties. The presence of foreign exhibitors is extremely important for initiating trade relations with Czechoslovakia, Central Europe, Balkan States and Eastern Europe from where there is the greatest influx of visitors to the Fair.

Horrible Thought Burroughs — I know a man who looks so much like you that one could hardly tell you apart. Lenders—You haven't paid him that five I lent you three months ago, have you? The houses in cities and towns have no yards. They are joined closely to each other to lessen the danger from thieves.

Watch your Skin! It's up to you to look your best. Young girls, old girls, plain girls, pretty girls—don't we all know those days before the mirror when, with a sigh, we turn away and say, "Gosh—I do look plain!" On those days when our skin looks bad and won't get right—our noses won't powder—our eyes are dull! We all know them. But wise women watch their skin and at the first sign of something take the best remedy—a dose of Beecham's Pills.
