them, but I feel that I cannot take these little girls for fear they might turn out like their mother. Yet I cannot bear to give him up and the worry over it is killing me. What shall I do? X.

Answer: Marry the man and forget the past. Be a real mother to these poor little motherless children and rear them up into being fine women.

Don't be afraid of their heredity. Environment works wonders, and if you bring these little girls up in a clean home that is full of love and happiness and instill ideals of purity and honor in their minds, there will be no danger of their following in their mother's footsteps.

And think what a great missionary work you will be doing. What greater good could you do in the world than to take this poor distraught man, with his helpless little children, and give them a wife's and a mother's love and care and comfort? And I am sure you will get your reward in having your old romance come true at last after so many trials and tribulations. DOROTHY DIX.

Dear Miss Dix—I am a young man in my early 30s and am taking a medical course at college. I am wholly dependent financially upon my father. I have six more years to go to school. I am engaged to a girl whom I adore. My father advises me to give her up and continue my education, but my friends advise me to marry now while we are deeply in love with each other. What do you think? P. C.

Answer: I think your father's advice is wisest, because I feel very sure that if you sacrificed your career in order to marry the girl you would bitterly regret it in after years, while, on the other hand, if you and the girl really love each other, your affection will survive the ordeal of waiting until you are in a position to marry.

But you are wise not to be engaged all of that time and to put the thought of marrying entirely out of your head for the present. Nothing could distract your attention from your studies more than a long engagement with the demands that the girl would naturally make upon your time and thoughts. Besides, you have no idea whether she will be the kind of girl you will want for a wife after you have had six years more of study and of association with the men and women with whom you will be thrown in contact in college.

Nor would you want to keep the girl bound to you with the uncertainty of whether she would come up to your ideal when you are ready to marry. It is best for both of you that you should be free, with the understanding that if you ever want to take the subject up again you can do it.

But one thing I urge on you. Don't marry and lay the burden of your wife's support on your father's shoulders. So many young people marry and expect father and mother to sacrifice till more in order to feed and clothe their wives. That is as selfish and ungrateful a thing as a child can do. DOROTHY DIX.

W. C. T. U. Notes

TO MAKE THE NATION DRY

For the sake of little children Who cling to us and cry, Let the mighty host of mothers Work to make the nation dry.

For the love of sons and daughters Whose hearts with hope beat high, Let us fight and watch and pray To make the nation dry.

For the cause of weak-willed brothers Whom the tempter's ever nigh, Let us take our stand most bravely To make this nation dry.

For the love we bear our Saviour Who on the Cross did die, Let us look to God in heaven To make this nation dry.

ARGUMENTS AGAINST THE USE OF CIGARETTES

Tobacco of commerce is the leaves of a poisonous tropical plant, which was grown and used by the Indians when Columbus discovered America. Smoking is an objectionable habit which the civilized white man has copied from the barbarian Indians. It is a dangerous habit from every point of view. The effect it produces will depend on the constitution of the person, and on his occupation.

My arguments against the use of cigarette tobacco are:

It is not food, as it does not contain one ingredient which could go to nourish the body.

It creates a habit and an appetite which enslaves the victim and from which it is most difficult to break.

It is an injury to the user, at first interfering with the functions of the organs and then producing chronic derangement of them. It inflames the mouth, causes a loss of saliva and appetite, and sometimes cancer of the tongue. In the stomach, nausea and vomiting are excited, especially in the beginning of its use. The blood becomes watery and the corpuscles are gradually poisoned. The heart beat becomes weak and irregular, the circulation poor, and a person becomes pale. The lungs are irritated, often producing a cough; the brain is less active; the memory impaired, and the motor and sympathetic nerves are blunted or altogether paralyzed. All the special senses are affected. The muscles become tremulous. The eyesight is confused and color blindness often results. A person's hearing is less keen and the stature stunted. If the habit has been formed in youth.

It is a habit which is very offensive and sickening to those who do not use tobacco, and the smoker is so ungentlemanly as to disregard the rights of others. This is seen in the home, on the public streets and in the crowded cars.

It is a bad example. When young boys see their elder brothers or their companions smoking, they think it must be a manly habit, and the repeated trials behind the barn, under the shed and out of sight, in spite of the nausea and vomiting, tell how strongly the boy desires to be "manly."

It is unclean to the person, and his surroundings, discoloring the teeth, tainting the breath and giving the clothes a disagreeable odor.

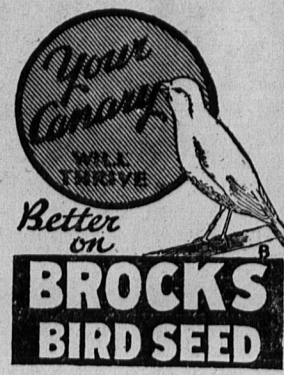

It is a great waste of money for what creates only injury. In many countries there is much more money spent annually for tobacco than for boots and shoes or for public education.

Are there two standards of morals? We would be horrified to see a lady (?) swagger down the street puffing a cigarette. Why? Many reasons could be given for avoiding her company.

Such are my reasons for believing that young boys who smoke cigarettes are spending their money for what does not benefit them in any way.

YOU ARE TO BLAME

In Canada, with the exception of Prince Edward Island, the temperance issue in the Ottawa House and Provincial Legislatures is absolutely under the control of the Liquor Traffic.

Backed by His Satanic Majesty, there is a constant charge that even the pulpit is falling to give voice against the manufacture and sale of intoxicants, but the cure of this loathsome business is in the hands of the electorate. And more, the cure is in the hands of enfranchised women, and further, it is in the hands of professed Christian women voters.

An outstanding London, Ont., pastor, preaching on "The Church and the Liquor Traffic," said: "The preacher who raises his voice against the system of Government Sale is told by these representatives of organized evil that he is mixing up in matters outside his province."

This traffic has become so politically entrenched in Canada through scheming politicians, manipulated by distiller and brewer, that responsible voters have forgotten their primal duty of protecting our Dominion, and placing morals first. As responsible voters would that Canadians would not forget that the Government is the selling agency for brewer and distiller!

To again quote the fearless London publication:

"The liquor traffic is the only industry in Ontario that has been strong enough to force the Government to buy and sell its product and collect its bills. It is the only industry in Ontario that carries on under the protection and honor of our Provincial Coat of Arms. Look at the truck loads of liquor being unloaded and the hundreds of bottles being carried away daily from the store with the Coat of Arms. How humiliating!"

While this is going on, the Church, the W. C. T. U., the Prohibition Union are being exhorted by outsiders to carry on an educational campaign with the perfect understanding that the liquor trade is ready at any moment to hold the cup of inebriation to the lips in the ranks of oncoming youth. Was it not Christ who said, "O fools and slow of heart?"

Every time there is a vote, local, provincial, or national, this curse of a national $141,000,000 yearly liquor bill must receive a blow until Canadians have regained their lost personal liberty in this crime-producing issue affecting the home circle, inter-social conditions in all classes, and the sacrificing of a "Well Done" at a final Judgment Seat. Is it not written that drunkards shall not inherit the kingdom of God?

OUR GARDEN OF THE GULF

The Dominion Bureau of Statistics, dealing with religious beliefs, reveals the fact that prohibition Prince Edward Island has the least number of non-Christian inhabitants of any of the provinces, the number being 28 persons in a population of over 88,000, which is twice as many people to the square mile in comparison with the other provinces.

The education of the Island compares splendidly, also, with that of other provinces, having one public school to every 4 1/2 square miles. As a matter of course, its fishery contribution to the production of Canada is wonderfully valuable.

Prince Edward Island has the peculiarity of operating nearly one-third of fox farming in the Dominion.

The Island is small but can make the unique claim of being the richest of any of the provincial divisions. Best of all, and the secret of much of its success, financially,

Choirs Festival Linked Present And Middle Ages

HEREFORD, England, Oct. 5.—(O.P.)—The Three Choirs Festival which has just been held with the customary interest in it and success as an artistic musical affair, is famous as "Hereford's Mediaevalism," the latest festival having been the 219th annual celebration by the Three Choirs to Hereford, Gloucester and Worcester. It was opened on a Sunday with the usual pomp, a bright sun turning to brilliance the sober colors of the procession as the clergy and civic dignitaries made their way to the Hereford Cathedral.

In a modern industrial town such a procession brings with it a sudden strangeness. One is reminded of history and institutions separated.

ated from the present by a great gulf. Hereford and a few other English cities can still begin their festivals with ceremonies in the open air that link today with a past which stretches unbrokenly through the centuries.

The beautiful cathedral, which, of course, was the chief meeting place during the festival, is far more than a survival of the Middle Ages. It radiates a spiritual force which links the music heard through centuries within its walls with such music as was given at this last festival.

The festival began purely as a musical enterprise, and the common belief that it is basically a money-raising affair, is erroneous, though money is raised thereat.
