TIMELY NOTES ON TOPICS CONNECTED WITH Silver Fox Farming

The sixth annual Provincial Pelt Show was concluded at Summerside on Thursday afternoon at four o'clock when the pelts were removed to the Canadian National Silver Fox Breeders' Association building. The white marked and platinums are being shipped to the Canadian Fur Auction Company to be sold on a special sale of white marked and platinums the week of January 24th to 27th. The silvers will be sold on the March sale. The whole collection is being advertised in the Fur Trade Review and Women's Wear Daily, both New York publications, and it is expected that quite a number of American buyers will take an interest in it.

The show, which looked as though it would have a small entry list up until a few days prior to the closing date December 31st, turned out to be second best in numbers with a total of 449 pelts compared to the greatest aggregate of 492 and was by all odds the best in quality. The silver collection was good with all classes, except the darker ones, well filled. The white marked classes were exceptionally strong and the platinums were indeed beautiful. The white marked and platinums formed about 40 percent of the collection, showing the great strides that have been made in the production of these new types.

We were particularly struck with a full silver pelt exhibited by Keir Woodside of Hamilton. This pelt had that whitish silver so much desired and so hard to find. It was large, full furred and had an excellent brush and tip. Mr. Woodside is sojourning with a friend in Florida but in a very short time will be acquainted with the fact that he has won the championship. Many were the expressions of —Well done, Keir— and—I'm glad — etc., which shows that Mr. Woodside's win was a popular one.

There were so many good foxes shown and the prize list was so well distributed that it is hardly fair to pick out any one particular person among the exhibitors of silvers. The prize list will speak for itself and shows that no one person has a monopoly of high class foxes. In the white marked strains George A. Callbeck showed up particularly well and in the platinums he made a run-away race of it. The writer had the privilege of viewing these the evening prior to their being judged and was astounded at the display. Part of the collection was male and female adults some two or three years old, some only yearlings, and they were magnificently furred!

A splendid specimen was a Cody extra light platinum with the largest brush and tip we have ever seen—unless it might have been the Bunbury Giant. We believe it landed Grand Champion Platinum There were several types, all reflecting breeding operations, the results of different sires used by Mr. Callbeck in his search for the best. May we say a word also for the ranchers who took care of these animals—they must have been thoroughly conscientious and knew their jobs.

The judging was done by F. George McLeod, Black River, N. B., who is inspector of foxes for the New Brunswick government. Mr. McLeod put the most intense concentration into his work and was thoroughly conscientious and in our opinion and that of other exhibitors made a mighty fine job of it. The show committee consisting of Lowell Hancock and Bob Humphrey, worked hard. The classifying was done by Brenton Clarke and Beecher MacDougall and they, too, worked into the late hours of the night or wee small hours of the morning to get everything ready.

Secretary Walter Shaw assisted by Stewart Wright, had a busy time tabulating the results of the judging. Few who have not been through the mill can realize the amount of detail necessary to put on a pelt show and the writer for one thanks those connected with it for doing a swell job.

Probably on account of the better prices and better outlook for foxes and also because of the interest in new types, the attendance of fox breeders was this year larger than at any previous pelt show held in Summerside. We noticed among them, men who had pretty nearly gone out of the business, men who know the game and produced good foxes in the years gone by and are now edging in, again attracted by the possibilities or producing white marked and platinums. They have the pens and equipment and have gone out and bought and with their knowledge and experience will make good.

We forgot to mention in the above the exhibit of pearl platinums. These were more attractive as pelts than they appeared to us as live animals, and we therefore have a better understanding of why people pay $150. to $200 per pelt for them. Peter Clark, with whom we conversed, said: "I have quite a lot of faith in pearl platinums. I believe Europe will want them when the war is over." He was also of the opinion that there would be quite a demand for dark necks and half - silvers, but where can we get them? said Mr. Clark. There is no one apparently breeding foxes of that type and those we receive are from litters of silvers and do not have the color or quality of the halves and three quarters which we bred a few years ago. South America is very keen for the white faces and platinums but whether or not Europe will want them is something we will have to wait and see." Mr. Clark's remarks re darks will give us all food for thought. However, if such a thing happens as the market wants them we do not know how on earth we could get back into them again.

Due to the fact that the secretary of the show did not have clerical staff to type the results of the judging it had to be left until his return to Charlottetown yesterday, and the results we believe are appearing elsewhere in this paper today. For that reason we are shortening up our notes.

The following telegram was received last week from Ollie McNeill, Fort Qu'Appelle, Sask., dated Omaha, Nebraska. Ollie was on the way home from attending the sale of silver fox and other types at Denver, Colorado. "Denver sale real good. White faces high, reaching $200 for specimens. Full silvers very strong. Ollie."

Mr. and Mrs. George Keefe of Charlottetown were passengers on the plane arriving Thursday evening. They had flown from Montreal, but Mrs. Keefe had a longer journey having flown from Windsor, Ont. She had been in Muskegon, Michigan, visiting her father George Hume, formerly of Murray River who has been fox ranching there over twenty years. Mr. Hume is the proprietor of the American Fox Ranching Company, which is a very large concern producing the finest silvers, white marked and platinum foxes. Many will remember Mr. Hume, who is a gentleman in every sense of the word, and who knows fox farming very thoroughly. Our last meeting with him was at the Royal Winter Fair Fox Show in 1922 where he purchased some of the best animals exhibited there.

5TH ARMY

ALGIERS Jan. 7—(AP) —British and American troops fought their way methodically through the maze of Nazi defences guarding the communications centre of Cassino today and threatened to outflank the fortress village of San Vittore, six miles to the southeast where for three days American infantry had engaged in desperate, no quarter street fighting with a German garrison.

American forces to the east of Cassino hacked their way forward four miles to storm 3,530 foot Mount Maio, cutting a German supply road. Meanwhile British troops pressing up the Garigliano River from the south reached the edge of the Cassino plain, where their tanks might go into action for the first time.

Germans defending the crumbled remains of San Vittore were in imminent danger of being trapped and cut off by these converging Allied columns.

Although the 5th Army's 10 mile wide offensive had gained from one to four miles since the jump off early Wednesday morning, there yet was no indication of a substantial break through. The Germans were retreating from one defence line to the next after making the Allies pay the highest possible price.

British troops at the southern end of the active front pushed steadily northward from Rocca D'Evandro and captured 79 more prisoners for a two day bag of 126.

The full striking power of the Allies had not yet been brought into play, as the tactical air forces had been hampered by bad weather since dive bombers supported the first day's advance. Ground progress likely will speed up when the skies clear.

LONDON —(CP)— Prince Henry of Pless of Poland, interned early in the war, has been released by Home Secretary Herbert Morrison.
