J. H. BELL,

THE MORNING GUARDIAN

MONDAY, JANUARY 15, 1900.

THE TRANSVAAL FRANCHISE.

We are receiving letters from time to time asking that THE GUARDIAN make a re-statement of the facts before stated in these columns in regard to the disabilities of the Outlanders and other causes of the war in South Africa. Space will not permit going over all the ground again. There are one or two points, however in regard to the franchise in the Transvaal upon which there appears to be much mis-apprehension which it seems desirable to correct. When Kruger first invited foreign settlers to the Transvaal the naturalisation laws there were fairly liberal. A foreigner or British subject could then obtain full citizenship after two years residence. But the law was quickly repealed and all Outlanders, as they were called, were prevented from being naturalised. After this, under pressure, a term of 14 years probation was set up, and this remains the law of the Transvaal at present. That is, in the case of a British or other foreign subject desiring to become a permanent resident and citizen of the Transvaal he must first renounce his allegiance to his Sovereign, and then, after remaining in the country 14 years and paying taxes continuously during that time, he might be admitted to vote and hold office.

We have said he might be admitted to vote, but under certain severe restrictions. During the 14 years of probation he would be the citizen of no country, having renounced all allegiance to the government under which he was born. During that time he must not only pay taxes but be liable to serve in the Boer army at 12 hours notice, and would be frequently called to serve, without pay, clothing, or even food, which he would be required to provide for himself. At the end of the 14 years he could only be permitted to vote by having his humble petition approved by two thirds of his Boer neighbors in the military district where he lived, by the district commander, and finally by President Kruger himself.

This is the position of the greater half of the resident white population of the Transvaal. In fact the English-speaking portion alone of the white population make up more than half its total and nearly all of them are under these disabilities. Those who have applied to be naturalised are now compelled to fight in the Boer armies. Those who have not applied are prohibited from having arms in their possession, and are powerless to protect themselves. When, during the negotiations before the war the Boer Government consented to reduce the term of probation from 14 to seven years, all the other restrictions were to be retained, so that the right to vote would depend, as before, on the consent of the Boer electors, of the field cornet and the caprice of the President himself.

There will be a small army of Canadians in South Africa before long if the war goes on. A first Contingent of over 1,000 men is to be followed by a second of nearly 1,200. And now the Imperial Government has accepted Lord Strathcona's offer to defray the cost of equipping and maintaining a force of 400 mounted Canadians and has also accepted British Columbia's offer to supply 100 mounted men. When they will get to the front the combined Canadian force should total pretty nearly 2,700 men.

It is not generally known that Gen. French who has been one of the most successful commanders in South Africa, spent some years in Canada. Such is the fact, however. During the time he assisted in organizing our splendid North West Mounted Police force. He was Col French then. Every one knows that Lord Wolseley when he was yet a young man led a force to the North West to crush the first rebellion and gained imperial promotion by that service. Gen. Buller, also, was years ago stationed in Halifax with his regiment.

A despatch from Sydney, Australia tells that there is unbounded enthusiasm there over the second Contingents that are being provided to go to South Africa. In all about 1,500 men will go from the several Provinces, half of whom will be sent by New South Wales alone. The provincial governments are being inundated with applications by volunteers. One prominent citizen has contributed $15,000 and another $25,000 towards paying the expenses.

THE EDITOR'S MAIL.

Queen Square Floods.

SIR.—That old time nuisance—Queen Square flood—is again upon us. I would not fly to the press were it a new matter, but winter after winter the small foot-path to the Post Office, a place receiving more calls perhaps than any other institution in the City, is literally flooded with water after every one of our numerous thaws. Only last night I saw a pedestrian fall right in the middle of the pool. Surely something can be done to draw off this water.

Will the outgoing Council see to it?

Insured By The I. O. F.

The Independent Order of Foresters, following out in Manitoba the policy adopted in P. E. Island has given the members of the contingent now leaving for South Africa, the advantage of life assurance at actual cost that is, without the customary expenses connected with the taking out of policies. For the last few days Dr. Popham, physician of the order, Mr. W. D. Pettigrew, high secretary, and Mr. Thos. Waddell, D. S. C. R., have been busily engaged in effecting this insurance, with the result that they have insured 42 members of the contingent. Major Williams leading the list. The courts of the order here will look after the interests of the men in this matter during their absence.
