Captivating Plot and Brilliant Acting In "The Guardsman" At Capitol Theatre

Cleverness in acting, direction, play construction and lines are noticeable features of "The Guardsman," the new Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer comedy which opened yesterday at the Capitol Theatre.

The situation of the story, by Ferenc Molnar, the highly sophisticated Hungarian dramatist, puts an immediate strain on its principals. It concerns an actor who is insanely jealous of his wife, and makes love to her in disguise, in order to test her loyalty to him. The play was an enormous success on the stage, and it has been brought to equally successful cinema fruition by the same stars, Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne.

Lunt is magnificent both as the actor and the amorous, deep-voiced Russian Cossack, and as the wife with the enigmatic eyes, Lynn Fontanne runs him a close race for first honors.
