

EXHIBITION FARES TO ST. JOHN, N. B.

P. E. Island Railway Rates Extremely Low and Attractive.

In this issue is printed a large advertisement from the offices of the Dominion Exhibition, St. John, N. B., quoting transportation rates from the various points along the P. E. Island Railway to the bustling New Brunswick centre during the national fair, September 5 to 15 next. As will be noticed by the list the railway people have made most generous concessions which will undoubtedly assure a record-breaking exodus from the Island on the dates mentioned. There will be two classes of fares, one to be issued from September 3rd to 14th and to remain good for return until the 16th. The other gives a stated number of days for departure and a stated number of days for return. This latter plan allows of making the rate remarkably low, indeed. The St. John Exhibition Executive have closed all the details of the big show and energetic exhibitors from all sections of the continent are already at work erecting their display booths. For those interested the Exhibition offices will send post free a complete list of hotel and private boarding and lodging accommodations in the city of St. John. 8-417, 20, 24, 18, 22.

LET ME BE LOVED AT HOME

Let me be loved at home, and I'll let me be loved at home, that's all I ask.

If all unnoticed by the world I would not barter that for gold nor fame;

Let little ones but romp about my chair, I am content to do some simple task, I do not wish the world to know my name.

And smile because once more I am at home, I do not seek applause from those outside.

What matters it to me that great men pass me by; Nor want my name a by-word, far and near;

That no one waits to hear what I would say; If but my loved ones look at me with pride,

If but my loved ones smile when I am nigh, I am content, though no one else may cheer.

Unnoticed and uncheered I'll go my way.

Let me be loved at home, there let me stay. My wife and babies happy round my knee;

If but they mourn when I have passed away, That will be honor great enough for me.

What though to heights of fame I may not climb, And few men know that I have been on earth?

If loved at home, I've nobly spent my time, I'll count my service one of honest worth.

Read the Directions

When you try a box don't for a moment imagine that the opening of the box or a look at the tablets will cure you—not even the taking of them irregularly.

When you open the box, read the directions carefully—follow them closely and you'll find the result will repay the effort.

It's folly to expect any magic cure—the directions were carefully and scientifically worked out and should be followed to the letter. Otherwise the action is slower and results less sure. When instructions are followed the results will be most gratifying and you'll save money.
