BUFFALO'S BIG FAIR

How the Visitors Will be Housed and Fed

DAILY CHRISTIAN WORK

The Following has Been Forwarded to the Guardian by an Island Lady.

An exposition cencessionaire who wished, for purposes of his own, to secure as big a list as possible of persons willing to take lodgers during the fair, published in one of the Buffalo papers an advertisement stating that he wanted 500 rooms to accommodate a party of 1000 visitors whom he expected to bring here from Boston. The concessionaire's boarding house list now contains nearly 10,000 names. And he had to pay for only two insertions of his little ad.

That shows the way Buffalonians are getting ready for the Pan-American. If outsiders are half as eager to see the fair as Buffalonions are to see visitors, it will be the greatest exposition that ever was held on this continent. Buffalo has determined to be hospitable this summer, if it never was before, and Buffalo thinks it has been hospitable enough before to know how, at least. Everybody's house is to be open to guests. Some of the more generous have invited their friends to come and be lodged free. But the attitude of the majority is expressed by the remark of a shareholder with whom I was talking the other day. "This is the first chance I had at anything of this kind, and I mean to make some money, if I can."

It's the money the Buffalo people are after. They did not get up this fair for purposes of philanthropy. They feel that they have financed it. They alone subscribed the stock and they alone have bought the bonds. It's a big municipal speculation in the entertainment line.

"I hope," said one enthusiast, "that this fair will leave everybody in town at least $1000 to the good; it ought to. Then we'll have money to spend here another year, and you'll see things keep booming right along." All may not be so sanguine, but it's hard to find a Buffalo man who is not expecting to get something out of the exposition, even if its nothing more than a dividend on his stock. I've met only one such. And he facetiously proposed to get a concession to exhibit himself on the midway as the greatest freak in Buffalo. He thought the visitors would be mighty glad to see a Buffalo man who was not trying to make money out of the fair.

But let not the wary outsiders jump at the conclusion that Buffalo is planning to fleece them. That is not the idea. Buffalo believes it has provided an attraction that it will be worth everybody's while to see. And Buffalo proposes to treat its guests so well that they will be glad they came. The rate on which the average householder is calculating to make "some money" out of lodgers is $1 per night. That will probably include breakfast in most cases. Dinners and suppers will naturally be bought at the restaurunts on or near the grounds and will cost about 50 cents each for an ordinary plain eater. That will mean $1 a day for board and lodgings. When compared with the cost of staying at most vacation resorts, Buffalo thinks that rate cught to draw the crowds.

Speaking of hot ls, any one who saw this town six months ago would be surprised at it to-day. Where then there were only half a dozen that the ordinary visitor heard of, the number now bas reached 187 with a capacity of almost 25,000. Some of these are specially built structures near the grounds. Others are remodelled office buildings or apartments houses. Still others are composed of gronds of dwelling houses leased by enterprising companies, and will be run on the cottage plan.

There will be plenty of places, too, where the economical visitor can secure good comfortable lodgings for much less than the standard rate of $2 for a night. These will be in the sections more remote from the exposition grounds, but there is no part of the city so remote that the exposition cannot be reached in about half an hour's ride. One plan is to build a big camp near the grounds where visitors will be accommodated in tents at somewhat less than house rates.

Landlords have provoked a big outcry for raising rents. Houses that rented for $25 have been raised to $50. Houses that rented for $50 have been raised to $100. But in most cases where this has been done it was not because the landlords expected the rent, but because they wanted possession of the houses. A good many householders are renting their homes furnished for the summer to be used as lodging and boarding houses, and have moved their families out of town.

The hope of making "some money" is already being realized by some. One concession has begun to pay dividends It handles a room renting bureau, and charges for registration. But those who are getting the best of the game now are the working people. There was a strike of plasterers at the exposition grounds a few weeks ago. The men were getting $1 a day and demanded $5. That was for an eight-hour day, mind you. The strike was compromised, but the men got pretty nearly what they wanted. That is a sample of what the unions have been doing for their members out on the grounds. Matters are only a little less lively around the city.

Buffalo has gone to work on the principle that the way to make money is to spend it, and the long-faced doubter who says it is not the correct principle is laughed to scorn. The infection has spread through every grade of society from the staid, covservative business men down to the newsboy and the bootblack. Buffalo has its mind fixed on having an all summer circus day.

Christian work will be prosecuted on an extensive scale during the progress of the exposition. It is proposed to erecat tent with a large seating capacity, outside the grounds, and hold daily religious services of various kinds therein, ministers of different denominations, who may tend their services, being selected to conduct them.

The promoters take the broad ground that religious work at Buffalo during the exposition is a matter of national concern, and have invited the co-operation of a number of men of national reputation to serve as a national committee of sufficient importance to make this work a topic of interest to the whole country, in which all localities and all denominations will be glad to have a part.

The importance of the work of this character done at the time of the Chicago exposition is perhaps scarcely realized by the general public but those who were directly connected with it and have watched for results declare that they were very beneficial and lasting and looked back upon the efforts made there with great satisfaction.

The opportunity for more extensive work in this direction and perhaps greater results seems to be offered at Buffalo during the exposition as it is expected that the attendance will be much larger than it was at the World's fair at Chicago It is predicted that there will be several millions more people in Buffalo next summer than were in Chicago in 1893.

GLASGOW'S BIG FAIR

This Important Scottish Centre the Objective Point of Travellers.

MOST IMPORTANT FAIR IN A KINGDOM

Its Purpose is to Present a Full Illustration of the Products and Manufactures of the British Empire and Its Dependencies.

May will see to the opening in Glasgow of an international exposition which will be the most representative and industrially important fair ever held in the United Kingdom. Its purpose is to present full illustrations of the products and manufacturers of the British Empire, its dependencies, dominions and colonies, and also the largest possible representation from other countries. Large pavilions are being erected by the Russian and Japanese government to exhibit the products of these countries on a unique scale. The Indian Empire will have a section in itself, and practically every country in the world will be represented including Persia and Morocco, for whom characteristic buildings have been specially erected.

The exposition will continue until November, and will not be opened by King Edward VII., as was at first intended, but by either the Duke of Connaught or the Duke of Fife. The site of the exhibition is the Kelvingrave park, where the exhibition of 1888 was held. The exposition resulted in a profit of $290,000, which was raised by subscriptions to $650,000. The whole sum was devoted to the construction of a permanent art gallery and museum in the park. This structure is now completed, and the new exhibition is intended to commemorate its completion as well as to record industrial progress. The exhibition is controlled by the municipality o Glasgow, but its financial success is guaranted by a fund of $2,500,000, subscribed by prominent citizens. Any surplus the exhibition may leave will be devoted to the purposes of the gallery and museum, but profit is not aimed at.

The exposition covers an area of 73 acres on the bank of the river Kelvin, a tributary to the Clyde. and under the shadow of the stately classic buildings of the University of Glargow. The permanent art galleries form the necleus of the plan of the exhibition buildings. The style is Spanish renaisaance, and the temporary buildings are modeled in harmony with the permanent building.

The maine buildings, including the art gallery, cover an area of about 20 acres. The industrial section, which is surmounted by a grand dome, is 700 feet long, 360 feet wide and covers nearly six acres. Through the centre runs the main avenue 700 feet long, 93 feet wide and about 70 feet high. The dome is 200 feet from the ground, the highest pinnacle in the building, 80 feet in diameter and decorated internally in ornate style. Four white towers rise to a height of about 180 feet, and running round, 100 feet up, there is a huge balcony 400 feet in circumference and averaging 25 feet wide, designed to form a promenade, from which an excellent view of the grounds may be obtained.

Under the dome is the grand entrance, approached by a grand plaza, with a peristyle or colonnade 200 feet long by about 80 feet wide. At each corner of the building and on the north and south fronts to-wards the centre are pavilions about 35 feet square, each having four lofty minarets at the angles terminating in domed roofs. If desired, the central portion can be retained as a permanent palace of recreation capable of accommodating 10,000 people.

From the Industrial hall a covered avenue 900 feet long by 75 feet wide a continuation of the main avenue leads to a bridge over a public thoroughfare and thus a continuous covered connection is obtained. The Machinary hall is 500 feet long 840 feet wide and covers an area of five acres. It is intersected by galleries 15 feet wide from which the machinary in motion on the floor may be viewed. Its construction is similar to that of the Industrial hall.

In addition to the United Kingdom the following countries have officially supported the exhibition: Russia, France, Austria, Japan, Morocco, Mexico, Persia, Denmark, India, Western Australia, Canada, Queensland, British South Africa, and South Australia. The United States will not be officially represent but some of their manufacturers have taken considerable space in the machinery section.

Russia is to have four special buildings. In one there will be a dining room in which dinners will be served in the Russian style, with wines, savories and other food products of the Empire which the Government of the Czar is anxious to see introduced into other countries.

Canada is to have a special building, covering about 12,000 square feet, wherein to exhibit minerals, manufactures, agricultural products and fruits.

In the building to be occupied by the Japanese will be found a display of arts and manufactures, with native artisans at work illustrating some of the industries peculiar to that country. It will be surrounded by a Japanese garrison, in itself no small attraction.

Over 400 exhibitors are expected from France, whose section is being organized by a committee nominated by the French government. Rhodesia's quota will include gold, industrial exhibits. Western Australia's display will include gold in various forms to the value of between £80,000 and £100,000.
