LETTER OF CONDOLENCE

Dear Mr. Murray, North Wiltshire, Dear Mr. Murray:—Divine Providence in His Infinite Wisdom having called your brother to His eternal rest, we your co-workers in the management of the Wiltshire Dairy Co. desire to condole with you in this sad bereavement. In our various dealings with the late John Murray we always found him a man of the strictest integrity. As a neighbor he was kind, thoughtful and obliging, as a citizen ever ready to advance the interests and welfare of the community. While we his friends and neighbours will miss his genial greeting it is in his home his presence will be most sorely missed. It is not easy to understand the mysterious working of an All-wise and loving Father, but it is ours to believe that in His own good time He will make it plain.

To all the bereaved and sorrowing ones we tender our sincerest sympathy. Signed on behalf of the Directors, Edwin Edwards, Pres. of Wiltshire Dairy Co. Roland Easter, Secy. (Patriot please copy).

Men Marooned

By George Marsh

THE STORY

In the candor of his explanation of the presence of the Indian girl at Elkwan, he had unconsciously revealed to the curious woman who studied him, intimate glimpses of heart. The emblem of the Distinguished Service Order which he wore in the photograph in his bedroom vouched for his caliber as a soldier. But why, she mused, did the brother of the rich Charles Guthrie linger in the wilderness of the west coast when a girl of such loveliness as her three photographs suggested waited for his return? For the nature of their relations was established beyond doubt by the written sentiment on the photographs. Yet, his health returned, he seemed to be deliberately staying on in the north. What was behind it all, wondered Joan Quarrier; not pity for this poor child, who, in the manner of her kind, had given him worship for the only kindness life had vouchsafed her. That, clearly, would have anchored Guthrie at Elkwan while Ninda lived, but in face of the fact that the girl was desperately ill—could not live into the autumn, he had prepared to winter on the coast. Why?

So, together, they kept their watch, where, through the halting hours, the spirit of the waif of the forests hovered, awaiting release. Once, after a paroxysm of coughing, the veil of delirium lifted and there was a moment of consciousness. He leaned to her and the fear which looked from the grouping eyes faded as she recognized the scarred cheek. The writhing of a smile touched the drawn mouth. As the stars paled above the purple tundra of Akimiski, again she recognized the face of Guthrie. Her lips moved. His straining ears caught a faint "Bo-jo," the Ojibwa farewell. Then a crimsoned froth welled from the tortured lungs.

When she returned with Old Anne crooning her grief, she touched him on the shoulder. "You must go now. We will care for her."

For a space he stood beside the cot, then said:

"Good-by, Ninda. As you wished it, you will stay—here, with your friends." He turned cryptically to the nurse. "She was a soldier; she did not flinch from wounds," and went out, followed by the puzzled eyes of the other.

Then, outside, in the cool dusk of the clearing rose a wail, mournful, unearthly, followed by another and another.

Joan Quarrier's face appeared in the doorway of the living room.

"It's too ghastly," she said with a shiver. "How do they know?"

"They always know—always wait for the dead." And he went out to quiet the dogs.

At the gate of the stockade stood the alreale, joining the huskies in their threnody under the fading stars. At Guthrie's command, the dog stopped and trotting up, with a muffled whine thrust his moist nose into his master's hand.

"Ninda's gone, shot."

Daylight found man and dog on the high river shore. At times the man spoke to the alreale, who sensing his master's mood, repeatedly returned from short excursions to nuzzle Guthrie's hand. Again and again, before the light came, the whimpering huskies had taken up their wailing, to be checked by the man on guard, whose thoughts traversed the swift weeks of the summer.

Out of the silent places, this doomed child of the valiant heart had come, and now—into the silence had gone. What must have been her despair, he thought, to have left her people and sought sanctuary among strangers. But it had been friends she had found.

But what a miracle to have had that schooner driven on Akimiski with the girl who had shared the watch with him! What a solace and rock she had been—those fine, straight-gazing dark eyes, and capable hands. It was because she had understood—had resented his thinking it necessary to explain the situation at Elkwan that he had been able to talk so freely.

ly of Ninda. She had proved her mettle—she, too, was a soldier. He pictured Ethel, with her horror of the ugly, thrown into the situation which Joan Quarrier had calmly met with delicacy and skill.

That afternoon Etienne and Guthrie erected a spruce cross over the fresh grave in the little post cemetery and on the white wood of the arm, Guthrie burned with a hot iron the inscription: "In Memory of Ninda—A Soldier," which for years was to be the cause of much shaking of puzzled heads among the whites and the Crees who saw it.

At dawn the following morning, Guthrie's York boat with a Peterboro canoe in tow, slowly picked it way through the river mist of the Elkwan delta. In the stern, steering with a sweep hewn from a spruce sapling, stood the wiry Etienne, who knew the channels of the river mouths and the depths of the shoal coast from the Raft to Albany. To give the craft steerage way on the first of the ebb, the sailors of the shipwrecked schooner manned four long oars. In the bow, the geologist, still smarting from his humiliation, talked in low tones to his sailing master. Beside the steersman stood Guthrie, holding a compass, for the shores were invisible. Near him, with forefoot on the rail the alreale peered into the white wall of mist, his black nostrils dilating as he caught, at intervals, on the moist air, scents vague, illusive, enticing.

"You are losing valuable time from your goose hunt by taking us to Albany, in your boat," suggested Joan Quarrier to Guthrie, who had found a seat beside her.

Manitoba Says 'No' To Maritime Claim Of Rights

OTTAWA, Feb. 13.—The claims of any other Canadian Province to proprietary interests or rights in Manitoba, were emphatically challenged by R. W. Craig, K. C., of Winnipeg, counsel for Manitoba, before the Natural Resources Commission, this afternoon.

"The concession to Manitoba of the status in respect of its natural resources, always enjoyed by all the Provinces of Canada, except the Prairie Provinces has been denied in some quarters," Mr. Craig said, "upon the contention that Rupert's Land and the Northwest Territories were 'purchased' from the Hudson's Bay Co., and thus became the property of Canada, to be administered for the purposes of the Dominion.

The Maritime Provinces had advanced such a claim before the Duncan Royal Commission. Mr. Craig continued, This was based partly on the grounds of proprietary right and partly on grounds of equitable consideration. Manitoba, however, was bound to deny such rights, he said.

Were such claims as those advanced by the Maritimes recognized, Manitoba would have a proprietary right in Alberta, Saskatchewan and the Northern parts of Ontario and Quebec, added to the latter provinces in 1898 and 1912, counsel maintained.

Kidd's Treasure Again Reported

QUINCY, Mass., Feb. 9.—A remark uttered by an attorney in the course of an arraignment in local court is expected to start a new search for the buried treasure of the famous Captain Kidd. The lawyer, Clarence Rowley, apparently inadvertently, asked a witness of he had ever dug on Half Moon Island, Boston Harbor. Other questions revealed that the first one had been prompted by a rumor that Kidd's elusive treasure had been hidden on the island. Many other islands up and down the coast have been mentioned in connection with Kidd's great treasure, which has never been discovered. Kidd was arrested in Boston and taken to London, where he was found guilty of piracy and of murdering a sailor on the high seas. Captain Kidd had been commissioned to hunt for pirates by Lord Bellmont, the then royal governor of New York, but the story goes that he later turned pirate himself and amassed great wealth.

We offer congratulations to our grand old lady Mrs. Sarah Jones who celebrates her 91 birthday Thursday, the 14th. We wish her many more.

Mr. and Mrs. Boswell Jenkins were visitors here this week.

The weekly prayer meeting of the Alexandra Baptist Church was held at the home of Mr. Cyril Jones on Friday, despite the inclement state of the weather a faithful few gathered to worship God. An atmosphere of temperance reigned, the speaker, Mr. Lindsay dwelling for some time on "The Great Command," which all know is the brain clearly showing the affect yes injurious effect of alcohol on this most important part of the human system. That this speaker is a live wire for temperance or as he says himself a temperance crank is clearly seen. What we need is more men like Mr. Lindsay. Let us work, pray and cooperate together and clean up our own little village and stop the rumors that are continually floating around. The February meeting of the W. M. S. of the United Church was held on Thursday the 7th at the home of Mrs. Samuel Lane, Mt. Mellick. Mrs. Beatrice Judson presided. The new study book, Drums in Africa, was introduced by Mrs. Littlejohn. While this is an old yet new missionary field all feel it will be very interesting, especially to those who have read the life of Livingston. The business period showed a very healthy financial state this being double of the previous year which is encouraging. Readings were given by Mrs. Mrs. J. R. Brown. At the close of the Arthur Jenkins, Marble Ennon and meeting an abundant and tasty lunch was served by Miss Joyce Lane and willing helpers.

The Romance that ended so soon

Her version: What a disappointment Bob had been! Once he was always bright and cheery—well-groomed. Then something happened. Bob became careless. Seemed to lose his ambition. Even his appearance was affected. Why, she was actually ashamed of him now!

His version: What had come over Mary? Two years ago he had been so much in love with her. But these days she was always so cross. Her old-time youth and charm had fled. True, he'd slipped somewhat, himself. But, Mary...

What a tragedy that constipation can wreck so much happiness! It begins with such little things—headaches, listlessness. But it eventually saps the strongest body, and may lead to serious disease. And all the while it could be so easily prevented—so surely relieved. Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is guaranteed to relieve constipation—to safely prevent it.

ALL-BRAN is effective and natural Bulk or roughage relieves constipation in a natural way. ALL-BRAN furnishes bulk in generous quantity because it is 100% bran. It carries moisture through the intestines, gently sweeping out poisons.
