The Londonderry Cup, says an exchange, has a history interesting to Canadians. It was originally presented by the Marquis of Londonderry for competition between teams representing Great Britain and Canada. The cup was won at Shuebury near, England by the Canadian team under command of Lieut. Col. J. R. Armstrong, of St. John, in 1886. The next competition was at the same place in 1896, when the Canadians in command of Lt. Col. Cole, of Montreal, were again successful. Last year the English team were the visitors and the competition took place at Potawawa with the result that the cup still remains in Canada. The team this year was in command of a Maritime man, Major Leigh, of P. E. Island.
