eral's death and expressing the sympathy of the government and people of Canada.

Mr. Mackenzie King also sent a telegram of condolence to Lady Tweedsmuir and talked by telephone to Sir Shulham Redfern, private secretary to the late governor-general.

The Prime Minister then prepared a tribute for a broadcast over the national network of the C. B. C. and arranged for the ceremony of swearing in the Chief Justice as administrator of the government, according to statute. The swearing in was at the home of Sir Lyman at 11.15 p. m. A. S. T.

When it was learned this morning that Lord Tweedsmuir had suffered a relapse the Prime Minister's private railway car was prepared for departure with the first outgoing train in the evening news came of the Governor-General's death.

It was the Prime Minister's intention to go at once to Montreal to represent the government and the people of Canada among the mourning and to personally express the sympathy of Canadians to Lady Tweedsmuir.

When the news came tonight, however, Mr. Mackenzie King found that he could not catch the last train for Montreal which left at eight o'clock, making their home. Mr. Matthews has a lucrative position in that city.

Leading Patron

A leading patron of arts and letters in the Dominion, Lord Tweedsmuir gave his full support to the Dominion Drama Festival, inaugurated by his predecessor, Lord Beesborough.

He carried on the tradition of other Governors-General in holding the annual jubilee curling trophy matches at Rideau Hall and displayed considerable interest in sports although he never actively participated in sport.

His outdoor diversion was hiking and he spent long hours walking through the Gatineau Hills, north of Ottawa.

Son of Rev. John Masterton Buchanan, minister of the Free Church of Broughton Green in Perth, the John Buchanan was reared in the border country of Scotland and his whole career was marked with strong Scottish determination and industry.

He attended Glasgow and Oxford Universities, largely by the aid of bursaries, and even in those days gained a reputation as a newspaper and historical writer. He was called to the English bar but in 1901 went to South Africa as secretary to Lord Milner. Later he joined the publishing firm of Thomas Nelson and Son, London.

From that time he devoted most of his energies to the publishing and newspaper business and wrote numerous novels, historical works and biographies. He was a director of Reuters News Agency and as-

Paying Hobby For Operator

(Canadian Press)

TORONTO, Feb. 11.—Back in 1906 someone gave young Eddie Dyer a cheap stringless violin, a battered instrument which started him off to fame as a fiddle maker.

Today Dyer, a 43-year-old railway telegraphist who spends his spare hours in his little workshop, has been making violins for experts and renowned violinists to be the finest new-made violins they have played and equal to some of the Old Masters.

Dyer has been making violins for 25 years but only in the last 10 has he discovered how to fashion them with rich tonal qualities approaching those of the 18th century masters. He uses 25 instruments—each one takes about a year to make—and the last one he sold brought $375.

"The secret," says Dyer, "lies in obtaining the best maple wood, constructing the violin on the lines followed by Stradivarius and finally outlining a finish that will preserve the tone through the years."

"I believe that my violins will be giving pleasure to musicians long after an am dead; and that will be a part of me remaining behind in the world."

That first instrument aroused Dyer's ambition to buy new strings for the detritus, like ordinary cords of varying sizes, strung them on the violin and started to play a few old tunes by ear. When a woodworker broke the fiddle, Dyer studied the sides to find out what made the violin work.

Then he began to take violins seriously. He studied books describing theholm-making of Antonio Stradivarius and his teacher, Nicholas Amati, and some of the Guernierus family. At 19 he completed his first violin, a crude affair but which he will like.

Two of the latest instruments he has made Dyer loaned to the Hart House String Quartet to be tested in Massey Hall here against an old United States violin worth a couple of dollars. Critics agreed that Dyer's violins equalled the Old Masters.

Last March, Mischa Elman, world-famous violinist, was persuaded to try out Dyer's No. 19 violin. He played for two hours and later said it was the first time he had enjoyed playing an instrument other than his own, a $3500 Stradivarius.

Sigmund Steinberg, one of Toronto's leading violinists, uses Dyer's No. 18 violin and two bows made by him.

When he isn't making or repairing violins, Dyer works as a terminal operator in Toronto's Union Station.

Signed War Proclamation

The Governor-General remained in Ottawa during the August-September crises leading to the outbreak of war. On Sept. 10 he signed the proclamation which declared Canada a state of war with Germany by the most significant document he signed as Governor-General.

Last fall Lord Tweedsmuir went to New York for a medical check-up and returned to Ottawa apparently in poor health. His health during his tenure was comparatively good. He had no serious illness until he died last Tuesday.

His health since the war started included review of a Royal Canadian Air Force unit at Ottawa, inspection of the air stations at Ontario and Camp Borden, tour of the east coast, and his participation in the formal installation of Dr. Cyril James as principal of McGill University and the opening of the Dominion Drama Festival.

His Excellency also received the credentials of James H. R. Cromwell, new United States minister to Canada, at a special ceremony at Government House.

OTTAWA, Feb. 11.—(CP)—In the coming general election, the New Democracy Movement will confine its candidacy to those constituencies where the electorate is ready for it. Hon. W. Horridge, leader of the movement, said in a statement here tonight.

There will be no "universal contestation" seats by New Democracy but in constituencies where the movement is not running candidates, it will fight "the Liberal machine in the best calculated to defeat it."

Mr. Horridge repeated his advocacy of national service and predicted that at the end of the year national service would be the law of Canada.

He probably will leave this week for Ontario where he is a candidate in Kindersley, Sask. His statement follows: "The leaders of the three old parties, Liberals, Conservatives and C. P. have declared against national service. Events will force them to eat their words. I predict that before the year is out, national service will be the law of the land. The security of Canada and the Empire demands national service."

New Democracy is a movement pledged to achieve national security in peace time, its method is reform of the economic system. In war time, its method is national service. National service is the only war time way in which to carry out the peace time policy of reform to which New Democracy stands pledged.

Party Not To Contest All Seats

OTTAWA, Feb. 11.—(CP)—De-ence Minister Rogers announced tonight that the government has taken action which will have the effect of increasing allowances previously paid wives of naval personnel and broadening the classes of persons dependent on men serving in the navy who may claim allowances.

Amendments to the regulations are effective from Oct. 1, 1939 and deal with the personnel and dependents of those serving in the Royal Canadian Navy, the Royal Canadian Naval Reserve, and the Royal Canadian Naval Volunteer Reserve.

It has been decided to make no change in the system of bookkeeping despite the existing interference in the systems followed in the navy to those of other branches of the forces, the minister said.

Equivalent treatment of allowances for wives and other dependents of those serving in the naval forces, as compared with dependents of those serving in the military and air services, has been achieved by adjusting existing regulations without changing the bookkeeping methods.

Marriage allowances have been paid for wives of non-commissioned personnel serving in the navy during the past 20 years. These are being continued at varying rates, depending upon the number of children in the family, and the rate has been adjusted upwards in order to provide treatment equitable to that of other branches of the forces.

Similar privileges have been granted by the amendments for commissioned personnel. Hereafter, allowances were not paid for dependents of commissioned ranks.

More Political Big Guns To Go Into Action

OTTAWA, Feb. 11.—(CP)—With less than six weeks remaining before the general election, political leaders will swing more of their big guns into action this week and national networks here are expected from both Prime Minister Mackenzie King and Conservative leader William.

Dr. Mackenzie will broadcast from Fort William, Ont., Monday after receiving the Conservative nomination for that riding. It has not been definitely announced but is expected that Mr. Mackenzie King will deliver his second half-hour broadcast later in the week.

The Prime Minister opened his radio campaign late Wednesday night over a national network of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation and on Thursday night in Brockville, Ont. Dr. Mackenzie started a series of platform speeches which will take him from coast to coast.

No surprise issues or sensational charges have entered the campaign as yet. Mr. Mackenzie King rested on the record of his administration in his opening speech and offered the record of his party as an alternative to an opposition which he said was not united in policies or principles.

No Apology

The Prime Minister said a detailed record of the government's stewardship would be offered for discussion and explanation as the campaign proceeds. He made no apology for the government's record, declaring that no good purpose would be served in continuing a political campaign in the House, followed immediately by similar argument on the hustings in a general election.

Dr. Mackenzie charged the Government with a request that Britain had made nearly two years ago for permission to establish air training schools in Canada.

This was related to in a speech by Transport Minister Howie said, no definite plan had been submitted until that which was discussed last fall and which resulted in conclusion of the British Commonwealth air training agreement which Canada will train 1000 airmen for the United Kingdom, Australia, New Zealand and this Dominion.

Preliminary inquiries were made two years ago, Mr. Howie said, and the Canadian Government had replied it would be glad to establish schools for training United Kingdom airmen but it would have to be established on land owned and controlled by Canada.

Only two platform engagements have been announced by the Prime Minister who at the start of the campaign, said the pressure of his responsibilities would not permit him to make the customary extended tour.

He will speak in Winnipeg, Feb. 27 and in Prince Albert, his own constituency, Feb. 29. It is expected, however, that this itinerary will be extended.

Finance Minister Ralston enters the campaign this week with a visit to his constituency in Prince Edward Island when his convention will be held in Summerside on Feb. 16. Revenue Minister Hiley is Nova Scotia and will hold his nominating convention at Middleton on Feb. 23.

Agriculture Minister Gardiner will be candidate in Melville, Sask. The first treatment of the stock market by Hon. W. R. Matherwell who is now retiring. Mr. Gardiner has been in Saskatchewan for several days, has addressed several meetings and will broadcast 15 minutes on the national network from Regina tomorrow afternoon.
