FORTUNE'S FOOL

BY RAFAEL SABATINI

Having made it, he closed the door swiftly, and he had quietly turned the key in the lock, withdrawn and pocketed it before his grace recovered from his surprise at the eccentricity of his behavior.

Holles, his shoulders to the door, showed a face that was now grim and set. He cast from him again the hat and cloak which he had been holding.

"It is, your grace, that I desire a word in private with you, safe from the inconvenient intrusion of your lackeys."

The Duke drew himself up, very stiff and stern, not a little intrigued as you conceive by all this; but quite master of himself.

"Proceed, sir," he said coldly. "Let us have the explanation of this insolence, that so we may make an end of it."

"That is soon afforded." Holles, too, spoke quietly. "This lady, your grace, is a friend of mine, an . . . an old friend. I did not know it until . . . until I had conveyed her hither. Upon discovering it, I would have escorted her hence again, and I was about to do so when your grace arrived. I have now ask you to pledge me your word of honor that you will do nothing to prevent our peaceful departure—that you will offer no hindrance either in your own person or in that of your servants."

For a long moment Buckingham stood considering him without moving from the spot where he stood, midway between Holles and the girl, his shoulder to the latter. Beyond a heightening of the color about his eyes and cheekbones, he gave no sign of emotion. He even smiled, though not quite pleasantly.

"But how simple," he said with a little laugh. Then his voice hardened. "And should I refuse to pledge my word, what does Colonel Holles propose?"

"It will be very bad for your grace," said Holles.

The Duke's whole manner changed. He plucked off his mask of arrogant languor.

"By God!" he ejaculated, and his voice was rasping as a file. "That is enough of this insolence, my man. You'll unlock that door at once, and go your ways, or I'll call my men to beat you to a jelly.

"It was lest your grace should be tempted to such ungentle measures that I took the precaution to lock the door." Holles was smooth as velvet.

Buckingham laughed, and, even as he laughed he whipped the light rapier from its scabbard, and flung forward in a lunge across the distance which he had measured with his very practiced swordsman's eye.

EVEN AS THE DUKE DREW, HOLLES FELL ON GUARD.

t was an action swift as lighting and of a deadly precision, shrewdly calculated to take the other by surprise and transfix him before he could make a move to guard himself. But swift as it was, and practiced as was the Duke's skill, he was opposed to one as swift and practiced, one who had too often kept his life with his hands not to be schooled in every trick of rough-and-tumble. Even as the duke drew and lunged in one movement, so, in one movement, too, Holles drew and fell on guard to deflect that treacherous lightning stroke.

Nan's sudden scream of fear and the clash of the two blades rang out at the same moment. The Colonel's parry followed on into the enveloping movements of a riposte that whirled his point straight at the Duke's face on the low level to which this had been brought by the lunge. To avoid it, Buckingham was forced to make a recovery a retreat as precipitate as the advance had been swift. Erect once more, his grace fell back, his breathing quickened a little, and for a moment the two men stood in silence, their points lowered, measuring sach other with their eyes. Then Holles spoke.

"Your grace, this is a game in which the dice are heavily cogged against you," he said gravely. "Better take the course I first proposed."

Buckingham uttered a sneering laugh. He had entirely mistaken the other's meaning.

"Why, you roaring captain, you pitiful Bobadil, do you think to affright me with swords and antics? It is against yourself the dice are loaded. Unlock that door, and get you hence or I'll carve you into ribbons."

"Oho! And who's the roaring captain now? Who the Bobadil? Who the very butcher of a silk button?" cried Holles, stung to anger. He would have added more, perhaps, but the Duke stemmed him.

"Enough talk!" he snapped. "The key, you rogue, or I'll skewer you where you stand."

Have Kidneys Examined by Your Doctor

Take Salts to Wash Kidneys if Back Pains you or Bladder Bothers

Flush your kidneys by drinking a quart of water each day, also take salts occasionally, says a noted authority, who tells us that too much rich food forms acids which almost paralyze the gidneys in their efforts to expel it from the blood. They become sluggish and weaken; then you may suffer with a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or sick headache, dizziness, your stomach sours, tongue is coated, and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine gets cloudy, full of sediment, the channels often get sore and irritated, obliging you to seek relief two or three times during the night.

To help neutralize these irritating acids, to help cleanse the kidneys and flush off the body's urinous waste, get four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy here; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days, and your kidneys may then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice combined with lithia, and has been used for years to help flush and stimulate sluggish kidneys; also to neutralize the acids in the system so they no longer irritate, thus often relieving bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure and makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink. By all means have your physician examine your kidneys at least twice a year.

BEECHAM'S PILLS for Sick Headaches

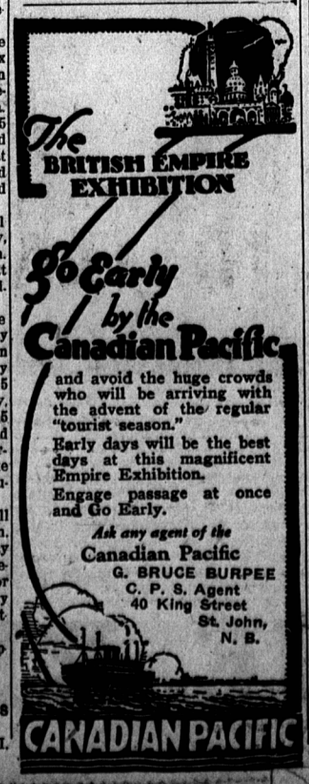
OVER TWO BILLIONS SPENT ANNUALLY ON PREVENTABLE DISEASES

It is estimated that over $2,000,000,000 is spent on this Continent needlessly every year on hospitals, nurses, doctors' bills and patent medicines through illness which could easily have been prevented.

Realizing the immensity of these figures and the possibilities for a betterment of physical conditions, strenuous measures are being taken throughout the country by various states and municipal governments for the promotion of health.

For instance, in some cities a Health Promotion Week is observed and contests are being conducted among teachers of public schools for the best results obtained from the presentation of health teaching throughout the year.

Feeling it a criminal neglect not to do so, the life insurance companies, through the discoveries made by their investigations, are accomplishing much by well organized plans to combat of prevent diseases of all kinds. In this way they are laying the foundation for a healthier nation and making possible the purchasing of an adequate life insurance policy, which in many thousand cases might be unobtainable through ill health.



Sand Desert in Alaska Revealed by Summer Sun

(United Press.)

CANTWELL, Alaska, April 26.—Shifting sands, having all the characteristics of the great American desert and providing a menace to inexperienced travelers, have been discovered in interior Alaska, according t oprospectors arriving from Valdez Creek placer diggings.

This desert of Alaska is located between Valdez Creek and Myers' road-house, on the Richardson highway. L. S. Wickersham, a placer miner of the Valdez Creek region, has described the barren area. He said access was gained in years past by "mushing" 100 miles or more over the snow. As these trips were made in winter, the heavy snow concealed the nature of the country. Last summer, however, prospectore went further afield in their excursions from Valdez Creek, and they encountered conditions that made them apprehensive and wary. Where the old trail had appeared in winter as leading plainly across a level plateau, they found immense sand dunes and the entire landscape changed.

In summer the winds start the sands to moving in the same manner as on the American desert. Changing of landmarks make it difficult to travel.

The sand is of a pure vitreous material, indicating an origin in silicious rock. For that reason prospectors maintain that the region was the last resting place of glaciers containing vast stores of ice.

TRAINS OF FINEST EQUIPMENT AFFORD THE FINEST OF TRAVEL COMFORT

From Charlottetown to Montreal —from Montreal to Ottawa, Toronto, Detroit and Chicago, or to all points in Western Canada to the Pacific, the Canadian National Railways furnish the finest of service.

Through trains, such as the Ocean Limited and Maritime Express between Halifax and Montreal afford the traveller every travel comfort, while from Montreal there is close connection with the famous "Continental Limited," the "International Limited" and the fast trains between Montreal and Toronto, and Montreal and Ottawa.

All points in Canada, therefore, are reached by lines of the Canadian National, and there is no better standard of travel service anywhere. The most modern of sleepers, compartment cars, library cars, colonist cars, tourist sleepers, and standard dining cars, make up a train equipment that is unexcelled in this or any other country.

Travel facts will be furnished all enquirers, at the ticket offices of the Canadian National Railways.

Illustrated literature will be given enquirers, and all reservations made and fares quoted.

Travellers should see that their through tickets read "Via Canadian National."

THE COACH'S JOB

Something of the taskmaster, the general and the diplomat, and a lot of the doctor must be hidden away in the man who would be the coach of a successful football or track team.

Emergencies of all kinds are his daily routine. A thorough knowledge of first aid is as essential as a knowledge of the game played by his men.

Bumps, bruises, strained ligaments and muscles are every day happenings, but the coach never becomes contemptuous of them. He knows that if neglected, they may result in anything.

Trainers everywhere keep Absorbine Jr. in their lockers. They use it not only for sprains, cuts and bruises, but for the skin and blood protection of its disinfecting properties. In one convenient container it combines the functions of a number of preparations.

It is the first of all the First Aid requisites in use in all of the leading athletic clubs.

And there are just as many everyday uses for Absorbine Jr. in the homes of Canada as there are in the training camps. Always keep it in the home where you can "jump to it" in case of emergency.
