TRUE BILL—

Stewart K.C., appeared for the respondent and L.P. O'Donnell for the appellant.

Address to Grand Jury

In his address to the Grand Jury the Chief Justice said it was unfortunate that still another session of the Supreme Court was being held under the shadow of war. Under such circumstances, court sittings entailed hardships for jurymen and especially for petit jurymen. But it was essential, the Chief Justice stated, that the administration of justice should continue even under conditions of war.

His Lordship informed the Grand Jury there were only two indictments for them to consider and that while there were the unusual number of 13 appeals from a Magistrate's decisions, practically all the cases were not of a serious nature. Unfortunately, one case was of a very serious nature since there was an indictment charging Florence Elizabeth McNeill with murder.

Murder involves "malice aforethought" while manslaughter is the "culpable killing of a human being without malice." Taking human life by gross negligence such as in the reckless driving of a car or in a reckless use of firearms, would be manslaughter, His Lordship stated.

"If one intends to cause the death of a person killed, that is murder," the Chief Justice said. "If the offender merely means to cause bodily harm which he knows is likely to cause death, or if he is reckless as to whether or not the victim dies, that too is murder," the Chief Justice added.

In the case of Florence Elizabeth McNeill, the Chief Justice said, he did not think they could adduce from the evidence before them that the accused intended to kill William (Ryan) McNeill. But such conclusion on their part was not necessary for them to bring in a true bill of murder against the accused. It was not their duty to try the case but merely to decide whether or not in their opinion this was a proper case to be tried by a petit jury. If they thought that, from the evidence submitted by the Crown, a petit jury could conclude that Florence Elizabeth McNeill intended to cause bodily harm, which she must have known her unlawful act would cause, and that she was "reckless whether or not she caused death," they were justified in bringing in a true bill. "Even if she did not intend to cause any injury, there is evidence to show she did an unlawful act for an unlawful purpose. If you think there is evidence from which a petit jury may draw an inference of guilt, you can bring in a true bill," the Chief Justice said.

However, culpable homicide may be changed from murder to manslaughter, His Lordship said, because of provocation. Any wrongful act or insult of such a nature as to cause a person to lose his self control may be considered as provocation. If the offender acts suddenly without allowing his passion to cool and kills in the heat of passion, he may be tried for manslaughter, His Lordship stated.

So far as the charge against Jasiah Smith was concerned, His Lordship stated he thought the evidence was clear that the accused did commit an assault which occasioned bodily harm. Once again, he reminded the jury they were only responsible to themselves for the nature of their findings. They could bring in either a true bill against Smith or no bill.

Civil Docket

The first case on the civil docket is that of Leo Frank, respondent, vs. the King, appellant, which was proceeding when the Court adjourned at 5 o'clock to meet this morning at 11 a.m. The case is under the Income Tax Act and is an appeal from a judgment by Stipendiary Magistrate K. M. Martin against the respondent in the amount of $65. The Crown is appealing on the ground that the penalty is too light. The case involves the entering by the respondent in his expense account for 1942 disputed items of $655.13 for car repairs. It is being heard before the Chief Justice without a jury. J. Wellington Dixon, of the Income Tax Division, was the only witness so far heard.

Other cases docketed are:

King, respondent, vs. Louis Hines, appellant (Highway Traffic Act).

King, appellant, vs. Leo Frank, respondent (Income Tax Act).

ion was seen in the boosting of State Department estimates to a total of $70,000,000—almost $30,000,000 more than for the current year.

The President urged Congress to repeal the Johnston Act which prevents loans to foreign nations, and to approve the Bretton Woods Monetary Agreement which would set up an international bank for reconstruction and development to aid impoverished nations to get back on their economic feet.

It was clear from the President's message that even if the war roars along on all fronts throughout the fiscal year, war costs—and thus total costs—will be less than the all-time peaks of the present year.

These peaks are: total government spending of $100,000,000,000; war spending of $89,000,000,000.

The reason for an inevitable decline is that the nature of the war program has changed. The President said the army and navy now have about all of their "initial equipment," and the $28,000,000,000 war construction program had faded to a mere $2,000,000,000 a year.

Budget director Harold D. Smith told reporters that the still-growing merchant fleet is "largely paid for."

Mr. Roosevelt said the decline is sure to reduce Government tax collections. He proposed no changes in tax laws now, but even under present laws when the Government spends less, corporations and individuals receive less. And when they receive less, they pay less taxes.

ing the enemy's only lateral highway out of the potential trap were pushing through snowdrifts four and five feet high south of the captured villages of Provendoux and Ottre. Their advance, if unchecked by German reinforcements, would cut the vital road at a point about five miles northeast of Houffalize, the Germans principal base inside the salient.

An American staff officer warned against describing the enemy's situation as "hopeless," pointing out that Von Rundstedt already had moved some of his tanks and infantry out of the western half of the salient and that he still would have usable minor roads to the east.

Week Of Prayer Services Held At Baptist Church

A large congregation thronged the Baptist Church last night in the second service of the Week of Prayer. The minister, Rev. I. Judson Levy conducted the worship, assisted by the Rev. J. T. Ibbott who read the lesson and the Rev. G. C. Webster who led in prayer.

The sermon was preached by Dr. M. E. Genge who based his remarks on our Lord's healing of the demoniac boy.

The service was fully choral, under the direction of Mrs. G. Elliott Full.

Major William Mercer, Rev. T. E. McLennan and Rev. T. H. B Somers also occupied seats in the sanctuary.

This evening the service will be held in Trinity United Church when the new rector of St. Paul's Rev. J. T. Ibbott, will be the preacher.

Trinity Men's Association

Trinity Men's Association held their regular monthly meeting in the Social Hall on Monday evening. Mr. S.C. Wright, vice-president, occupied the chair in the absence of the president, J.P. Crockett.

Solos were appreciatively rendered by Mr. A.R. Gillis and Mr. James Calder and a hearty singsong led by the latter was greatly enjoyed by all. Professor Roy Kendall was at the piano.

An invitation from the Layman's Association of St. Paul's parish hall was received and accepted.

Following the appointment of a membership committee consisting of W.W. Down, J.A. Fraser, and J. Gordon McDonald, Mr. W.W. Lord spoke briefly on the work of Trinity Sunday School.

Rev. T.E. McLennan, pastor of Trinity United church, in wishing the members of the Association happiness during the coming year reminded them that happiness is a relative measure — related to a sense of duty and responsibility, —and that happiness is a by-product of a certain way of life. He appealed to his hearers to accept the responsibilities of democracy, to take an interest in solving economic and political issues and to have convictions about eternal things. The happiest kind of a New Year he said, would be enjoyed if each one would accept responsibility as a Christian.

The meeting closed by the singing of the National Anthem.

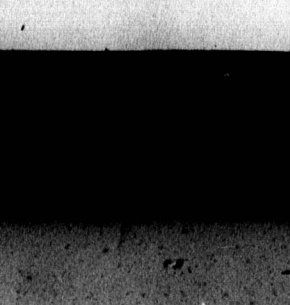
Nazis Dig In On Adriatic End Of Italian Front

ROME, Jan. 9 — (AP) —German troops who have been retreating for four days at the extreme eastern end of the Italian Front have dug in for a stand along the southern bank of the Reno River about six miles northeast of fallen Sant' Alberto, the Allied Command announced today.

The new German position is in the region of Passo Di Primero along the southeastern shore of the Commocchio Lagoon, and at the southern end of a spit of land separating the lagoon from the Adriatic. The Germans apparently will attempt to keep open this "back door" leading northward.

This enemy digging in marked the first time in four days that Marshal Kesselring's forces, which fled both east and west after losing Sant' Alberto two days ago, had organized sufficiently to make a stand. In this stretch Canadian troops have chased the Nazis six miles along the lateral highway all the way from Sant' Alberto to the Borsetti Canal and then punched north nearly two miles to the River Reno.

Bitter winter weather and deep snowdrifts confined activity to patrols almost from coast to coast.



Four Peers Involved In Divorce Actions

LONDON, Jan. 9 — (CP) —Four uncontested divorce suits involving four peers and as many peeresses will be heard in London's bomb-battered law courts during the term beginning Jan. 11.

In the undefended list is a petition by Countess Beatty, the former Mrs. Dorothy Power Sands of Virginia, against Earl Beatty, son of the First Great War Admiral and himself a navy commander and holder of the Distinguished Service Cross for gallantry and skill in the 1942 Dieppe raid.

Likewise undefended is a suit by the Countess of Listowel, the former Miss Judith De Marffy-Mantuano, against Lord Listowel, the fifth holder of the title and former whip of the Labor Party in the House of Lords. Lord Listowel now is parliamentary under-secretary of state for the India Office. They were married in Budapest in 1933.

The former Tilly Losch, a one-time Viennese dancer, now Countess of Carnarvon, has decided to defend the divorce suit brought against her by the Earl of Carnarvon, twice married and sixth holder of the title.

Canada's Merchant Marine Increased At Least Six-Fold

OTTAWA, Jan. 9 — CP) — Canada, which entered the war with 40 ocean-going merchant vessels, will have six or seven times that number at the end of the war and will be high in the ranks of world maritime nations, Trade Minister MacKinnon said tonight in a review of the wartime growth of Canada's Merchant Marine.

Mr. MacKinnon said that in September, 1939 the Merchant Marine, taking vessels of 500 gross tons and over and using round figures throughout, consisted of "something under" 400 vessels totalling about 1,100,000 gross tons.

Of these, some 260 of 700,000 gross tons were vessels operating principally on the Great Lakes and the St. Lawrence while another 60, totalling 150,000 gross tons, were engaged in coastal trade. The number of vessels operating in deep-sea trades was around 40, with a gross tonnage of about 250,000 tons.

"Considering that Canada ranked fourth or fifth in world trade, the size of her pre-war ocean merchant fleet was very modest," he said. "Indeed, if the deep-sea figures of 250,000 gross tons were taken, Canada came almost in the lowest rank among the world's maritime nations."

But the picture had changed now as a result of Canada's shipbuilding program started practically from scratch after the outbreak of war.

"When the Canadian program is completed, as it will be within the next months except for a few vessels, it will have turned out roughly 400 ships totalling around 2,700,000 gross tons, or 3,700,000 deadweight tons," said Mr. MacKinnon.

About 20 of these were planned as tankers; about 40 as 4,700-ton dry cargo carriers; and about 340 as 10,000-ton dry cargo carriers, some of which, however have been converted into fleet auxiliary vessels of various types.

The tankers, including about 12 converted 10,000-tonners and a half-dozen of the coastal type, are all in Canadian service.

Three of the 4,700-tonners have been turned over under Canadian mutual aid to the United Kingdom and two to Australia. Some also have been made temporarily available to the British Ministry of War Transport under other arrangements.

23 Killed In Crash Of Clipper

MIAMI, FLA., Jan. 9 — (AP) — Pan American Airways reported today that 23 persons apparently were killed last night in the crash at Port of Spain, Trinidad, of a huge Africa-bound clipper.

W.O. Snyder, airlines manager here said reports from the scene "indicated that 23 of the 30 persons aboard were lost."

Seven of the 30 passengers and crewmen aboard the Miami-to-Leopoldville flying boat are known to be safe. No Canadians were aboard.

The 26-ton plane, known as the China clipper during its early service on the Airline's trans-Pacific routes, apparently crashed in the darkness while coming in to alight in a flare-marked area.

Odd Document On German Prisoners

WITH THE U.S. 7th ARMY, Jan. 9 — (AP) — Recent German prisoners have been found carrying copies of a mythical speech to be delivered by Hitler in 1950 in which he announces annexation of the United States as a German colony.

The prisoners refused to say where they obtained their mimeographed copies of the document, heavy with teutonic humor and irony, but presumably it could be the work of a disillusioned German veteran.

The speech thanks Prime Minister Churchill and Premier Stalin, described as Nazi converts, for their assistance in setting up a new world order, announces appointment of Dr. Alfred Roserberg, Minister of Civil Affairs for Eastern occupied territories, as "Pope Pius XXV," and of Goebbels as "Chief Rabbi of Palestine."

May Commandeer Hay Supplies To Meet Shortage

OTTAWA, Jan. 9 — (CP) —The Prices Board is prepared if necessary to commandeer hay supplies from available surpluses in view of reports of serious shortages in some areas of Ontario and Quebec and surpluses in others, Donald Gordon, Prices Board Chairman, said today.

The Board emphasized in a statement the "immediate need" to get more feed into the districts where it is most needed. Mr. Gordon said some applications had been received for hay export permits, but the Board considered the first obligation on domestic supply was to meet domestic requirements.

A board spokesman said that last fall hay prices in Central and Eastern Canada advanced to a point which put these prices out of line with the prices of beef cattle and dairy products. To protect the price ceiling and Canada's wartime food production policies, a ceiling price was placed on hay and the granting of permits to export hay to the United States was discontinued Oct. 20 last.

The basic price fixed by the Board is $18. per ton for baled hay, F.O.B. the railway shipping point in or nearest to the area of production. This is the maximum price to the country shipper whether he is a farmer or dealer who purchased the hay from a farmer.
