(The Eastern Guardian) Finds Pit-Prop Deals Shrouded In Mystery

Visitors arriving at the frontier with firearms for which no permit has been issued will have to leave them behind at the customs office there until the requisite permit has been obtained.

R.C.M.P. officials said they had received more than 1,000 applications from Americans wishing to bring firearms into the Dominion in the first month after the on-approval was passed on July 23.

Registration of a rifle or shotgun is a simple procedure for the law-abiding citizen. Owners simply apply to local police for a permit. The R.C.M.P. has issued about 1,000,000 forms, printed in both French and English, which must be filled out in duplicate by the applicant.

The application states the nationality of the holder, the type and description of weapons he wishes to register, and the purpose for which he has these weapons. One copy is retained by the owner and must be produced at the request of any officer of the R.C.M.P. who is authorized to inspect the certificate.

If the police officer is satisfied that possession of the weapon by the applicant is not contrary to the public interest, he will register the firearm. Registration of a firearm may be refused or cancelled, however, in which case the weapon must be delivered up within 10 days.

Under the regulation, no person is allowed to buy or sell firearms unless he holds a permit to do so. Permits in rifles and shotguns may obtain a blanket permit, good for one year, permitting them to buy weapons for resale, or a permit for a person who wishes to buy a gun would be to pick out the weapon he wants in the store, secure its serial number, and procure a permit to buy before actually making the purchase.

Thus a dealer in guns must register all the guns he has in stock, obtain a permit to sell them, and himself that the buyer has a permit to buy. The buyer must have a permit to purchase the weapon, and register it after he has bought it. Both dealer and buyer must keep a record of the whole transaction.

Dominion Life offers you the modern method of buying Life Insurance.

You figure what you can afford to Budget each month, in units of $10 and that $10 (or multiples of it) buys you so much Life Insurance. For example — a man of 30 decides to budget $10 a month for insurance, (he has, of course, many choices depending on his particular needs) but here in the next column you will see, as a basis, what $10 in the Dominion Security Plan will provide:—

$5,332 to his loved ones, if he dies, or $30 a month to them for almost 20 years; a pension for himself of over $26 a month for life, starting at 65. (This income is guaranteed for not less than ten years even though he dies before that period expires.) $20.00 a month would double these benefits—$30 triple them—and so on. Moreover, Profit participation will add considerably to the sums received. Did that headline above—

Thousands of Dollars for $10 a month—seem strong? Well, it is true, for the minute your application is accepted and you pay your premium, you have created an estate of thousands of dollars. Many things are bought on the budget plan — cars — homes — equipment and furnishings. People own many things they would have to do without if they had to pay the total cost in one lump sum. Now you can buy Life Insurance on this convenient, monthly budget plan.

Now consider this—If you can budget $10 a month for a start in Life Insurance—or can pay $10 a month more than at present—why not fill in the Coupon and mail? You know what the premium will be. Let your agent or Representative discuss the kind of Policy you special circumstances need, and how much of it the $10 a month will provide.

Firearms Roster Nears Deadline For All Corners

OTTAWA, Sept. 15.—(OP)—Complete record of all firearms in Canada will be assembled at the offices of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police here by Sept. 15—deadline for the registration of all rifles and shotguns in the country.

Recommendations of the special committee on the Defence of Canada Regulations, adopted by the House of Commons at the past session of parliament, were that the government, to guard against dangerous fifth column activities on the data at its disposal, on how many guns there are in Canada, and who has them.

After Sept. 15, anyone having a rifle or shotgun not registered with the Commissioner of the R.C.M.P. will be liable to a fine of $50, 30 days in jail, or both.

While every gun within Canadian borders must be registered, hunters from the United States will not be affected by the regulation, as such persons must have their weapons registered before bringing them into the country.

Previously, under the Defence of Canada Regulations, it was forbidden for any alien to carry firearms. An order-in-council passed last month, however, amended the act to permit bona fide tourists and visitors from allied and neutral countries to carry firearms in Canada provided they get permission.

This permission may be obtained by applying to R.C.M.P. Commissioner S. T. Wood, or to H. Scully, Commissioner of Customs, at Ottawa.

The application must state the description, make and serial number of the gun as well as the applicant's name, address, occupation, point and date of entry, and the purpose and duration of his visit. A character reference is also required.

Not Transferable

It is forbidden under the act to give, lend, barter or transfer possession of any firearm to any person who is not the holder of a permit to purchase.

Failure to comply with any of the above regulations may make the person involved liable to a $100 fine or three months imprisonment, or both.

Revolvers are not included in the act as a section of the Criminal Code which became law in 1934 already requires the registration of all pistols and revolvers. The regulations make no exceptions apart from members of Canada's armed forces.

By Sept. 15 every rifle and shotgun, including those given the Provisional Government for use among home guards, and even weapons in the North-West Territories must be registered.

Customs Entry

When the application has been approved, the R.C.M.P. will forward a permit to the customs collector at the designated entry point who will deliver it to the tourist on his arrival. Weapons admitted in this way must be taken out of the country again and ammunition imported will be dutiable.

No permits will be granted for automatic weapons, and all applications for bringing revolvers into Canada will be turned down unless the applicant wishes to bring in such arms for the purpose of entering in a competition.

A firearms permit issued by the R.C.M.P. will not operate as a hunting licence. This must be obtained as usual from the Provincial authorities.

French Colony Demoralized

SAN JUAN, P. R. Sept. 15.—(AP)—A shortage of food and medicines and a general demoralization prevail in the French penal colony of Guiana, according to reports received here. Devil's Island is the most notorious prison in the colony. Jailers have relaxed their watch on the prisoners, these reports said, and many of the convicts are escaping.

More Machine Guns

CANBERRA—(CP)—Output of machine guns in Australian plants has doubled and there has been a 16-fold increase in production of small arms munitions in the last 12 months, said Prime Minister Menzies.

No Uniform Price

In Prince Edward Island no uniform price is being offered. Prices of farmers vary from five dollars a cord to nine dollars and fifty cents. It can be appreciated perfectly legitimate. Trucking rates may differ according to the distance to be hauled, conditions of roads, the supply of trucks, or for other reasons. A spread of four dollars and fifty cents within one hundred miles, however, might well be questioned.

Assuming that the agent's general expenses would amount to $1.00 per cord and that he paid the farmer the top price of $9.50, a guaranteed profit of $1.50 per cord. Assuming also that an average shipload would amount to 2500 cords this would leave the agent with a profit of 3,750 for as shipping a small shipload of pit props. This is an ample reward, considering that it is a government contract and the price is guaranteed. When the agent offers only $9.00 per cord, it would seem opportunist to make a lot of money in a short time.

England needs every stick of pit props that she can get. The price, if the local agents by setting too low a price to induce the farmers to cut pit props and they do not get the quantity needed, they are not only doing a disservice to the farmers, but are failing in the duty which every man has of supporting the Empire in her dire hour of need.

Agent's Margin

A word of caution must be given in regard to the figure quoted here. The agent's price includes the trucking and loading costs to be considered. But the agent's margin should not be difficult to figure when we remember the guaranteed price of $21.00 per fathom—or $12.00 per cord.

The prop, of course, must conform to certain standards of quality. Instructions in regard to lengths and sizes are supplied to the producers. The props are subject to inspection. This is usual in the sale of any product.

The question of measurement is also an important one. The cord of wood is defined by statute as 128 cubic feet. It is not a solid measurement, provided that the wood has been stacked properly. It has been alleged that certain buyers, not in this province, fortunately, have not measured the top row—allowing for waste or as they say buying on a shoulder—for this and when they sell a cord, not to sell a cord and an eighth.

The ideal situation would be to have a cooperative, owned by the people, to hold and administer this valuable public agency. The cooperative would advance a certain price to the farmer and then rebate any surplus profits after paying all expenses. This would give to the producer every cent possible and give the British government every stick of wood possible. Since the agency has been given to private business, however, we must rely on publicity to ensure that our farmers get a square deal.

French Trawlers Barred From Canada

OTTAWA, Sept. 15.—(CP)—Twelve French fishing trawlers loaded with fish and tied up at the Island of St. Pierre et Miquelon, will not come to Canada, it was learned today.

Under Canadian law they would not be able to enter a Canadian port even in peace times unless damaged by storm or in need of supplies.

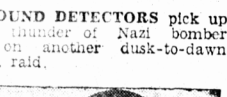

Their position at the moment appears equivocal pending clarification of the status of St. Pierre et Miquelon.

The vessels, it is understood, took shelter in the islands since their home ports as a result of the British blockade.

Crowning Glory With Pink Tint

LONDON, Sept. 14.—(CP)—Pink hair may be the height of feminine fashion for autumn wear. A new pink tint, the invention of a London hair stylist, is becoming popular, especially among women in uniform.

The pink shade adds a new soft light to the hair, and can be toned to suit either a dark or fair complexion, the stylist said. "A woman's hair is her crowning glory, and in these days she needs to make the best of it. Uniforms are playing a big part in hair fashions."

1—SOUND DETECTORS pick up faintest sound of Nazi bomber bound on another dusk-to-dawn London raid.

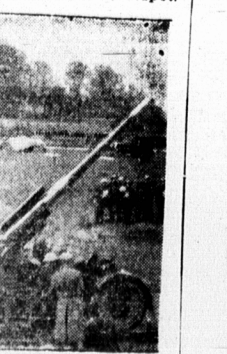

2—HEIGHT AND DISTANCE of enemy aircraft is calculated by British new scientific aids to anti-air defence as hidden guns wait.

3—PREDICTOR MACHINES synchronize data electrically flashed from scattered sighting units, automatically issuing gun orders.

4—"TRIGGER MAN" waits, poised, to discharge gun as crew set in instruments ordered by predictor, putting planes directly "on the spot."

5—SKIERS SPLIT OPEN in ear-splitting roar of barrage from guns never before unleashed, creating barrage more tremendous than ever known for eight full hours. Barrages drop only 20 bombs all night.

It was intensely dark, island, channel and crescent sand-shore all sable-blanketed by the thousand sagged under the great battering rains of the pier timbers, the petuous physical strength of the Northwest men crumpled it and hurled it inward. A cry of fear first from the stockade grounds inside, a cry smothered by the roaring sound as the barrier went down.

The yard's full of men, yelled Claude leaping over the tangled palings. "Quick!"

Ahead, in the center of the stockade ground half a dozen torches flared redly on the post steps, and by the dim light the men followed Claude, jumping from pile to pile. Here and there rifles and pistols spat, but nothing could stop the Northwest rush. Their bludgeons knocked pistols and rifles from XY hands and cracked XY heads wherever they rose from the palings.

By sheer brawn the Northwesters smothered them there in their tracks, cast the heavy pier timbers on top of the wreckage that jammed the stockade ground from palisade foundation to post buildings and, Galline still at their head, swept on to the fur house itself.

Under the half-dozen torches Claude glimpsed Girard, the agent, and five of his clerks, but Chavignaud and his prisoners were none where to be seen.

"Where's your leader, Chavignaud?" Claude demanded. "Where did he bring here?"

"Chavignaud?" laughed the post keeper with a great show of unconcern. "Not within miles of here. There are only his men. While you amused yourself battering down my palisade, Chavignaud was getting across Grande Portage with his two..."

"You lie," snarled Claude. "He hadn't time. Chavignaud would take shelter and you can't send me across the portage on a wild goose chase. He's cornered here."

"Then you'd better find him," sneered Girard. "I'll do that. But hand over your..."
