The Willis is the only

Piano for the home

As a rule only one piano is bought in a lifetime so that durability and permanency of tone and action are even more important than design and finish.

For brilliancy of execution, mellow richness and sympathetic singing qualities, beauty and permanency of tone, delicacy of touch and superiority of materials and workmanship, no piano can equal the Willis for home use.

The motor boat Imperial II, has returned from Summerside where she competed successfully in the recent race for the McKelvie cup. In the Guardian's report of the race it was incorrectly stated that the Imperial I was just completing the first lap when the other boats were finishing the fourth and final lap. This should have been made to read, "the third lap" instead of the first.

The leading article in the Canadian Magazine for September is entitled "Napoleon's Burial and Exhumation." It takes the form of some reminiscences of a gentleman who was born in Saint Helena and who witnessed both ceremonies, and is edited by Dr. A. H. U. Colquhoun, Deputy Minister of Education for Ontario. The article is well illustrated. Another well illustrated contribution is Saint John, the City of Loyalists, by Emily P. Weaver. Another of those interesting histories of some of our famous mining camps is told by Harold Sands in a well illustrated article entitled Bonanzas of the Slocan. Ernest McGaffey contributes an entertaining account of The Red Men of Vancouver Island. The stories in this issue are also of a high order.

In the window of the McKinnon Drug Co. there is on display a Ross match rifle, fitted with the new improved Ross bridge for attaching the peep sight. This rifle was specially imported by the agent of the Ross Rifle Co. In a practice shoot at 500 yards it made an almost perfect diagram of shots, the extreme distance between the high and low shots being only three inches. The finish of the rifle is most beautiful, the stock being of dark Circassian walnut highly polished. The barrel is of the finest American steel, gauged to .303 of an inch, this gauge being slightly smaller than the regular, permits greater accuracy and is more lasting. The pull of the trigger has been nicely adjusted to five rounds. The rifle has been specially assembled by the Ross Rifle expert mechanic, Ernest Evans, and shot and sighted by the company's expert marksman, Sgt. A. McMillan. The rifle will be given as first prize in the open shoot Labor Day morning. An entrance fee to cover the expenses of the match, prizes, etc., will be fixed. It is hoped that this inducement will bring a large number of riflemen together so that a good morning's sport will be assured.

The plan for the play in the Opera House on the evening of Sept. 5th opens that morning at the regular places. Secure your seats early for there is going to be a bumper house. Get your ticket as soon as you can. 9-1dl1.

Murphy officiated at the services at the Church and grave and the following were pall bearers: L. B. Miller, B. C. Prowse, Alexander Horne, Joseph Warren, Thomas Dover and George Moore.
