

Pleased Visitors From Bermuda

Making their first visit to Prince Edward Island—and to Canada—and enjoying it very much are Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Outerbridge and daughter Elizabeth, of Canal Cottage, Flatts, Bermuda. Mr. Outerbridge is manager of the Standard Oil Company in Bermuda.

They are the guests of old friends in this Province, Rev. T. J. Humphrey and Mrs. Humphrey, of Kensington, who resided in Bermuda from 1932 to 1935, during which time Mr. Outerbridge was one of Mr. Humphrey's parishioners.

The Outerbridges, who are native Bermudians, came to Canada on this occasion to attend the graduation of their son, Herbert, Jr., at Mount Allison University. Yesterday they were in Charlottetown and visited the Confederation Chamber and other centres of interest, finding much about which to speak appreciatively. They are also impressed by the agricultural prosperity of the Island, the evidences of thrift and industry on all sides, and the friendliness and hospitality of the people generally.

In Memoriam MRS. WILBERT MACPHAIL

Relatives, neighbours and friends learned with deep regret of the sudden passing of Mrs. Wilbert MacPhail of Argyle Shore, at the Prince Edward Island Hospital at the early age of 35 years. Mrs. MacPhail had been in for several good health up till a few days previous to her death, when on March 17, she passed peacefully to her Eternal Home. There are left to mourn the loss of a kind and loving wife and mother, her sorrowing husband and a family of six young children, namely: Audrey, Anna, Edwin, Ewen, Burrows and Lloyd. She is also survived by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Hugh MacPhee, Canoe Cove; two brothers, Roy and Dan of Canoe Cove, and three sisters, Mrs. Cecil Cook, Malden, Mass.; Mrs. William Potts, Argyle Shore; and Mrs. Robert MacQuarrie, Bonshaw. The funeral service, which was largely attended, was held from her late residence on April 21. The service at the home and graveside was conducted by Rev. G. C. Webster who visited her during her illness and spoke words of hope and comfort for the bereaved. A service at the grave was conducted by the members of the L.O.B.A. of which she was a faithful member.

The floral tributes which were many and beautiful testified to the high esteem in which the deceased was held. The floral bearers were Fred MacPhail, Foster MacPhail, Donald MacPhail, David Inman, George Darrach, and John MacEachern. Interment was in Argyle Shore Cemetery. (Patriot please copy)

SCHOOL IMPROVEMENT

(Continued from Page 1) ing at high pressure all the time. A high school would take much of the present heavy burden off the College and thus increase the efficiency of the College. As for students attending a vocational school, such a course would not allow them any scholastic standing, whereas a composite high school would allow them that standing along with their technical training.

Mrs. MacDonald said the League had been advocating a composite high school for the past three and a half years. The need had been borne upon the members by the realization that nothing of any worthwhile improvement had been made to the City school system since the conclusion of World War I when annexes had been built to the schools, and conditions, Mrs. MacDonald said, had changed greatly in the last 25 years. A composite high school would bring the City's school system more in line with that of the other Provinces. It would give not only an academic course but industrial, home economic, commercial, and agricultural courses as well.

A delegation from the School Improvement League had waited upon the Provincial Government. Mrs. MacDonald said, and had asked that Charlottetown be given the first composite high school in the Province because the need was so great. The Government had made no definite reply other than to say the City might have to wait for from five to ten years for such a school. However, Mrs. MacDonald said, she believed the Provincial Government would help Charlottetown for the City had never failed to answer every call of a provincial or national nature which had been made upon it.

Schools Overcrowded

Lieut.-Col. L.T. Lowther, principal of Prince Street School, said his school has 17 class rooms with over 300 students when its normal capacity is 130 rooms and about 350 pupils. His students must all take the same subjects. Col. Lowther said, which means they must study Latin, French, geometry, algebra, etc., without being able to study the elements of science. "All we have," Col. Lowther said, "is some text books and a blackboard." Col. Lowther cited from his own experience cases of bright young men who, because of their lack of education, were unable to qualify for the Army for any position demanding academic training beyond the eighth grade. Often those men were led by men with inferior quality who were also suffering from a lack of education.

Money could be found to spend on practically everything else; he did not see why it could not be found for such an important undertaking as the erection of a composite high school.

A Tragedy

Major A. W. Rogers said the lack of education among the Island boys overseas was tragic. The average education of the Islanders in the Nova Scotia regiment to which he was assigned was Grade six, Major Rogers said. The Nova Scotia boys had a higher education on the part of enthusiasm on the part of the child. The children were cramped for space. They had no room to study, no room to play, no room, scarcely, to draw their breath. A composite high school would give the younger children in the present City schools more room; it would relieve the congested condition of Prince of Wales; and it would allow more opportunities for health programs and recreational facilities.

Some of the City Schools were in a dangerous condition. If fire broke out in some of the City Schools, the Colonel said, he would not care to think of what might happen. Those conditions should not exist and only the erection of another school built along modern lines would correct, or at least alleviate, the present evil.

The present City Schools offer no attraction to the young children. They are crowded inside and unattractive outside and all one wants to do to verify those statements is to stand outside and look at the happy faces of the children as they leave the schools for their homes.

Few people stop to realize that the erection of such a composite high school would keep thousands of dollars in the Province that are now going to other Provinces from parents who are sending their children to mainland schools. The Colonel did not think there should be any trouble in getting the money. The residents of the City were continuously contributing to drives for many various organizations. Those causes were worthy, but since the need of a modern school was great, the Colonel thought those various organizations should be approached and asked to refrain from petitioning the residents of Charlottetown for financial aid for the period of one year. In that time, the people of Charlottetown could contribute sufficient money to furnish themselves with that which they needed now, a good, modern composite high school. Major T.E. MacNutt said the City schools were antiquated — out of date. He was compelled, however, to take issue with Col. Reid concerning his statement that some of the schools constituted dangerous fire hazards. Fire drills, Major MacNutt said, had recently been held in one school and the school had been emptied of all children in one minute and a half. The question of a high school in Charlottetown had been favourably considered by the City Council some 18 or 20 years ago but the debentures covering its cost had never been issued. He recommended that should the school be built, it be composite high school would remedy such a condition and benefit the community as well as the young men and women attending.

Kinsmen Support Move Mr. Walthen Gaudet assured the meeting that the Kinsmen Club were unanimous in their support of the school. Vocational training maintains the interest of those students, Mr. Gaudet said who had no expectations of going to college. There were positions open in his company for men with two years experience in basic physics but the company was unable to obtain such men in Charlottetown. "We have to bring them in from the outside," Mr. Ainsworth said. The boys brought up in Charlottetown are at a great disadvantage as compared to the boys from other parts of Canada, he said. Col. Rogers said the school could be built for $400,000. He agreed with Col. Rogers. Personally, Mr. Ainsworth said, he was willing to have his taxes doubled if by paying something more, his children and his neighbors' children could enjoy the advantages of a composite high school. "If we are not prepared to pay for it, then we should forget it. If we are prepared to pay for it, then let us go ahead and get it," Mr. Ainsworth concluded.

Trained Men Scarce

Mr. V.A. Ainsworth said he could support the statements made by Col. Rogers with reference to the difficulty in securing Island trained men for technical occupations. There were positions open in his company for men with two years experience in basic physics but the company was unable to obtain such men in Charlottetown. "We have to bring them in from the outside," Mr. Ainsworth said. The boys brought up in Charlottetown are at a great disadvantage as compared to the boys from other parts of Canada, he said. Col. Rogers said the school could be built for $400,000. He agreed with Col. Rogers. Personally, Mr. Ainsworth said, he was willing to have his taxes doubled if by paying something more, his children and his neighbors' children could enjoy the advantages of a composite high school. "If we are not prepared to pay for it, then we should forget it. If we are prepared to pay for it, then let us go ahead and get it," Mr. Ainsworth concluded.

Mr. George Beers said he was much pleased with the outline of the project as given by Mrs. MacDonald. A composite high school, he thought, was essential to the prosperity of Charlottetown, and the thing to do was to go after the money to get it. It was strange that no government could find the money to give the people suitable school facilities but could easily find it for other purposes not so essential to the welfare of the people.

Mrs. R. H. Rogers said she had often wondered how the students at West Kent along as well as the city did considering there were so many grades, and so many children of various ages. She believed a composite high school would be of inestimable benefit to the young men and women now preparing themselves for their future careers under great handicaps.

Suggests Poll of Citizens

Major D. L. Mathieson suggested some sort of poll might be taken to determine if the citizens of Charlottetown were behind the movement sponsored by the School Improvement League. The Major said he was confident such a school would be of tremendous value but it was his opinion that the City Government and the Board of Trustees might like to have the views of the people upon it.

Lieut.-Col. W. W. Reid said he thought the interest of the average school child began to flag when he or she reaches the third or fourth grade. There was nothing surprising in this lack of enthusiasm on the part of the child. The children were cramped for space. They had no room to study, no room to play, no room, scarcely, to draw their breath. A composite high school would give the younger children in the present City schools more room; it would relieve the congested condition of Prince of Wales; and it would allow more opportunities for health programs and recreational facilities.

under the sole control of the City. Mr. K.M. Martin said the meeting had been of an unanimous nature but he felt called upon to disagree with some of the sentiments expressed. The Charlottetown school system could not be separated from the school system of the Province. He did not believe it was possible for the City to own its own school. They would be under the jurisdiction of the Department of Education. His statements, Mr. Martin said, did not mean he was not in favour of the project. He was heartily in favour of it and he thought it might be better to have the gathering constitute it a promotional body for the purpose of creating a favourable reaction to the erection of a composite high school in Charlottetown.

Miss Jacqueline Macdonald said she considered Col. Reid and Major MacNutt both partly right in their remarks about the danger of fire in the schools. It was true, Miss Macdonald said, that the school referred to by Major MacNutt had been emptied in a minute and a half. But there was no fire, Miss Macdonald said, and the children knew they were going through a fire drill. They were, therefore, calm and there was no excitement or panic of any kind to hamper their movements.

Major B. Earle Macdonald said he was in favour of a composite high school. Supposing the school did cost $400,000, he believed the City of Charlottetown could build it. The City had just received its first annual grant of $14,000 from the Provincial Government which was $1 per person for those residing in the City at the time of the 1941 census. That amount would pay the interest on the $400,000. So the school would not have to worry about that. The great trouble now was to obtain a suitable site for the building. But there was no immediate rush. The school might not be built next year, nor even the next, but he felt it would be built soon. Like his friend Mr. Ainsworth, he was willing to have his taxes doubled in order to assist in the erection of the school.

As to the Provincial Government, the Major said he was sure the Premier was in sympathy with the League's desire to have such a school. Both the Premier and the Hon. Dr. W.J.P. MacMillan had been good friends to the City and both would help most effectively when the time came. The Mayor said he had no right to speak too definitely but he assured the meeting that from what had been told, the Provincial Government would contribute generously to the project once it saw the citizens were desirous of obtaining the school.

The Hon. T. W. L. Prowse said the lack of education was felt everywhere in commercial enterprises. It was felt in his own establishments when they wished educated help. Often, it was hard to find. He could assure the meeting that he would do all in his power to further the movement for it was his sincere belief that a composite high school was badly needed in Charlottetown.

Mr. P. E. Palmer moved that the School Improvement League be assisted in formulating plans for another meeting by a committee of five chosen by Dr. J. A. MacMillan with the assistance of the League and others interested. The motion was seconded by Mrs. James A. MacMillan.

May Time Musical At Notre Dame

The Spring Musical at Notre Dame is an annual event towards which many look forward with expectant pleasure. This year the senior recital which took place last night was a decided success and the young ladies who treated the audience to piano and vocal numbers are to be highly complimented.

One had but to glance at the program to recognize at once the high quality of the music that is taught at Notre Dame. Each student played her respective number from memory with fine interpretation, skill and ease. Several among them were outstanding in the perfection of their work. The charming number, "My Sweet Little Alice Blue Gown" was most enjoyable and the demure "Blue Bells," sang and danced in graceful rhythm.

The vocal solos were pleasingly rendered while the choruses made a magnificent closing for the very lovely program. Schubert's Ave Maria, arranged by Rev. J. E. Ronan, M.C.G., deserves special mention. This number, so difficult for most choirs, was sung with remarkable ease and sincerity by the youthful choir.

Among the distinguished guests of the evening were Most Reverend James Boyl, D.D., His Honour Lieutenant Governor and Mrs. Bernard, Premier and Mrs. Jones; and Mrs. B. Earle Macdonald and members of the clergy.

The Notre Dame Alumnae sponsored the program which was as follows: The Gypsy Dance (Hunt) — Marion Fynes, Noreen Connolly, Helen P. MacDonald, Justine Nealis. Russian Dance (Rowe) — Joyce Irvine. Waltz (Schumann) — Dorothy Dewar.

The new code contains 134 canons as compared with 141 drawn up in 1603. Considered most important are the canons dealing with reorganization of the ecclesiastical courts, for without them, "recognized as spiritually authoritative, it will not be possible to enforce the new canons," and they might become "a series of exhortations soon to be forgotten."

The three main proposals as to the courts are: 1. That the jurisdiction of the Privy Council, as an appeal court, be abolished and a new court established. The canon says: "There shall be an appeal from a provincial court to a final court consisting of the archbishop of the province and four other members." 2. That bishops be encouraged to sit personally in their courts as co-judges with their chancellor.

3. That a court for the trial of bishops be established in each province. Some modernity is seen in the revision of the canon on the observance of fast days which exhorts members of the Church to attend divine service "except they shall be hindered by necessary and unavoidable labor or business."

Guests of the Club were Messrs. Charles Archer, Bruce McLaren, Wendell Beaton and Wylie Bryerton. BEVIN SPEAKS

(Continued from Page 1) not agree to the principle of reparations from current production which involved Great Britain and the British people and the other Allies in virtually paying reparations to another ally."

Anti-Russian Speech Bevin was critical of the Russians on several points but his wording was cautious—a distinct contrast to Anthony Eden, deputy Conservative leader, who followed him with one of his most outspoken anti-Russian speeches.

The Moscow conference "was a failure," Eden said, because "no agreement had been reached on any one of the major points involved." He put the blame squarely on "the obstinate and intransigent attitude of the Soviet Union," an attitude he termed "unreasonable and unreasonable."

"If agreement cannot be reached with the Soviet Union, we must act without them," Eden said. "Economic stability is a prerequisite for political stability. Bevin said, and "it is impossible for us to achieve satisfactory results unless the two things go together or at least can be worked out together."

The Foreign Secretary expressed "deep concern" at the Moscow failure to reach agreement on the United States plan for a four-power treaty for Germany which had given him "visions of peace for centuries."
