THE MORNING GUARDIAN

SATURDAY, JULY 13, 1901.

THE NATIONAL DIVISION.

The National Division, Sons of Temperance has completed its session in our midst and many of the delegates have set out on their return to their homes. It was felt to be something of a venture to hold the annual gathering at a point almost on the extreme border of the jurisdiction, the fear being that the attendance would necessarily be small. It is most gratifying to learn that this fear was not realized, both the attendance of delegates and the number of new members brought in being in excess of the average in recent years.

In conversation with a number of prominent officials and members of the order THE GUARDIAN learns with pleasure that they all express themselves as pleased with Charlottetown, with the Island and with these of its people whom they have met. One delegate expressed his feelings by saying they had enjoyed every minute of their stay, and others said their only regret was that they could not remain longer amid such pleasant surroundings. On their part the visiting delegates have had a good time. We, on our part, feel honored by their visit.

The National Division has had a most harmonious and we trust a profitable meeting. Our local temperance workers have had the opportunity of meeting and forming acquaintance with a number of leading temperance workers in the Republic and on the mainland of Canada. And our Island will be at least a little better known abroad from the fact of the annual meeting of the highest representative body of one of the great temperance orders having been held in our midst. This is most satisfactory all round.

MR. CARNEGIE'S MILLIONS.

Mr. Carnegie having long stood foremost among the captains of industry, has more recently become renowned for a more than princely generosity. His great gifts for educational and humanitarian purposes have, however, made no diminution of his capital. He has been expending his income only, and perhaps not all of that. Having some years ago given utterance to the sentiment that "to die rich is to die disgraced," an interested public in many lands naturally desires to know approximately the amount of the capital yet to be disbursed and when the process is likely to begin.

A little light on this interesting subject comes to from a New York friend of the multi-millionaire. The statement of this friend is that Mr. Carnegie intends to dispose of his wealth while he lives and will presently make larger benefactions for public uses than he has yet done. His annual income is about $15,000,000 yearly. Within 20 years past he has given away $40,000,000 to libraries, schools, colleges, and other philanthropic objects, of which vast sum American institutions obtained over 29 millions, and foreign institutions nearly 12 millions. The difficulties attending his recent gift of 10 millions to the Scotch universities are said to have influenced him to seek other methods of diverting his wealth to public uses, and he is said now to be considering the advisability of directing a considerable portion toward endowing and supporting art galleries, scientific museums and similar institutions.

Mr. Carnegie has a modest 280 millions yet to give away, and there is as yet no certainty as to the particular quarter of the world in which the next golden shower may fall. We deem it a duty to warn our readers of the existing conditions in order that they may be prepared for emergencies. If a matter of ten millions or so should suddenly be flung this way without any previous notification, the consequences might be imagined, perhaps, but could not be adequately described.

On the whole we think it would be better for Mr. Carnegie to first visit the Island. We all know what a genuine Scottish welcome he would receive, altogether apart from the millions in prospect. At the same time he would be so much delighted with the Island, its climate and people that the millions would follow as a matter of course. But he might break it to us more gently and we would be the better prepared for what is coming, if he would first make us a social visit.

MOVEMENT OF POPULATION.

The Chicago Tribune—a great newspaper, by the way—does not see eye to eye with those Canadian optimists who think that the southward exodus from Canada to the States is ended, and a larger influx setting in from the States to Canada. The Tribune says that the value of settlers' effects received from Canada last year was greater than in any year since 1893; that if the number of emigrants from Canada has decreased, those who did go to the States were of the better sort instead of poor people; and that the value of settlers' effects exported from the States to Canada last year was less than in preceding years.

No doubt a part of this divergence of opinion arises from the difference between the trade returns of the two countries. They never did agree and probably never will agree as to the value of the exports and imports interchanged. Our own returns make a much better showing in regard to the movement of population across the boundary than in former years. And it is to be observed that while the Tribune is of opinion that the Republic still gains yearly more people from Canada than it loses to Canada, it seems to anticipate the time when the reverse will be true. This is to come about, according to the Tribune, from the large investments being made of American capital in Canadian mines and industries. Such investments have been in recent years larger than ever before and will doubtless go on increasing, as we hope they may.

All indications go to show that if the tide of migration has not yet fully turned in our favor it is about to turn. We have vast resources yet but very partially exploited, and few countries now afford so promising a field for investment. Being close at hand these resources are attracting American capital extensively. On this point the Tribune says: "If the investment of American capital in that country continues the Canadian exodus will be stopped. The workers of the Dominion will be given that employment at home to find which they have for years been compelled to come here. Every iron or coal mine opened, and every iron and steel mill built with American capital will furnish additional employment for Canadian and perhaps for some American labor."

"What a difference in the suffering at time of childbirth"

when Dr. R. V. Pierce's medicine was used, writes Mrs. Edmon Jacobs, Bangerville, Johnson County, Ind. "I had not heard of Dr. Pierce's medicine three years ago when I was confined, so to speak almost death. Before baby was born I could not be on my feet without two persons holding me. The baby was a boy and weighed nine and three-quarter pounds, and I weighed ten and three-quarter pounds after the birth. I suffered severe pain, last night I was unable to get up, and I was advised of a neighbor, my husband, my mother, and my friends, to take Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, also his Pleasant Pellets, if necessary."

"Following the advice of a neighbor," What a weight of confirmatory evidence there is in those six words. The neighbor recommended it. Mrs. Jacobs has also tried it and proved its wonderful properties and now she recommends it. Beside such testimony as this its maker's words are unimportant. Mrs. Jacobs' experience is a fact. Her neighbor's experience is a fact. The written experiences of 250,000 other women are facts. There is no theory about it. There can be no question about it. In every neighborhood in this broad land there are women who have been cured by the "Favorite Prescription." It has cured more cases of female complaint than all other medicines for women combined. It is the only medicine of its kind invented by a skilled specialist in medicine—a regularly graduated physician of more than thirty years' actual experience.

"The advice of a neighbor." My feet without minutes before my baby was born. He weighed three months old and weighed nineteen pounds. I know it was Dr. Pierce's medicine that saved me from suffering. I advise all women to take Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, also his Pleasant Pellets, if necessary."
