SCOTT'S EMULSION

Will Celebrate Diamond Wedding Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Ramsay of Lower Bedouque will celebrate the sixtieth anniversary of their wedding this Saturday at their home. Friends and neighbors will join with the Guardian in extending heartiest congratulations to this fortunate couple who have been privileged to enjoy sixty years of happy and congenial wedded life. Mr. and Mrs. Ramsay are both eighty-two years of age and enjoy good health.

They have retired from active farming, although they are both able to do their share of the days work. Mr. Ramsay for many years operated a lobster factory at Chelton, which is a few miles from Bedouque. That was some time ago when lobster canning was a lucrative business in that neighbourhood. Later he took up farming at Bedouque.

Mr. and Mrs. Ramsay are well known for their generous hospitality and take a lively interest in community affairs.

They have the pleasure of having two of their five daughters residing with them, Mrs. Percy Affleck and Mrs. Orville Jonson. Their other daughters live in the United States, and are Mrs. Sue Johnstone, Mrs. Smith and Mrs. Hugh Spence.

There are six grandchildren, four girls and two boys.—S.

"Well, I declare," she cried: "here are my spectacles that I have lost for the last fortnight!"

Insurgents

Francisco Franco's Insurgent troops rumbled almost within shelling distance of Madrid tonight, pounding ahead in a new offensive against the capital.

The "zero hour" for the storming of the actual fortifications of Madrid was believed imminent.

Three columns, under General Jose Varela, fought their way to a point within 25 miles southwest of Madrid. They hoisted the Insurgent flag at the new field headquarters only nine miles from the strategic centre of Navalcarnero.

Regulars drove forward 13 miles between Santa Cruz, del Retamar and Chapineria, nine miles east of San Martin de Valdeiglesias—about 50 kilometres from the objective.

(The Seville Insurgent radio station said the Fascist column marching east from San Martin de Valdeiglesias occupied the town of Chapineria and pressed on towards Madrid.)

The Socialist Government planes were shot down during the advance, near San Martin. One plunged to earth in flames, against a hillside 100 yards away from where General Varela stood chatting with an Associated Press correspondent.

Insurgent planes raked the retreating Government militiamen with deadly effect.

On the Northern Front, General Emilio Mola's Fascists pushed rapidly towards the capital, plodding ahead over mountain terrain.

A Junta communique tonight said a "state of complete disorganization" prevailed in Madrid. General Franco himself threatened to "punish" nations which receive bank of Spain gold from the Madrid Government, declaring he would refuse to sign economic agreements with them.

WITH THE INSURGENT FORCES IN OVIEDO PROVINCE, NORTHERN SPAIN, Oct. 15—(CP)—(Havas)—Ten thousand Insurgent troops were ready tonight to attack the Asturian miners besieging Oviedo from strategic points between one and three miles distant from the city.

The Miners, who drove General Afanda's Insurgents defending the city to its centre amid heavy fighting during the last few days, were reported preparing to evacuate.

The Insurgent-relief contingents, after swift advances, were consolidating positions on Mt. Encarnadero, three miles north of the city.

The Insurgent lines extend north and west and south of Oviedo, their forces divided into three columns totalling about 10,000 men under command of General Lombardi. A concerted march on the city was expected at any moment.

The Asturian miners were said to hold strong defensive positions. Reports reaching here said the miners had received new arms from Russia.

BRUNETE, SPAIN, Oct. 15—(AP)—Insurgents drove Government forces back on this town tonight, only 19 1-2 miles due west of the capital.

Government forces defending the Pelayos Gorge were routed but fell back to a reasonably well fortified area between Chapineria and this village below the Guadarrama mountain range.

Barbed wire defended trenches fell before the Insurgent advance through Navas del Rey, about 25 miles west by north of Madrid.

"We must now guard against flank attacks," a Government official said.

Business In Kensington Shows Revival

"The Town of Kensington has lately taken on a revival of business activities unparalleled in its history. New industries and new establishments have created a new atmosphere in the commercial life of this prosperous and thriving Town with its beautiful residences and paved streets. Commercial Street in particular gives striking evidence of this fact where the following business changes have taken place. Henry in charge. Mr. Kenneth Smith has his new Grocery Department in this building.

The Profit Building on Commercial Street has recently undergone extensive repairs. Mr. J. F. Proffitt, Notary Public, representing E. T. Higgs Insurance Co., Percy G. Hately's Shoe and Harness Shop, Mann Bros Produce Dealers and H. P. Wadman & Son Meat Market have their apartments in this building.

The Darrah building also had undergone alterations, a new coal shed and weigh scales have been erected. Mr. Orville Darrah is conducting a general business on this street.

Russell Champlon & Sons have just completed a new and up to date Cold Storage Plant costing in the vicinity of $40,000.

This plant will be a very important asset to the Town and surrounding districts. D. McKenzie & Co. have recently purchased the Ramsay Lot and erected two dwelling and a Building Shed.

Messrs. Preston Toombs and Bruce MacLeod have purchased a lot on Commercial Street opposite Post Office Building and placed a Store on the premises which it is understood will be opened soon."

Social Creditor Is Ruled Out Of Party

EDMONTON, Oct. 14—(CP)—For the second time since the 1935 provincial election, a Social Credit member of the legislature has been repudiated by the party.

R. Turner, President of the Taber Social Credit Association, announced today that James Hansen, Social Credit member of the legislature, had been repudiated by the constituency executive. Turner said Hansen could subscribe no longer to some of the planks in the Social Credit party's platform.

Last July, S.A.G. Barnes, elected as one of the two Social Credit members for Edmonton, was read out of the party at a legislative caucus of the members. He had voted against some of the Social Credit legislation of the Aberhart government.

Unemployed

were men of 40 years of age without any work.

They have 20 years during which they will desire work but were not fitted to pursue any occupation, he said. Each district has its own problems and its own suggestions and the commission was willing to listen to them all.

Col. H. D. Johnson, Provincial Commissioner, Canadian Legion, presented recommendations in the form of a brief prepared by the Provincial Command of the Legion assisted by a committee of the Charlottetown branch. The brief stated there are about 130 unemployed veterans in Charlottetown and immediate vicinity. 68 have registered at Legion headquarters in Charlottetown, of whom 40 would be employable in the general labor market.

Reference was made to the lack of special provision here for employment of handicapped or disabled veterans.

Provision was suggested for the establishment by the Federal Government of a community farming scheme whereby unemployed veterans and their dependents could be usefully engaged in fruit and vegetable growing, poultry raising, etc., and by canning the products at a central plant which could be operated by disabled veterans not otherwise employable.

There was considerable discussion between the chairman and Col. Johnson on this proposition, the chairman advising against the method as outlined.

Reference was also made in the Legion brief to the problem of assisting veterans to retain their positions in Government employ, complaints being made that government employees who have been employed for years are suddenly dismissed for reasons other than incompetence or neglect and that it is very difficult to re-establish such persons in other walks of life.

The brief also reviewed the activities of the Legion headquarters in Charlottetown in assisting unemployed veterans, the Charlottetown branch contributing out of its meagre funds about $1,000 for relief purposes. About $2,000 annually has been distributed from the canteen fund during the past ten years throughout the province. This fund being now exhausted, greater difficulty will be experienced in caring for unemployed veterans. In rural districts, it was pointed out, the only government relief granted is a monthly payment of $5.

Major T. E. MacNutt outlined a plan for placing unemployed veterans on small farm holdings of about six acres, provided by local business men, together with a cottage, if the recipient could raise $100. The chairman showed much interest in this project, and asked for a written statement on the subject.

He also suggested that the Commission might recommend the appointment of an honorary local committee to devote time to this proposition. In the event of any scheme of this kind proving feasible, the government was prepared to advance money, through the Commission, on a business basis.

Mayor B. W. Robinson of Summerside referred to the rehabilitation of the oyster industry. He recommended that it might be possible to establish some of the men on small leases of 5 1-2 acres and that in a few years they would be independent. Chairman Rattray expressed keen interest also in this suggestion.

The possibility of building up the lumber business in Prince Edward Island was advanced by Dr. J. A. Clark, Superintendent of the Experimental Farm.

There was large areas in southern Kings County now being neglected on which good timber could be grown if it were worked, Dr. Clark declared. It was a proposition for the government and not for individuals. The land would produce excellent fire wood and wood for the manufacture of pulp.

Chairman Rattray asked Dr. Clark how the men could make a living in the meantime, and he declared that the first year or two potatoes could be produced.

The Commissioners were told that a large part of the unemployed in Prince Edward Island were natives of the province who went to New England States in their youth but had come back home during the depression when they lost their jobs.

Although they were living on the farms of their family and were not listed as unemployed, they were Sought To Negotiate Unified Empire Naval Defence Policy With Dominions Participating.

LONDON, Oct. 15—(CP Cable)—The part played by Admiral Jellicoe, Commander of the British Grand Fleet at the Battle of Jutland, in negotiations for unification of the naval defence of the Empire with the dominions participating is outlined in his biography by Admiral Sir R. H. Bacon, published today.

Admiral Jellicoe spent some time in Canada in 1919, in connection with the negotiations. No satisfactory conclusion was reached.

The visit to Canada arose from the Imperial War Conference of 1917 which requested the Admiralty to consider after the war a scheme of Empire naval defence. The Admiralty in a memorandum in 1918 advocated resuscitation of the idea of a single imperial navy, both in peace and in war time, with local navy boards in each dominion.

Throughout his tour Jellicoe was much handicapped by uncertainty as to whether surplus ships of the Royal Navy would be made available for the Dominion navies as gifts or otherwise.

"As late as Dec. 1, 1919, when half-way through his Canadian tour, Jellicoe wired the Admiralty that matters would be greatly facilitated if the position regarding the gift was made clear," the biography says. "The Admiralty, however, replied that earmarking of vessels for the dominions could not be guaranteed."

Bacon's treatment of Jutland is straightforward and, according to naval writers handling the book in today's newspapers, is hardly likely to add fuel to the controversy over that momentous battle. The Daily Telegraph critic remarks that excessive loyalty to a friend has, however, led Bacon into the error of belittling the results that might have followed a complete British victory.

"During his time at Ottawa," says Admiral Bacon, "it became clear to Jellicoe that the chance of securing Canadian naval cooperation must be seized at once or lost for an indefinite time. He therefore wired the Admiralty:

"The Canadian cabinet is discussing naval estimates for the next few years. A desire is being evinced to bear a proportionate share of the naval defence of the Empire. I request information at the earliest possible moment as to the probable approximate annual total British naval estimates for the two or three years for the ministers' confidential information. A decision will be reached shortly so the matter is urgent."

No reply to Jellicoe's telegram was ever received. Walter Long, First Lord of the Admiralty, subsequently wrote Jellicoe accepting full responsibility for the omission.

Having received no reply, Jellicoe wrote Long declaring the situation was critical. He mentioned Sir Robert Borden, then Prime Minister of Canada, and Hon. C.C. Ballantyne, then minister of marine and fisheries and of the naval service (now Senator Ballantyne).

"Borden, hard-pressed by Ballantyne, favors an immediate start being made," Jellicoe wrote. "On the other hand some ministers wish to not making a living. Chairman Rattray was surprised to find the province had no government employment agency and urged that steps be taken immediately to have one established.

A strong plea on behalf of the unemployed veterans of Charlottetown was made by Mr. J. P. Hillon.

Mr. W. A. MacLagan, provincial president of the Legion, gave information on various aspects of the unemployment question.

Mayor Robinson declared that though there were no unemployed in Summerside, many who would otherwise be receiving relief were being employed on street work and other projects.

The Commissioners concluded their sitting about 5:30 yesterday, and will proceed to Sydney, Halifax, St. John and Sherbrooke, Que.
