"ATHLETE'S FOOT"

... now epidemic in Canada

IT'S a mild infection, at first. There is redness between the toes—or grainy tiny blisters, with it-c-h-i-n-g. Sometimes there is an unwholesome, moist thick skin condition on toes and feet—it seems hardly "nice"—yet the daintiest woman, the most immaculate man, more than likely suffer.

All these symptoms point to the work of a ringworm germ, known as Trichophyton, which causes an infection, now generally known as "Athlete's Foot." It is a vegetable parasite and, unlike most disease germs, lurks in the very places where we go for recreation and cleanliness and health—on lockers and dressing-room floors; around the edges of swimming pools and showers—and has been tracked into countless homes.

Official reports say that "at least half of all adults suffer from ringworm (of the feet) at some time."

Absorbine Jr. kills the germ which causes "Athlete's Foot!" Don't take chances. This mild infection may become serious, persists and re-infects with great frequency and is most troublesome in warmer weather. Cure it at the first sign, with Absorbine Jr. which, it has been found, penetrates flesh-like tissues deeply and wherever it penetrates, it KILLS the ringworm germ in quick time.

At the first hint of infection, douse on Absorbine Jr. morning and night. Examine your feet tonight. You can easily pick it up, every time your bare feet come in contact with any damp floor. If it does not yield readily to Absorbine Jr. see your doctor. Get Absorbine Jr. from your druggist—$1.25. W. F. Young, Inc., Lyman Building, Montreal.

Absorbine Jr.

She was given in marriage by her father. The wedding march was played by Mrs. Harold Schurman. During the signing of the register Mrs. Jack McLeod sang very sweetly, "When Song is Sweet." ### London Letter

(By Glanville Carew (British United Press))
LONDON, Aug. 24 — Clergymen and lawyers, I believe, stand at the head of the Registrar General's lists in the matter of comparative longevity. In the case of the clergy it may be that long life is the direct result of an easy conscience. In the case of the lawyers there must be some other factor.
However that may be, one of our most astonishing youngsters is the Bishop of London, off on a visit to Canada.

During the world tour undertaken four years ago at the age of 70 the Bishop travelled 50,000 miles and preached or lectured over 500 times. Fortunately he found time to play too, and perhaps during his trip he may again go round a little with Sir Robert Borden. Apropos of this I heard a little tale the other day. A friend had warned the Bishop (on his previous visit) that the ex-premier was a player who had the habit of saying to himself before each stroke "Now then, Borden keep your damned head down." Hearing of course what he was listening for, the Bishop caught the muttered injunction by the ex-premier to the ex-premier. Said he: "I heard what you said, Borden, but I won't take any notice as long as you keep your head down and don't talk too loudly."

Do they always discuss only high affairs of State at Cabinet meetings? I don't know, but perhaps not if this yarn is true—which it probably is not. Anyhow, it is said that at a meeting of that august body, not so long ago, a certain jovial minister of unmanageable antics opened the proceedings by relating an incident which had just happened to him.
It appeared that he had spent a few days walking with his wife, sleeping wherever they happened to be, and (in police parlance) having no fixed place of abode. So it came to pass that they arrived one night at a very small village and were directed to a house where they might by chance get a bed. Now the residents at that house happened to be Quakers and they quite naturally enquired of the visitors "Are you friends?"
"Friends!" ejaculated our jovial minister. "Friends!" Good 'eavens no. We're only 'usband and wife."
After which recital the Cabinet presumably turned to the next item on the agenda.

The authorities of the Abbey of Westminster, greatly daring, are actually carrying out their expressed intention to rid the Abbey of some of its sculptural rubbish. So some tons of stone admirals and generals and politicians and squires of centuries ago are being deported, and will probably form a chamber of exiled horrors elsewhere.
To those of a cynical turn of mind it would seem to be a pity that the Abbey authorities jurisdiction does not extend to the Palace of Westminster across the way. In that latter place there are some hundreds of effigies (615 at full muster) to be seen nightly who are quite as useless and un-beautiful as the banished Abbey statues. Unfortunately, nothing short of an earthquake or a General Election will dislodge some of these.

Nevertheless, not all the 'members' of the House of Commons are useless, even though in certain outstanding cases little use may be made of them. Take Sir John Simon, K. C., for instance. Looking at the enormous fees marked on his briefs, Sir John must surely be feeling that he has been far better rewarded at the bar than in the House.
From all discussions on India he has been excluded; he will have no place on the Federal Structure Committee. His monumental report on India is in a dustbin somewhere in Whitehall and probably only the Government charwomen know in which bin.
And this is the man who abandoned his great practice at the Bar with its truly tremendous earnings to go to India for long periods and incur enormous mental strain without any remuneration or reward either promised or desired. It is not a question of political bias one way or the other. Even Sir John's political enemies feel that he has been most scurvily treated.

Apart from the personal side of the matter, it is by the man in the street regarded as patently disgraceful, from the point of view of the public interest, that the Englishman best equipped with a knowledge of Indian affairs should be left out of the counsels of the nation while feather-weights are permitted to talk our heads off.

The strange folks who like to have their travelling baggage pasted all over with labels from all over the habitable globe should rejoice and be exceeding glad—for a new label has appeared.
It is a large black and yellow affair and it bears the legend "Passenger to Stratford-on-Avon by Shakespeare Express;" moreover it carries a portrait inset of the Bard of Avon. And the Great Western Railway will supply it free, gratis, and for nothing* to all travellers to Stratford.

The only persons likely to complain of unfair competition on the part of the railway company are those mysterious people who lurk in little travelling-bag shops around the main London termini.
Many of these establishments do a good trade in labels. Here you may obtain a selection of suitable travel-stained tabs—with or without bags—if you have no objection to others supposing that you have sojourned in far countries, that you have been in Kamtschatka of Timbuctoo, China or Chicago.

There is a regular tariff for these things for a price, not too modest, and I could in half an hour secure a travelling kit plastered with indications (however misleading) that I have been in the uttermost parts of the earth.
