HESITATION
Chapter 56

At some time or other we all have to stop and think where we are drifting. I thought of it often enough at the winter days went by, and as the eternal empty round of social frivolity little by little dragged down my vitality.

Win and I were nominally living together. Actually we had drifted far apart as two people can—and still be together day in and day out in a five-room apartment.

It finally reached the state where we went out very little together. I tried to accept Gwendolyn's invitations. I tried to have her and the people she fancied at my own home—and gave it up at last as impossible.

Her attitude changed I think in response to my own. Gwen was the sort who must surround herself with people. She rarely had less than a dozen in the room with her. She might dislike me intensely—as I think she did—but it would make no difference to her because my company was so to speak, diluted by that of so many others. She had about her a great many people she did not like and a great many that merely bored her but it never mattered because there were always so many others.

So she simply asked Win without me finally—an arrangement I found much easier. Here big affairs were different. I was asked to these and accepted and we were very charming to each other. That social duty never began to ignore each other again. Win was asked, and went, to her intimate teas and dinners.

The comments about this, when it began to get out and to be talked about it, were very odd—and interesting later when I took a less personal view of the whole thing.

"I'm glad you've ceased to be such a little clinging vine," my father said once. "I was back from a run through the South and was already restlessly planning to go abroad. But he was staying in the city for a month and was often at my place afterwards.

"I met Winthrop at Gwen's," he went on. "Fascinating woman. I suppose that's why the other women do not like her. Evidently you don't, since I've been there four times and haven't seen you. Did you drop her or did she drop you?"

"It was mutual," I answered coolly. "We have nothing in common."

"Nothing but Win," he remarked, then laughed lightly. "You seem to have him in common."

I made no retort. Later Aunt Harriet was with me, one stormy afternoon when I was staying indoors with a heavy cold.

"All the town talks of Win's devotion to Gwen," she remarked. "I'm

That Gleaming Hair Comes From Using Olive Oil Shampoo

Today you see beautiful hair everywhere. Hair that gleams. Women who have it have learned an important secret. They use the famous olive oil shampoo. Hair experts say that hair should never be washed without olive oil in the shampoo. For they say that dry, brittle hair results. And dull hair is never beautiful. Now you can have the olive oil shampoo in its most delightful form. Cheaply, at home. Just get a bottle of PALM-OLIVE SHAMPOO. At any drug store or department store. It quickly brings back the lovely sheen to your hair. Leaves it beautifully soft and glossy. You will marvel at the improvement!

broad minded. I don't believe in a woman tying a man to her apron strings merely because she has married him. But really, you know Win is carrying this too far. It's not only Gwen, but he's constantly with Polly Squire and with Diana Felton."

"Is he?" I asked indifferently. "Well, they're both nice enough—if one likes their type. I don't."

"Nor I," replied my aunt. "As I said I'm very broad minded about these things, but after all there's a certain good taste to be displayed. However, I must say, Constance, I'm inclined to blame you. If a woman can't hold her husband's affection more than a year and a half—"

"Father seems to think it's quite the proper thing for Win to run all over the town with every other woman," I answered cheerfully.

"Your father!" Aunt Harriet was roused at once, all the old opposition came out at once. Aunt Harriet switched to my side immediately. I could have said nothing more effective to bring her around to my defence.

But it was Colin, after all, with whom I really discussed the great problem that confronted me.

Colin was in every day, either for tea or for the evening. When I chose to stay in and dine, he came at my phone call his quiet, humorous talk acting like a tonic to my nerves.

And the rare days when he did not appear were blanks. It did not matter whether it was only a meeting among a party of friends at some big house, it was simply his presence, the sense of his sympathy that kept me going.

"I asked you once what I was going to do about all this," I said one afternoon. It was late in the winter and the sun came warily through the windows of the apartment though the streets were covered with slush and melting snow.

"I remember. I didn't help you," he answered lighting a cigarette by slipping the end of a long piece of paper between the logs of my blazing fire, and using its flame. The glare of the flame threw into relief his ugly profile, his wide mouth his brilliant red hair. It was always odd that so ugly a man could be so beautiful.

"I know what I'm going to do now," I answered. "I'm going to leave Win."

He was stirred for once from the little cloak of composure that completely covered him always. He straightened up from his hunched position in the low chair. He threw his newly lit cigarette into the fire and turned to stare at me.

"That is—I think—I think I am," he said. "Tell me about it. Connie. Things usually aren't so bad you know after all. Win is pretty young, and he really is very fond of you—"

"Fond won't do—he's fond of others too. I can't quite make up my mind. I'm miserable staying here. I'd be as miserable more so, away. But I think—Colin I with I could make up my mind. I can't go on with this."

MANY RAILROAD MEN HAVE ENDORSED TANLAC

MEN WHO SIT AT THE THROTTLE AND WHO PILOT BIG TRAINS MUST HAVE STEADY NERVES, CLEAR BRAINS AND GOOD HEALTH. TANLAC HAS WON THE PRAISE OF MANY PROMINENT RAILROAD MEN OVER THE COUNTRY FOR ITS REMARKABLE RECONSTRUCTIVE POWERS.

No calling demands a clearer brain, steadier nerves nor a more perfect state of health than that of the railroad employe. The lives of thousands of passengers depends on the man who sits at the throttle, on the man in charge of the train, on the men who keep up the roadbed, and repair the tracks, and on the man in the signal tower and at the dispatcher's key.

A railroad man cannot afford to make a mistake. He cannot "take a chance." He must be on the job every minute of his watch every day in the year. There is no profession where the training is any more highly specialized and where good health and co-ordination of mind and body are any more essential.

Thousands of men who contribute their important part to the daily task of operating our railroads have found that by taking Tanlac they can tone up their systems, offset indigestion caused often by "Grabbing a snack to eat wherever they can," and avoid that general run-down condition that so many are heir to.

Railroad men in every section have testified that Tanlac has helped them maintain their good health and in many instances regain it.

Following are a few testimonials from the files of the company:

RESULTS ARE LASTING
DECLARES C. P. MAN

"Three years ago I was about on my last legs and going down hill so fast I thought nothing would stop me," states Fred Hill, 349 Thames St., London, Ont., well known mechanic of the Canadian Pacific. "I could never eat more than two light meals a day, because of indigestion; my nerves were a wreck, every bone in my body seemed to ache, I couldn't sleep and felt sick and tired all over. Tanlac soon fixed me up so I could eat anything and my other troubles vanished like smoke. I gained twelve pounds and have felt fine ever since."

Tanlac is sold by all good druggists. Take no substitute. Over 37 million bottles sold.

"Tanlac Vegetable Pills are Nature's own remedy for constipation. Sold everywhere."

EXPRESS MESSENGER SAYS
TANLAC IS A FINE THING

"I had been in bad shape for several years before I got Tanlac," says Wm. P. Gilchrist, express messenger between Vancouver and Nelson, B. C., and who resides at 1559 Parker St., Vancouver. "I suffered all the time from indigestion, nausea, constipation, headaches, biliousness and a tired-out feeling that always made me feel unfit for work. When I began taking Tanlac my troubles disappeared so fast it was amazing. You can mark my O. K. on Tanlac every time."

SIXTY-THREE YEARS OLD,
HOLDS OWN WITH BEST

"I am now sixty-three, but when it comes to work I can hold my own with anybody at his shop, and nothing but Tanlac has given me this fine endurance," declared Rensselaer, N. Y., a well-known Allen J. Briggs, 92 Lansing Place, machinist at the B. & A. shops.

"For a year before I got Tanlac I suffered from stomach trouble, was badly run down, and my kidneys also bothered me a great deal. The pains in my back and stomach were awful, and I often wonder now how I stood it all. I was afraid to eat, because I knew how I would suffer afterwards, with gas bloating and heartburn, and was so unstrung I couldn't get a good night's sleep.

"But Tanlac did me more good in six weeks than everything else I took in a year. My appetite is a wonder, my digestion perfect, I sleep like a top and haven't an ache or pain. I'm always ready to talk Tanlac."

OLD TIME ENGINEER
GAINS 17 POUNDS

Oran Denne, 83 Forest Ave., St. Thomas, Ont., who wears a gold medal given him by the Michigan Central R. R. in recognition of his forty years' service at the throttle of a locomotive on that railroad, says:

"I was all run down, had indigestion so bad I couldn't eat and was too nervous and miserable to sleep. I lost weight rapidly and got so weak I could not work. A trip out West failed to help me and I thought I was about done. My sister got me to take Tanlac and in seven weeks I gained seventeen pounds and returned to work in as good health as any man in St. Thomas."

Railroad Man Out
With More Facts

Tanlac Made Clean Sweep of Troubles and He Feels Like a New Man, States Barrowcliff.

"If any of my family were sick with stomach trouble or run-down condition, I would rather have one bottle of Tanlac than all the other medicines put together," is the positive statement of F. A. Barrowcliff, 8 Locomotive St., Hamilton, Ont., well known yardman for the Grand Trunk Railroad.

"My wife's health was restored by the Tanlac treatment in such short order it was astonishing, for she suffered so terribly with nervousness, headaches, sleeplessness and loss of appetite that I thought she would break down completely. She went meal after meal without eating, and was so feebly weak the care of our five children and the housework was more than she could do.

"After her first few doses of Tanlac my wife was like an entirely different person, and hasn't had a sick spell since she quit taking the medicine six months ago. Tanlac has certainly been a blessing in our house, and we are glad to recommend it."

BLANCHARD SAYS TANLAC
KEPT HIM ON JOB

"It is all due to Tanlac that I am able to be on the job today," states Harold Blanchard, 330 Donald St., Winnipeg, well-known trainman on the Canadian National Railway. "I had stomach trouble so bad I was just about past going and my heart used to pound so I thought I had heart trouble. My kidneys had also been bothering me for several years and there was a severe pain in the small of my back. I felt miserable all the time.

"The results I got from Tanlac were simply remarkable. I am now as strong and well as ever in my life."

WHOLE SYSTEM IMPROVED,
STATES SMITH

Roy Smith, popular Canadian Pacific R. R. man residing at Bowdary, Man., says: "Tanlac not only rid me of a severe case of stomach trouble and sleeplessness of two years' standing, but put me in such fine condition generally I am feeling tip-top in every way. I am always glad to say a good word for it."
