EASTERN ITEMS—The continued wet weather though good for the grass crops is very favorable to the weeds. It likewise retards the operations of the industrious potato bug, who wants heat to supply his wings for flight to new fields and suitable pastures.—Dominion Day has come and gone, and was honored in different ways by different parties. The principal stores in Souris were closed, and many of the bloods with their lady friends sought the seclusion and beauty of our country roads in different directions. A picnic at Gowan Brae attracted some, and a picnic at the beautiful West River sand hills attracted others, though the showers of the morning and the threatening appearance of the day rendered the roads unpleasant. The sand hills of West River are certainly an ideal spot for such a gathering. Its irregular dunes, its sylvan groves, its beautiful beach of clearest sand incessantly pounded by old ocean, its fishing villages, and the beautiful river running inside, where successive generations swam and sailed and scattered, some to achieve distinction, some to mingle with the world, and get lost, some to fill unknown graves in distant lands, and some to fill a watery grave. The gallantry of the men and the attractiveness of the ladies at the party this year fully sustained the high standard attained by parties here in former years.—There are still some codfish caught along the south side, though bait is getting scarce and fish are getting far off for the dories which the fisherman here use. On the north side codfish continue the whole summer season. Lobstering is drawing to a close and the results far from satisfactory.—The advanced guard of our summer tourists is here to inhale our balmy breezes, and to enjoy our rural scenes. Mrs Kearney (nee Miss Christiana Robertson) and daughter are visiting the old home. Her sister Alberta, now Mrs Yates and two children, accompanied them, but remained over a few days at Pownal, the native place of her husband. Miss Leah Bruce is also home on a visit and many more are to follow. We give them a cordial welcome and hope they will return with sweet memories to the land of their adoption.
