Among the evacuees brought from Spitzbergen by the Canadian units participating in the historic raid on the Arctic Island was a group of 14 Boy Scouts. They were given a warm welcome by Scottish Scouts.

When conferring the degree of LL.D. upon Dr. James E. West, Chief Scout Executive of the Boy Scouts of America, President W. H. Cowley of Hamilton College, Clinton, N. Y., declared that "In every Hamilton class of the last quarter century there have been many who are better men for having been Boy Scouts."

A Chesley, Ont., Boy Scout who had recently passed the tests of the Scout Fireman badge seized the opportunity to practice his knowledge when a fire occurred in a local woollen mill. He entered the building with a mill worker, and manned the plant fire hose. He kept his post until warned away because of signs that the roof and floor were showing signs of falling.

"I want you to know how much I appreciate the fine service rendered by the Boy Scouts of America in the recent Aluminum Campaign. The splendid co-operation of Executives, Scout Leaders and Troops in collecting aluminum for defence purposes has been a major contribution to the success of the campaign. Their generous support of this programme is another evidence of the fine principles and high standards which identify the Boy Scouts."—F. LaGuardia, Mayor.

An appeal for discarded Boy Scout uniforms for newly organized troops of Australian Aboriginal, or native boys, is made in a recent issue of The Victorian Scout. Mention is made of two such units sponsored by the Australian Society for the Uplift of Natives. It is believed the Scout training will provide a ladder for raising the character and abilities of the Aboriginals, long regarded as the world's most primitive human type. The experience with the Scout training so far is regarded as encouraging.

"A good Scout has constant advantages in the army," writes a major who was with the B. E. F. until the French capitulation. "Camping, cooking, first aid, etc., are all of the greatest value, especially now that the air danger makes you choose a hedge rather than a barracks to live in. Map reading, too, and signalling. In fact, the whole issue. A good Scout who knows how to look after himself and others, scores every time."

A small Boy Scout standing in the crowd watching the military units returning from an Armistice Memorial Service at the Cenotaph in Dominion Square, Montreal, last year, gave a striking demonstration of the power of unconscious example. As each colour party passed the Scout came smartly to attention, and saluted. Other small boys standing near him took notice, and began raising their caps. One youngster in his enthusiasm promoted the boy beside him by pulling off his cap as well as his own. A number of men in turn began raising their hats in salute and soon practically every man and boy in the vicinity was following suit.

There have been many stories of the usefulness of Boy Scout training for men in the military services including actual training of Britain's Home Guard units in stalking and camouflage by older Boy Scouts. A new and unexpected application of Scout training has been the use of certain Scouting games for teaching physical poise, control and concentration. A picture in a recent Old Country weekly shows a group of Home Guard's watching a Scout leader demonstrate a game known by Canadian Scouts as "Sleeping Pirate" and by Wolf Cubs as "Creep Mouse." In the game one boy, seated blindfolded, endeavours by listening to discover the approach of another who is attempting, without being heard, to get near enough to snatch an article lying on the ground in front of the blindfolded listener. Says the caption under the Post picture, "In war the object might be a sentry's rifle in the darkness."

Hanson anxious To be released As House Leader

OTTAWA, Nov. 2 —(CP) — The acting Conservative leader, Hon. R. B. Hanson, will urge on the general executive of the dominion Conservative association when it meets here Friday that he is anxious to be relieved of the leadership as soon as a national convention can select a permanent leader.

There has been some talk that the national convention be held in January Mr. Hanson told The Canadian Press but he did not think it would be feasable to hold one before spring.

Mr. Hanson made it clear he was not in the race for the leadership. He is 62 and his health has not been good, "if I were 20 years younger I might view it differently," he said.

Mr. Hanson took over temporary leadership of the Conservative party in May, 1940, after the resignation of Mr. Manion had been accepted. Since then as leader of the official opposition the duties resting on Mr. Hanson have been onerous.

Recently on a visit to the United Kingdom, he contracted a cold and since his return to Canada by bomber his health has been poor.
