The Phone and The Farmer

Mr. Farmer, are you aware that with a pencil and paper it can be proven that the telephone will actually pay for itself over and over again?

For instance, a farmer living about twelve miles from the city called on the contract department the other day and asked for prices. He got the prices and the phone too. He said that he took in a load of pork, when he arrived in the city found that he could get a quarter of a cent per pound more almost at his own door. If he had a phone he could regulate the killing to suit the demand.

Are you aware, Mr. Farmer, that this same thing applies to almost every line of production, besides the incalculable worth of the phone every day of the week and every hour of the day?

Write contract department for prices.
