Lachute, Que. 75th. 1918. Minard's Lintiment Co., Limited. Gentlemen—Ever since coming home from the Boer war I have been bothered with running fever sores on my legs. I tried many salves and liniments; also doctor-ed continually for the blood, but got no permanent relief, till last winter when my mother got me to try MINARD'S LINTIMENT. The effect of which was almost magical. After two bottles the sores completely disappeared and I have worked every working day since Yours gratefully, JOHN WALSH.

JUST A GIRL

BY JANE PHELPS

A GREAT TREAT FOR MARY AND TOM.

Chapter 109.

It was amusing to see Mary's face when we went into the Blackstone. Surprise, amazement, curiosity were so blended that her expression of delight brought a hearty laugh from Tony. "I see you are going to approve my choice of a place to dine, Miss Murphy," he said, as he walked with her, leaving me with Tom—another proof of his kindness of heart, I thought.

"Tom was a bit awkward, but he did not show his feeling as plainly as did Mary. She fairly bubbled. Tony had reserved a table for four, and at Mary's plate and mine were corsage bouquets of lovely rosebuds. Mary looked at me, and when I plinned mine on she did the same, first holding them across to Tom, so he could smell them. "Ain't they lovely?" she said to me.

"Indeed they are." "Do men like him," she glanced at Tony who, busy with the waiter, was paying no attention to her for the moment. "Always buy girls' flowers when they take them out to dinner?" "Ain't they aren't—no, isn't it just grand?" she asked in a stage whisper. Tony heard this time, and replied: "I am glad you're pleased, Miss Murphy."

"Pleased! It is just like I have always thought Heaven would be. Lovely music! Lights, everybody looking happy. It's a mighty good of you, Mr. Deland, to ask Tom and me." "It's a mighty good of Tom and you to come." Tony smiled with a smile. "Here comes the waiter. I have ordered things you like."

"Tony had ordered a very bountiful dinner and had set out the unusual, highly seasoned dishes he usually indulged in. There was thick cream soup, simple fish, young lamb with peas and potatoes, salad, a wonderful dessert, coffee, crackers and cheese—just the kind of a meal a person of simple tastes, unused to a hotel menu, would enjoy. Then he and Tom smoked a good cigar while we talked and listened to the music.

"I never eat so much in all my life at one meal!" Mary said to me. "Neither did I!" Tom agreed. Tony had left us for a moment; someone had called him to the telephone.

It was a nice dinner," I said, then added: "Mr. Deland always knows how to do the right thing." "Do you know, Zena, I think that's what makes him so nice. He just seems to know what Tom and we would enjoy. I'll bet now he would have had a lot of them queer dishes with fancy names if you and him had been alone. But he knew that Tom and me wouldn't like them, because we ain't used to that kind of eating. But it WAS good of him to bring us to this stylish place, plain folks like us."

"You heard what he said, that it was good of you to come, and I agree with him. Sh—s, here he comes now."

"I have secured tickets to a show, hope you haven't seen it," he said as he sat down. We had not, of course and we left at once. He had four seats in the orchestra, near the front of the house. It was a musical comedy and Mary was so delighted that she kept laughing with her quaint remarks. Tom, too, seemed to enjoy every bit of the play. During intermission, Mary whispered:

"Babe's seem to be the part of their bodies women like to show at the theatre, don't they, Zena?" In front of us was a large woman, her very low gown held on by straps of velvet.

"Tony heard and laughed. Afterwards he said it was more at Mary's suggestion than at what she said. Mary was a bit embarrassed and said nothing further about the joy-riding of the women. But her remarks about the play and the characters were really funnier than anything on the stage.

"She's a whole show in herself!" Tony said in an aside to me. "And such a dear!" I replied. "I'll bet she is! no one could help liking her. I made up my mind to repeat that remark to Mary. She was apt to underestimate herself. On our way out I saw Mr. Claxto. He bowed and smiled at me. How happy I was that I had told him of Tony, and that he seemed so friendly. Tomorrow—Mary Keeps Zena Up.

INTERESTING ANNOUNCEMENT

Messrs. W. B. Frowse and D. A. MacKinnon proprietors of the Vimy Fox Ranch, Norwood Road near Charlottetown, P. E. I. are prepared to sell a limited number of foxes and ranch them for parties if they so desire. The Vimy Fox Ranch was established in the fall of 1919 and has 39 pairs of foxes 27 of which are owned by Messrs Frowse & MacKinnon and the balance are boarders. The ranch has been under the management of Mr. Fred Andrews and has been one of the most successful in the province this year. The 39 pairs have today 97 living pups or an average of 2.5 to the pair. This we think will compare favorably with any ranch in the province having strictly 1919 pups. The policy of the management was to select the very best foxes that money could buy and feed the very best food. Results have justified this course. The number of pairs can be reached will be limited to fifteen so parties who desire to take advantage of this should apply early. 1921.

Hints for the Motorist

BY ALBERT L. CLOUGH

LOWERING COMPRESSION TO REDUCE KNOCKING

A Drastic Expedient. But Sometimes Permissible.

In order to avoid detonation and also to reduce the liability to pre-ignition and knocks due to it, it is becoming quite common practice to slightly reduce the compression which is done by enlarging the clearance space between the piston-head and cylinder-head by inserting a shim or liner between the crank case and the cylinder-block, thus raising the latter, by using a thick gasket of several gaskets between the cylinder block and head, by the use of chambered out caps over the valves or by employing pistons that are somewhat shorter above the wrist pins. Some car builders have brought out such parts for application to their engines. Reducing compression is a well known expedient to reduce the output and economy of engines, but it may be warranted if it eliminates knocking, enables an engine to be operated satisfactorily for longer periods between cleanings, and permits running at full throttle. It may go with a trial by those motorists whose engines have a fuel knock, even when clean, or which acquire a knock with a few hundred or a thousand miles later being decarbonized. The real remedy for which all motorists may devoutly pray, is an improvement in fuel, by which its chemical instability and readiness to detonate and self-ignite may be removed. Already, something is known as to how to accomplish this, by the addition of certain substances and the chemical modification of existing constituents and the outlook is far from unfavorable. It is also believed that anything that increases the rate of combustion, due to a secondary explosion or detonation, such as a greater mixing action or turbulence of the entering charge and experimental work is being done along this line.

CAT WAS MEANS OF RECOVERY OF DYES

NEWARK, N. J., September 10.—Methods attributed to the scientific detective in modern tales of mystery as applied to chemical analysis of orange-colored spots on a water-front cat, brought recovery of $300,000 worth of stolen German dyes and the arrest of 17 men. The United States Department of Justice Bureau here announced today.

Government sleuths engaged to solve the mystery of who held up watchmen at a state department warehouse in Hoboken, where six thousands pounds of German dyes were being held, and carted the dye stuff away in motor trucks, had been at work on the case for weeks. Suddenly attention was attracted by the strange orange color of spots on a wharf cat.

Following what amounted to an inspiration, a department of justice agent caught the cat and took it to a chemist, where its orange hair was analyzed, with the discovery, it was stated, that German dyes were responsible for its unique color.

The cat was then released and shadowed. Its "home" was said to have been located in a house on River Street, Hoboken. This house was watched for a long time. Last week, as a result of shadowing visitors to the River Street house, department of justice agents said they had recovered 3,000 pounds of the stolen dyes on a motor truck in Paterson, and 3,000 pounds more in a Brooklyn warehouse. Arrests followed by twos and threes almost immediately afterwards, it was stated.

It is also suitable for farmers of any age who have not had the opportunity of taking a course of this kind. It covers two winter periods of 20 weeks each, so that there will be very little interference with farm operations. At a later date it is the intention of the Government to establish courses in business, steam engineering, home-making (for girls) etc. The course is intensely practical in character and has been formulated to reach the following objectives: 1. To give the largest amount of information and training in practical farming in the shortest possible time. 2. To teach the farmer how to solve his own problems and increase his net returns. 3. To unfold to him the many opportunities on the farm and the possibilities of rural life. 4. To fit him for the filling of a more useful place in the social and economic life of the community. The subjects taken up in this course are as follows:—Farm animals, Crops and Fertilizers, Farm Machinery and Engineering, Commercial English, Dairying, Farm Management, Civics, Horticulture, Poultry, Commercial Arithmetic, Farm Economics, Woodworking and Blacksmithing.
